NO MUMPS VACCINE FOR B.C.

The provincial government, which now provides immunization for the two types of measles, won't be buying a new three-in-one vaccine which would also add immunization from mumps.

Dr. A. A. Larsen, director of the provincial health department's division of epidemiology, said today mumps is not seen as a sufficiently significant problem to call for immunization at public expense.

The three-in-one vaccine recently approved by the federal food and drug directorate protects against rubella, rubeola and mumps, the first two being types of measles.

The province now supplies both measles vaccines to children's clinics.

Larsen said triple and double vaccines are expensive. But a double vaccine covering both types of measles is being considered because it could save money in the long run.

The two measles vaccines

currently provided by the province have to be given separately. A double vaccine could be given in one injection and that together with less packaging may make the savings worthwhile.

The province also provides vaccinations for polio, typhoid, diphtheria and rheumatic fever.

A woman found unconscious Wednesday night in a ditch near the Malahat was identified by RCMP today as Dale Cloverdale, 19, of 1026 Pemberton, Victoria.

The girl remains unconscious and in critical condition in Cowichan District Hospital. She was taken there shortly before midnight Wednesday.

Miss Cloverdale carried no identification when she was found, and she was identified only when a friend came forward to police Thursday to report her missing from work.

Investigators still are baffled about the circumstances of the incident. The details as they have them so far:

Miss Cloverdale left work in the Sweet Sixteen shop at the Hillside Shopping Centre, 3176 Shelbourne, at 9 p.m. Wednesday, driving a blue 1964 Ford, licence number AAG-209, owned by her mother, Mrs. Pat Cloverdale of Sidney.

She was spotted unconscious in a ditch on the Shawnigan Lake cutoff, 1½ miles from the Malahat, at 11:15 p.m.

Bruises on the women's face made it difficult to estimate her age, and police at first thought her to be about 14. She was clothed and had not been sexually assaulted.

Ronald Arthur Flewin, 20, a Victoria man with no fixed address, was charged with murder in provincial court today in the stabbing death of a 21-year-old man in a hotel parking lot early Thursday.

Flewin, a short, dark man with shoulder-length hair was remanded to March 3 to fix April 20 for preliminary hearing of the charge.

Prosecutor John Macintyre said the Crown would require "some time" to assemble evidence, including rounding up witnesses to the slaying and searching for the yet unlocated weapon.

Judge William Ostler said a reasonable delay would be justified, because some of the evidence could be expected to be "of a scientific nature," but he agreed with defence counsel Robert Price that the delay should not be an "indeterminate" one.

The preliminary hearing is expected to take two days. Police reports on the events at the main parking lot of the Colony Motor Inn, Douglas and Hillside, show a wild scene involving more than 30 persons preceded the fatal stabbing.

An argument in the hotel beer parlor was continued outside after closing time at 1:30, with half a dozen young men taking part.

At one point before police officers arrived, a car was being driven at high speed in circles around the lot. Then a beer bottle was thrown through the windshield of the swerving car.

Constables Frederick Mills and Robert Blackie were interviewing witnesses to the melee shortly before 2 a.m., with their cruiser parked 50 feet from the hotel door, when Streeter stumbled to the side of the car and collapsed to the pavement.

The victim was pronounced dead from three stab wounds less than half an hour later in hospital.

A young man turned himself in at city police headquarters at 9:30 a.m. Thursday. He and a number of witnesses were interviewed before the non-capital murder charge was laid today.

Bids 'Moderate' For Housing

Three bids totalling $1,070,455 were submitted Thursday for a dispersed rental housing project for low-income families in Saanich.

The proposals have to be studied in detail by the technical committee of the three partners involved — federal provincial and municipal — but Ald. Edith Gunning, chairman of Saanich lands and housing committee, said today she hopes they will prove acceptable.

"I am delighted with the bids," she said. "It looks as if we may have 62 units of attractive housing in a variety of forms, and the prices are fairly moderate."

The scheme, unique in British Columbia, aims to get away from the "ghetto" concept of low-income housing by small, attractive groupings dispersed over a wide area of the municipality.

The specifications called for 60 dwellings of two and three-bedroom units. But Chris

Dowling, manager of Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, said the fact that 62 units have been submitted does not mean that two will have to be cut.

Krieger, Stricker and Company Ltd. submitted two bids — one for 20 units at a cost of $318,600 and the other for 18 units at $303,350.

J. McLaren Construction Ltd. submitted a 20 unit, $379,780 scheme and Victoria Home Builders Association entered a four-unit project at a cost of $68,725.

Requirements were that the proposals should be for 20 units or less, with 75 per cent of the accommodation being two-bedroom units.

The federal and provincial governments will share the capital cost, 75-25, and the operating subsidy will be split 75-25-12½ between Ottawa, B.C. and Saanich.

Rents will be fixed by the B.C. Housing Management Commission which will operate the project.

ALDERMEN BACK NIGHT FERRY

Victoria council Thursday supported a drive by local business and other organizations to get a night ferry route between here and the Lower Mainland.

Council's motion was backed strongly by Ald. Ove Witt, who said citizens should "put a lot of pressure on the government to do something for us."

There are many business and sports organizations, as well as private individuals, who would benefit greatly if the B.C. Ferry service operated a late night crossing.

"This would be very important for the community at large, and particularly for the business community," Witt said.

Ald. Mike Young said he understands the CPR is planning to start a night freight route between Victoria and Vancouver. Any such route should be on the public ferry service, he said.

Timber Land Subdivision Called Unfair

MacMillan Bloedel's plan to sell as real estate tracts of land no longer suitable for logging today was called unfair.

Mark Holmes, Capital Regional District director for Salt Spring Island said land bought at low prices for forestry purposes and enjoying a special low tax levy should not be used for land speculation profits.

The plan was announced Thursday by MB board chairman J. V. Glyne, who described the plan as "primarily recreational."

"The owners of these tree farms are enjoying lower taxes than the ordinary holder of land," Holmes said. "It's unfair to permit lower-taxed timber land to be subdivided and to allow the owners to reap enormous capital gains."

He said low-taxed timber land should remain as timber land because it was acquired for that purpose and is taxed on that basis.

Holmes said MB owns about three-quarters of Galiano Island and about 5,000 acres on Salt Spring Island as well as property on other islands.

He said there is no possibility of preserving green belts on the Gulf Islands if the timber lands are used for real estate.

Equal Amount for Greenbelts

He said logging companies have a certain responsibility to the people of British Columbia since the government over the years has leaned over backwards to assist them.

"For example, I'm under the impression that the more land a company has under tree farm licences, the more it receives cutting rights on Crown land."

Elton Anderson, a director of the Federation of B.C. naturalists, said the MB real estate venture will have a profound effect on regional district planning.

"If the company is going to do this, then the government should take out an equal amount of land from Crown forest lands and use it for parks and greenbelts," he said.

The MB venture has also added fuel to the Nitinat controversy, involving Trustat, Squilicum and Hobbitan lakes, the last unspoiled low-level lakes on Vancouver Island.

The National Parks Branch, backed by conservationists and environmentalists, are fighting to save the lakes' watershed from the axe, and to include the 8,000-acre forest area into the Pacific Rim National Park.

MacMillan Bloedel and B.C. Forest Products are opposing the proposal on the grounds that it would mean a loss of forest lands and reduce the flow of fibre to the mills.

Archibald Galbraith, chairman of the Association of Vancouver Island Municipalities, said MB's decision to go into real estate has shot down the argument the Nitinat triangle would mean a serious loss of timber.

"If they are going to use large tracts of their timber farms for real estate, they can hardly argue that they need the timber in the Nitinat triangle," he said.

Trespass Probe Started

By CLEMENT CHAPPEL

The federal department of transport is investigating a possible trespass on federal property by the Princess Patricia apartment development in West Bay.

If the trespass is confirmed, construction of a public walkway along the Victoria waterfront may result.

City officials said the alleged discovery that the Princess Patricia development and a nearby Diamond Developments building have both encroached on federally-owned foreshore could be a bargaining lever with which to open up the waterfront.

DOT officials were not available for comment but city sources confirmed that

DOT is surveying the foreshore.

The Princess Patricia was completed about seven years ago. The Diamond Developments project is under construction.

Encroachment on the foreshore by Diamond Developments first came to light last year midway during construction.

MP David Anderson was promised an investigation by DOT minister Don Jamieson, and Diamond Developments did not deny the charge.

On Thursday, Victoria council received a report from the Victoria Advisory Planning Commission which contained the allegation that the Princess Patricia had also illegally filled in the shoreline.

The VAPC report says: "It appears that a similar trespass took place when the Princess Patricia apartment was built on the adjoining site, and fill appears to have encroached on to the foreshore, again on to lands controlled by the federal Department of Transport."

The APC report adds that "the matter of public access across these parcels is now being explored."

In a report prepared by the city planning department yet to be made public, a waterfront promenade is proposed.

Hope for this promenade was raised when the federal government recently promised to sell the city the Barnard Estate which is the last open piece of natural land in the West Bay area within city boundaries.

Completion of the waterfront promenade would be greatly facilitated by access to the Diamond Developments and Princess Patricia properties.

The VAPC report discusses the foreshore question as a sidelight of its recommendation to refuse a rezoning request on another adjacent property.

West Bay Investments, the company that built the Princess Patricia, had applied to rezone the adjacent property from highrise to ordinary apartment jurisdiction.

The West Bay company is controlled by its parent, Slegg Bros. Lumber Ltd. The Princess Patricia was sold three years ago to Amon Investments, a Vancouver company.

B.C.'s Two-Day Naval Fleet Relieved by Old Rainbow Hand

By PAT DUFOUR

An English octogenarian who was in on the birth pangs of Canada's navy visited CFB Esquimalt on Thursday.

He is John Elliott. He's 81 and still limber enough to scramble down the hatchway of a submarine.

He was aboard the cruiser HMCS Rainbow when she steamed into Esquimalt Harbor Nov. 7, 1910, having left the British port of Portsmouth in August of that year.

He was 19 then, serving as captain's valet to the Royal Navy skipper, Capt. J. D. D. Steward.

On Thursday, he toured the dockyard and was shown over the Canadian submarine that now bears his old ship's name.

This is Elliott's first visit to Victoria since he returned to England in 1915.

His first reaction:

"Oh, my God — look at all those highrises!"

In addition to being present at the birth pangs of Canada's navy, Elliott witnessed one of the most arduous acts of smuggling carried out on this coast.

The contraband goods — two submarines!

This happened at the outbreak of the First World War.

B.C. Premier Richard McBride, concerned over the lack of coastal defences, made a deal with J. V. Paterson of the Seattle Drydock.

They met in secret at the Union Club. McBride wrote a cheque for $1,150,000 and endorsed it.

By doing so, the province then became owner of its own navy — two submarines in the Seattle drydock, built for the Chilean government.

The submarines were up for grabs because Chile had fallen down on the payments.

They were smuggled out of Seattle. If the authorities had known their departure would have been stopped because it meant breaking American neutrality.

Elliott was aboard the sloop HMCS Shearwater that escorted the two submarines back to Esquimalt.

The submarines, named Iquique and Antofagasta, belonged to B.C. for two days.

They were then bought by the Canadian government, serving here for three years before leaving for Halifax and England in 1917.

Elliott will shortly be heading for the Queen Charlotte Islands on the last leg of his pilgrimage into the past.

BCP?

If the federal government abandons the name of the RCMP, British Columbia will create a provincial police force, Attorney-General Leslie Peterson said Thursday.

The surprise announcement brought an immediate and mocking denunciation from Opposition Leader Dave Barrett.

He accused Peterson and Premier Bennett of being "phonies" who removed the Trans-Canada Highway signs to suit their separatist whims and later talk like nationalists for political advantage.

Peterson rose in the legislature after George Mussallem (SC—Dewdney) made an emotional speech criticizing Ottawa for altering RCMP insignia.

Mussallem showed the House a picture in the Victoria Times of the signs on Victoria RCMP cars changed to read only "police."

OUR OWN FORCE

"If they're not going to have a Royal Canadian Mounted Police, then certainly this province is going to go the way other provinces have and that is to have our own provincial police force," Peterson said.

Bennett led strong desk-thumping applause from the government benches after which Barrett jumped up.

"What a bunch of hypocrites we've had dumped on us tonight," Barrett said.

"Will you get up on your feet and say you're opposed to the Trans-Canada Highway?" he asked Mussallem.

Barrett was referring to the government's removal of Trans-Canada Highway signs last fall and their replacement with signs saying B.C. 1.

"That's the most hypocritical statement I've ever heard from that member in this house and also the most hypocritical by the attorney-general."

SHOUTING MATCH

Not only are the highway signs being replaced, he said, but the government intends to challenge the system of equalization payments, he said.

"Now we're going to have a British Columbia police force."

"No, a Royal British Columbia Police force," Peterson shot back.

"Oh, you're phonies. You're a bunch of phonies, that's what you are," Barrett said.

Nimsick Suspended
In 'Showdown Sitting'

By BRUCE YEMEN and PETER McNELLY

A bleary Legislature strained to the end of a record-breaking 16-hour and 33-minute sitting at 12:33 p.m. today after a marathon showdown over the government's unlimited power to drive the house into exhausted submission.

One veteran New Democrat MLA was "named" and suspended from the house until next Tuesday and closure was almost imposed in a short-lived compromise effort which back-fired in the face of Oak Bay MLA Scott Wallace.

Twelve opposition attempts to adjourn the debate went down to defeat as the combined NDP, Liberal and Progressive Conservative forces battled the Social Credit government in a gruelling sitting that began at 8 p.m.

Refused to Sit Down

It took 18 hours and 18 minutes for the $39.8 million in attorney-general department spending estimates to get house approval. Debate began at 4:15 p.m. Thursday.

Leg Nimsick (NDP—Kootenay) was named by supply committee chairman Herb Bruch (SC—Esquimalt) at 3:40 a.m. when he refused to sit down and stop arguing furiously against Premier Bennett's insistence on approval of Attorney-General Leslie Peterson's spending estimates.

The longest previous sitting of the B.C. legislature lasted 13 hours and 15 minutes from 8:30 p.m. to 9:45 a.m. on April 29-30 1902. The Vancouver Island legislative council had a 24-hour sitting in 1866 before the province of British Columbia was established.

Proposed "deals" between the parties to end the deadlock failed during the long night as opposition forces stuck to their guns, sharing speaking duties among each other. Only a few Socialists took part in the debate.

The 64-year-old Nimsick shares with the 71-year-old Bennett the title of longest consecutive service MLA. Both were elected in 1949, but Bennett had served in the house earlier.

The premier spent little time in the house through the night but was called back frequently for adjournment votes. He looked weary, as did most MLAs.

Debate 'Breaks Down'

At 11:30 p.m., Barrett moved adjournment of the debate for the first time. He said adjournment was necessary to keep the MLAs from getting bitter by staying up too late.

"We'll get the boss up," he said, after making the motion and referring to Bennett who usually sleeps in his office during night sittings.

Barrett's motion failed, then he said:

"The tone of this house is set by the government and we've done enough damage to the reputation of this house earlier this week."

He asked Bennett to reconsider. Bennett would not. Barrett became angry.

"I'm a little tired of getting this system rammed down our

WOMAN'S CAR FOUND

Police investigators today discovered the car of a 19-year-old woman found unconscious and seriously injured in a ditch near the Malahat Wednesday night.

An RCMP spokesman said the car was parked in the Shelbourne area. The woman, Dale Cloverdale, of 1026 Pemberton, worked at Sweet Sixteen in the Hillside Shopping Centre.

Police also said reports from Cowichan District Hospital, where Miss Cloverdale remains unconscious and in critical condition, are that the woman's injuries are "consistent" with her being struck by a car.

OTTAWA (CP) — The government was asked today to have police investigate rumors that fugitive wife-strangler Yves Geoffroy may have left the country with as much as $100,000 in cash from property sales made while he was serving a life sentence in prison.

Punitive Raid

BEIRUT (UPI) — Strong Israeli air and ground forces struck today into Lebanon along a 60-mile front to within 34 miles of Beirut in a major seek-and-destroy mission against Arab guerrilla bases. Arab and Israeli military sources called it one of the heaviest punitive raids since the 1967 war.

N. Ireland Minister Shot

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — John Taylor, Northern Ireland home affairs minister, was shot and wounded by gunmen in the All-Ireland ecclesiastical capital of Armagh today, officials reported.

First reports said he suffered head wounds but was still alive when admitted to hospital.

Taylor, in his mid-30s, is the first member of Prime Minister Brian Faulkner's cabinet to come under assassination attempt since the outlawed Irish Republican Army opened its present campaign to unite the North with the neighboring Irish Republic.

In Coleraine, Northern Ireland witnesses told an official inquiry Thursday of seeing British paratroops shoot down fleeing demonstrators during the Jan. 30 Londonderry rioting that resulted in the deaths of 13 civilians.

One of the witnesses, a Roman Catholic priest, said he saw a single demonstrator fire two or three shots at soldiers from a hand gun. But he disappeared before troops returned fire.

Other witnesses made no mention of any shooting on the part of civilians, who were engaged in an illegal civil rights march when troops broke it up.

The inquiry established by the British government is being conducted by Lord Wid-gery, chief justice of England. It entered its fifth day today and is expected to continue for some weeks in this village 35 miles from Londonderry.

James Chapman, an English civil servant with the defence ministry and a former regimental sergeant-major in the British Army, testified Thursday he saw paratroopers shoot into a crowd of between 150 and 500 persons scrambling away from the soldiers over a rubble barricade in the Bogside district.

Watching from the window of his home, Chapman said, he saw eight armored vehicles sweep into Rossville Street and between 50 and 100 soldiers dismount.

"Almost immediately they assumed firing positions. . . . They fired immediately into the crowd who were trying to cross the barricades less than 50 feet away. . . . I saw three bodies fall."

Ronald Wood, a Londonderry postman and also an Englishman, said he saw a man "gunned down."

"He was facing a soldier and he was hit in the front. He had not fired any shot and had not thrown any bomb."

Rev. Edward Daly, a Roman Catholic curate, said he saw two young men shot. The priest had been running with the crowd as the paratroopers

'B.C. CAN DICTATE
OVER IMPORTS'

VANCOUVER (CP) — The power of the provincial legislature is supreme and it can "dictate" what products come into the province, Lloyd McKenzie, a Victoria lawyer, told British Columbia Supreme Court Justice E. E. Hinkson today.

McKenzie said simply because a product is an article of commerce doesn't necessarily mean it has to pass unrestricted into the province.

He was continuing his argument on behalf of Attorney-General Leslie Peterson, the defendant in a test case challenging the validity of legislation passed last year banning the advertising of tobacco and alcohol in the province. See earlier story Page 39.

'Berserk' Mob
Raids UIC Office

BATHURST, N.B. (CP) — Police reinforcements stood by today in the wake of Thursday's battle between demonstrators and police at the local office of the federal Unemployment Insurance Commission. The demonstrators were gone, however, and the streets of this northern New Brunswick city were quiet.

A crowd estimated by organizers at about 1,000 held a preliminary meeting at Bathurst College, some travelling up to 125 miles to participate, and city police chief J. J.

O'Neill said about 500 continued on to the UIC office.

The staff was evacuated and the building locked before the group arrived. Police were standing guard inside.

"We were completely unprepared for what happened," said Chief O'Neill. "... They just went berserk."

He said police had gone out of their way to direct traffic as the demonstrators marched through the town and had expected a peaceful demonstration.

No arrests were made as the protesters scuffled with police and smashed glass doors at both the front and rear of the building but the chief said he was "quite certain" charges would be laid. "We recognized some of them."

He said one RCMP officer had his nose broken in the melee and another officer had "the boots" put to him by the crowd after he was pulled outside the office.

The commission said the office will be closed today and only male employees will report for work. Files will be guarded around the clock by RCMP, it added.

Hijackers Get $5M

BONN (AP) — Transport Minister Georg Leber announced today the West German government paid a ransom of $5 million to obtain the release of a hijacked Lufthansa jumbo jet and its 14 crew members.

Leber told a news conference that a Lufthansa security official carried out the detailed terms for the payment of the money to members of an Arab guerrilla organization in Beirut, Lebanon.

He said the money was handed over at 7 a.m. EST

Wednesday about 30 miles from Beirut airport, several hours after a deadline given by the hijackers for exploding the aircraft and its crew.

"It was like a perfect thriller plot," Leber said.

He said the $5 million ransom was the only demand made by the five hijackers, whom he described as members of an organization called the Victims of Zionist Occupation, a "daughter organization" of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine.

IN TOTS' PLAYGROUND

NUNEATON, England (UPI) — Police said 36 drums of cyanide found dumped on a children's playground contained enough poison to kill millions of Britons.

"Scores of children play on the site," a police spokesman in Nuneaton, outside Birmingham said Thursday. "There was some leakage from some of the canisters and if a child had touched it and put his fingers to his mouth it could have been fatal."

The police said children found the drums Thursday in a disused brickyard used mostly as a playground.

Police put a guard on the site and began an investigation to find out who left the drums.

"A dangerous feature of this deliberate dumping was that some of the drums had been clearly marked in paint with the words 'poison' or 'cyanide' and a deliberate attempt had been made to erase these words," one police officer said.

"To dump it this way is a diabolical action," chemist John Cope said. "There is enough here to wipe out the entire population of the midlands."

Chou Pledges Friendship

PEKING (UPI) — Chou En-lai has pledged after four days of intensive summit talks with President Nixon to "work unswervingly" to promote friendship and normalization of relations with the United States.

Nixon, noticeably fatigued and somber, said in a banquet toast a few hours after the latest meeting with Chou that he hoped "peace and harmony can be the destiny of our two peoples."

Nixon expressed hope during his remarks, at the banquet he hosted in the Great Hall of the People, for "a new world order in which nations of people with different systems and different values can live together in peace . . . letting history rather than the battlefield be the judge of their different ideas."

The president told Chou and the other 500 guests: "We began our talks recognizing that we have great differences. But we are determined that those differences not prevent us from living together in peace."

In response, Chou agreed with Nixon there are wide differences between the two systems of government but declared:

"It is the common desire of the Chinese and American people to enhance their mutual understanding and friendship and promote the normalization of relations between China and the United States."

"The Chinese government and people will work unswervingly toward this goal."

Neither Nixon nor Chou provided any clue to any agreements that may have been reached during Nixon's unprecedented visit to China.

But it was known that agreement in principle has been reached on a greater exchange of persons such as students, newsmen and scholars, increased trade and some form of diplomatic communication in the future, short of full formal relations.

These details, filtered through an extraordinarily tight lid of secrecy that both sides placed on the summit talks. The news blackout on the part of Nixon's official White House party was considered unparalleled in recent presidential history as far as international meetings were concerned.

It has been presumed that a formal communique would be issued at the conclusion of the discussions. But there still was no word tonight — less than 12 hours before Nixon leaves the Chinese capital — when and if a statement would be forthcoming.

Dictator, Dictator, Yells NDP's Barrett

"The only way you can justify it, is that it is the action of an old bull."

The incidents leading up to Nimsick being named began at 3:30 a.m. when the NDP whip stood to address Bennett.

"As whip of the opposition I would like to say a few words to the premier. The premier asked us to negotiate at 3:30 a.m. He didn't have the courage or decency to call for negotiations at 11:30 p.m. Now he does it at 3:30 in the morning."

CONTEMPT

"He shows contempt for the people of British Columbia. He wanted to show he was boss of the house."

Chairman Herb Bruch was standing while Nimsick was shouting at Bennett.

"Two members cannot be standing at the same time," Bruch said.

"Then why don't you sit down?" Nimsick shouted.

"Cheap commie tactics," shouted Labor Minister James Chabot.

"Get yourself a new pair of jackboots," shouted Ernie Hall (NDP-Surrey).

"I order the member to be seated," Bruch told Nimsick.

"I'm not threatening the chair at all, I'm trying to fight for the people of British Columbia," Nimsick said.

"Dictator, dictator, dictator," Barrett shouted at Bennett over the hassle between Nimsick and Bruch.

"Tell the people of British Columbia how you operate at three o'clock in the morning," Nimsick yelled at the premier.

NAMED

"This is not the way to operate the legislature of British Columbia," Nimsick continued. He had been shouting continuously for nearly 10 minutes.

"I ask the honorable member to withdraw from the legislature," Bruch said.

"Why should I withdraw?" Nimsick said.

Finally, Bruch said, "I name you for refusing to leave the chamber."

Barrett, his voice straining with anger, shouted to Bennett going to the din: "We're not going to be bullied any more by you, ever, ever."

"Your black morning," said Bob Williams to Bennett.

Nimsick was suspended from the legislature until 2 p.m. Feb. 29 on the motion of Education Minister Donald Brothers seconded by Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell.

The motion carried by a vote of 30 to 15 at 3:40 a.m. All opposition members voted against the government.

Speaker William Murray said to the NDP member who had sat continuously in the house since 1949, the longest of any MLA sitting:

"Mr. Nimsick, will you leave the chamber?"

"I'll do it on behalf of the people of British Columbia," Nimsick said.

"He can take his hammer and sickle with him," said John Tisdale (SC-Saanich and the Islands).

RECESS

Wallace made his motion to have the question put after a 10-minute recess in which the New Democrats had turned down an unspecified "deal" with the government.

"We can make no deals,"

Barrett announced in the house. "You're the house leader," he told Bennett. "You determine what's done."

Wallace was then recognized by the chair and said that it appeared the two sides of the house had reached an impasse "by no particular design" and that as the house it wouldn't be out of place for him to move the question now be put.

A confusing procedural fight then erupted, with Barrett claiming the motion was out of order because there had been no seconder.

On checking the "house rules," he agreed no seconder was needed but pointed out that such a motion must not "infringe the rights of the minority" in the judgment of the chairman.

Noting a substantial number of MLAs were still attempting to speak, Barrett said such a motion would in fact infringe those rights.

As Bruch appeared to be moving to a vote on the Wallace motion, Liberal Leader Pat McGeer shouted that a "deal" to bring closure in the house would be a "disgrace to the democratic process."

Wallace then rose to "categorically and completely deny" that there was any deal with the government.

WITHDRAW

After more confusion, Wallace rose again to say: "I thought I was helping... in light of the reaction, I withdraw my motion."

Bruch, after a delay, denied opposition charges that Wallace's motion was out of order and added that unanimous consent of the house was needed for a motion to be withdrawn.

Barrett, meanwhile, had challenged Bruch's original ruling by saying that minority rights would be infringed if the closure question was put.

Bruch finally called a five-minute recess which extended to 30 minutes. "When the house resumed, he ruled the motion in order, couldn't be withdrawn but wouldn't be accepted because it might infringe on minority rights."

Bennett then left the house just before 7 a.m. and was driven home by his deputy Lawrie Wallace. He returned at 9:15 a.m. and said he'd had a bath and felt fine.

MOVE FAILED

Bennett was greeted with another adjournment motion which failed.

Earlier, Resources Minister Ray Williston accused the opposition of not being prepared for the debate.

"Get up as men and ask what you want to find out and we'll stay here a week or two weeks if you like, but don't kid the public."

"If you've done your homework, get on your feet and ask your questions."

UGLIER

The debate got uglier after that with Chabot saying the NDP was a "bunch of commies," and Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi heaping scorn on the opposition.

"This has been one of the cruelest sham battles I've ever seen on the floor of this house," Gaglardi said.

"That man's an idiot. He's got no right to harangue the house this way," Strachan said.

At 2:40 a.m., Ernie Hall said he didn't like debating serious public issues at that hour. Bill Hartley (NDP-Yale-Lilloet) called out: "It's hard on the premier. It's going to kill the premier."

There was no reaction from the Socreds.

At 4:22 a.m. Bob Williams (NDP-Vancouver East) urged Peterson to "stand up for himself" against the pre-judgment. Williams then moved another adjournment.

Bruch ruled it an abuse of the rules because the committee had "indicated it wishes to continue the debate." The opposition challenged the ruling and another division was held, government voting against adjournment.

Liberal Leader Pat McGeer speaking for the first time in the debate at 4:55 a.m., said it was a "great pity" that the house was sitting at that moment.

"The possibility of rational debate has long since disappeared," he said. "All we are doing is helping to discredit the parliamentary system."

"If that isn't insanity, I don't know what is," he said.

Nothing that legislatures usually sit through the night only in times of "overriding causes," McGeer said. "The great overriding cause, this evening is the mental aberration of the people who run the government."

Liberal Leader Pat McGeer appealed to Peterson at 8:30 a.m. to pull his salary vote back "in the name of commonsense and in the interests of the well being of the members of this house."

McGeer recalled that lengthy night sitting had "led to the death of a member of this house" in previous years, George Hobbs, a New Democrat MLA, died in 1962 not long after being stricken during a long sitting.

McGeer was gavelled down by supply committee chairman Herb Bruch who ordered him to speak to the vote under debate.

The mood of the House, except for the few high-pitched moments, was almost mellow by normal standards as the marathon wore on.

When debate resumed after a recess about 8 a.m., Herb Capozzi (SC - Vancouver Centre) called over to the opposition:

"If you don't quit now, we'll put Tisdale up."

Opposition MLAs regularly go through a mock surrender when John Tisdale (SC - Saanich and the Islands) speaks.

When Frank Calder (NDP - Atlin) rose to speak for the first time shortly after, he said, "I have a few questions for the attorney-general."

"Why?" asked a Socred.

"Because I have to leave for Vancouver at 3 o'clock," replied Calder.

Unlike many legislatures, the B.C. legislature has no night sitting time limit beyond which unanimous consent of the house is needed to continue.

Opposition MLAs have made an annual, unsuccessful attempt to have such a limit to prevent the long night sittings which have become a trademark of B.C. politics—legislation by exhaustion.

Premier Bennett as house leader for the Socreds virtually controls the hours of sitting. Lengthy bitter debates have been used during Bennett's 20-year premiership to break down opposition resistance to controversial legislation.

SAO PAULO FIRE TOLL HITS 16

SAO PAULO, Brazil (UPI) — A floor-by-floor search today of the skeletal remains of a department store-office building uncovered more victims of the fire that totally destroyed the 29-story building.

Discovery of eight more bodies raised the death toll to at least 16 persons.

The fire, worst in Sao Paulo in several decades, was the most spectacular in the city's history with helicopters airlifting at least 350 persons to safety from the roof of the blazing building. At least 400 persons were injured, many of them in serious condition.

... B.C. POLICE?

up on their feet shouting at Barrett. The NDP leader explained he meant only the premier and the attorney-general were phones, not the entire government.

Then he had to withdraw the statement on the order of committee chairman Herb Bruch.

"You can't have it both ways," Barrett was saying when Bennett shouted across the floor.

"Where's your political commitment?" said the premier.

"Well, we have a federal party and we're not ashamed of it. Where's your federal party?" Barrett said.

He said there's nothing wrong with the name RCMP and it should be retained as "part of the tradition of this country." Barrett then told the government it can't have things both ways.

"This government should announce that it has an absolute commitment to Canada—that it will not change the name of the Trans-Canada Highway."

"Will you send a telegram tonight?" Barrett said.

"Not at your request, no," Peterson answered.

Outside the house, Peterson said he had no doubt most of B.C.'s RCMP would join a provincial police force. He refused to answer questions about how much it would cost to run the force, whether Ottawa would pay any money toward it and whether the province could afford its own police.

"You'll have to wait until you take your seat in the house before you can ask those questions," he told the reporter.

While Peterson was speaking in the corridor, Robert Williams (NDP-Vancouver East) walked past saying "Jingo bells, jingo bells."

Under existing agreements, B.C. will pay $10 million in fiscal year 1972-73 for its share of RCMP costs in unorganized territories.

The figure is up dramatically from 1971-72 estimates of $6.98 million for RCMP, Ontario and Quebec are the only provinces with provincial police forces.

B.C. had a provincial police force from 1858 until 1950.

MAYOR LIED—POLICE

MONTREAL (CP) — Two policemen testified today Mayor Jean Drapeau lied to a Quebec Police Commission inquiry when he said he knew nothing of a document allegedly signed by a woman in 1967 and incriminating Montreal Police Chief Jean-Jacques Saulnier.

Lieut. Emile Ducharme and Constable Leo Villeneuve told the inquiry the mayor lied when he said he knew nothing about a declaration by Martha Adams and that it was not among the mayor's documents.

The two policemen said the declaration had been included in a series of documents they gave Mayor Drapeau in May, 1967, and had been discussed during a meeting a year later with the mayor "for about two hours."

RACCOONS GROW FAT and sassy in man's company while many other kinds of wildlife are in full retreat before our species. (Harold Hosford photo)

To Mr. and Mrs. Coon Abandoned Farms Great

Things are bad all over! At least that's the impression you get from current headlines on the state of the world's wildlife.

It seems that on all sides the confrontation between proliferating man and wildlife has reached the point of no return and wild things are coming up losers.

For the most part this is true, but if you dig a little deeper, look behind the headlines, you can find bright spots where, either intentionally or unintentionally, man's alteration of the status quo has benefitted wildlife. While we may not be able to point to all these examples with pride, some of them do give room for hope.

Among those we'd just as soon forget are such wildlife debacles as the intentional introduction of European rabbits to Australia or the now almost world-wide distribution of the Norway Rat, an unintentional result of intercontinental sea commerce.

While you may not agree with the idea that Norway Rats are wildlife, you'd have to accept that, despite their close association with man, they are certainly not domestic animals.

EXAMPLES

To our credit must be listed such wildlife successes as the introduction of species like the pheasant, quail and grey partridge into new areas where they have apparently not disturbed any native species and have become an integral part of the local fauna.

To these examples of the past can now be added, on the unintentional side of the ledger, a recent shift in the range of some animals that resulted from human environmental adjustments and manipulations which, on the surface at least, had little or no relation to wildlife.

A classic illustration of this might be our wheat surplus crisis of the past few years and the accelerating trend to eliminate small farms and consolidate them into larger, more efficient units — two Canadian cultural and economic upheavals that seem as unrelated to wildlife problems as any you could ever choose. Two of the most obvious results of these problems have been millions of bushels of farm-stored grain and thousands of abandoned farm buildings just waiting for occupants.

VACUUM

Since nature is supposed to abhor a vacuum — and piles of food, with first-class accommodation seems about as much of a vacuum as nature could ever tolerate — it was only a matter of time before some wild animal moved in to fill the empty niche. In this case it was the raccoon. It deities that when European man arrived on this continent raccoons were rare animals north of the 49th parallel. Today they have expanded their range at least 300 miles farther and are anything but rare.

More important, much of this expansion, particularly on the prairies, has taken place in the last 20 years and credit for it must go to the two aforementioned problems.

Using wooded river valleys as highways, these nocturnal relatives of bears moved north, spreading into adjacent farmland and finding the good life laid out like a waiting table.

BOUNTIFUL PANTRY

The piles of grain became a bountiful pantry and the attics and lofts of the adjacent buildings became warm dry dens — all the ingredients needed for the raccoons to start their own population explosion. It wasn't long in coming. By 1965 they had become a nuisance in many areas and, in others, a menace to a kind of wildlife held in higher esteem by man, namely waterfowl. The raccoons were apparently spicing their grain diet with duck eggs.

EGGS, GRAIN

Competition was most severe in the pothole country straddling the southern part of the Manitoba-Saskatchewan boundary. Here, where the finest canvasback breeding grounds in North America are delicately woven into one of the most intensively farmed areas of the continent, the raccoons reaped a double harvest — grain in the fall and canvasback eggs in the spring.

So, the reckoning of gains or losses for wildlife isn't as clear as it might be. On the one hand we've given the raccoons an unintentional leg-up; on the other, added to the problems of an already hard-pressed segment of wildlife.

Come to think of it, things really are bad all over.

Expedition to Seek Ancient Civilization

PARIS (Reuters)—A Franco-British expedition, equipped with three mini-hovercraft, leaves for Nepal Saturday to track down an ancient civilization on the roof of the world — the Himalayan Mountain range.

The three-man team, led by 34-year-old French explorer Michel Peissel, plans to use the lightweight hovercrafts—fitted underneath with inflatable rubber skirts—to glide up 600 miles of tortuous Himalayan rivers in search of neolithic cave dwellers.

The three-month expedition will try to see if these caves, dotted along the river banks, will reveal proof of the existence in the fourth century AD of flourishing Himalayan tribes.

In 1964 Peissel discovered 29 such cave sites and with the surface-skimming hovercraft he hopes to penetrate deeper into unexplored areas to throw some light on the early Himalayan settlements. "At last we will be able to determine the exact origin of these mysterious caves," he said in a recent interview.

The British-made hovercraft will be taken through the 3½-mile-high Kali Gandaki gorge in Nepal which is flanked by Mount Annapurna and Mount Dhaulagiri.

The machines are about six feet long, weigh 150 pounds, have a top speed of 40 m.p.h. and a range of 85 miles.

TAX TIPS

Tips for filing your 1971 income tax are provided Times readers in co-operation with the department of national revenue.

For further assistance readers may contact the Victoria district taxation office, Vancouver Street, public information service, at 388-3331.

Q. I support my son who is at university. His income for the year — minus his tuition fees — comes to $980. I am told that when filing my tax return I can apply the notch provision. What does this mean?

A. This means that, in order to claim your son as a dependent, you must add the amount by which his income exceeds $950, in your case $30, to your tax. You will have to use the "detailed tax calculation" method to determine your federal and provincial tax payable and show the $30 as a "tax adjustment" in the space provided.

Q. My wife and I were married in September. She was working before marriage but has not worked since. Can I claim the full married exemption of $1,000 for her? What does she do about filing a return?

A. If she received no income after your marriage, you may claim the full married exemption of $1,000. Otherwise, calculate your exemption taking into account only the income she received after your marriage. If your wife is taxable or had tax deducted from her salary, she must file her own return.

Q. My income is received by way of interest on bonds and from dividends. However I also have rental income from two houses. I feel that I should be permitted to contribute to the Canada Pension Plan on this income.

A. No. You cannot contribute to this type of income. Contributions to the Canada Pension Plan are based on the amount of money you earn either as an employee, or as a self-employed person. Contributions based on investment or rental income, may not be made.

It's a Long Road That Has . . .

One of the worst double crosses that the Social Credit provincial government ever pulled on the Greater Victoria community was the conscienceless abandonment of the intended Blanshard Street extension to connect with the Pat Bay Highway. The need for a second major route into and out of the city centre was obvious a decade ago, and it grows more evident each year as Douglas Street becomes increasingly congested. It can be only a short time before that condition becomes a serious impediment to the northern traffic of the city.

With the growing need in mind, and with the full knowledge of the government, Victoria planned and constructed the Blanshard Street improvement, whereby Rose and Blanshard Streets were connected, the thoroughfare widened to six lanes, and the city end of the proposed arterial link completed. At that point the provincial government — although it had long had unpublished plans for the northern extension of the job into Saanich, providing the essential connection with the Pat Bay Highway — suddenly reversed itself, abandoned the whole project and refused to give a reason.

The city was left with a half-million-dollar improvement to a major thoroughfare that went nowhere. To this day it ends abruptly at Tolmie Avenue, on the Saanich border, and except for a sharp left turn back into the Douglas Street traffic stream, offers access only to minor residential streets in the area.

The government's abrupt action was crude and unpardonable. It has remained silent on its reasons and its plans, if any, and left both Saanich and Victoria to feel their way forward on a trial and error basis so far as use of land in the area is concerned.

If the government as a whole has been mum, it hasn't been any more silent than Victoria's two representatives in the Social Credit government, and Saanich's single anti-evolutionary voice. These political gentlemen — two of them cabinet ministers — have done nothing at all to help out their constituents in this costly problem, by advice, influence, or, apparently, a moment's thought. They have been worse dead ends than Blanshard Street.

The whole matter has come to prominence again with the action of Saanich in preparing to sell a plot of land which would lie on the approximate route of the northern extension if it were to be made. But the provincial highways department, by earlier approving at least four rezoning applications on the presumed route, has indicated in its contemptuous way that the route is no longer part of its plans.

The whole series of events has been a classic example of the Social Credit government's philosophy that you don't have to tell the peasants anything so long as you keep them believing that they have no debt, that Socialism is being held at bay, and that everything is going fine. Some day the peasants will realize what it has cost them, not only in money but in the loss of democratic values, to keep Mr. Bennett and his assorted statesmen in office for twenty years. It should be an interesting time, which some in the government already foresee.

Final Judgment

In human terms, the report of his funeral, and the words of his daughter, the sole mourner, add a pathetic epilogue to the life story of Walter Winchell. He died, she said, "technically of cancer, but actually of a broken heart."

Walter Winchell, in his heyday, claimed a tremendous audience for his personalized newscasts. A self-appointed critic, he sat in judgment on the foibles of his fellow-men.

His nasal, staccato: "Mr. and Mrs. America . . . let's go to press" drew countless listeners to their radios. From Winchell, the public of this continent heard snippets on the mistakes and offences of people, exalted and humble, presented with the appeal of the lowest common denominator. His specialized technique and his organization brought the voice transient fame and fortune.

From the pinnacle of his type of success, Walter Winchell slipped into relative and then almost total obscurity. The public ceased to listen. His influence leaked away. Finally, at the casket knelt his daughter, accompanied by a rabbi.

The public's final judgment may have reflected the insensitivity it had learned from the man whose program promoted a hand lotion.

"... this is your cell . . . and here's your cup, towel, bar of soap and passport application form . . ."

HAROLD GREER

Watching the B.C. Challenge

TORONTO — Premier William Davis, who has criticized federal equalization payments to the poorer provinces as much as any man, has said Ontario wants no part of British Columbia's decision to challenge the constitutionality of such payments in court. Ontario, he explained, may have complaints about the efficiency and the mechanics of equalization but it has no quarrel with the principle — which, presumably, includes the constitutionality.

One could get into quite a semantic argument on that, but let it go. The fact is Mr. Davis was simply expressing a long-standing Ontario policy concerning its fiscal relations with the federal government, namely that they are a political rather than a legal problem. Ontario long ago discovered there is more clout in the Treasurer's purse than in the Attorney-General's brief.

Which, it may be said, is why Canadian Confederation is such an endless history of federal-provincial fiscal wars, exploited by the politicians, hopelessly confusing for the voters and not very helpful, to say the least, in promoting national unity and development. Equalization transfers by the federal government from the rich to the not-so-rich areas of Canada are patently necessary but they would be a lot more efficient, both economically and politically, if there were some generally understood constitutional basis for them rather than ad hoc deals and expedients devised by transitory politicians to circumvent, as often as not, the constitution.

Other Arguments?

This is not to say that British Columbia, in challenging their constitutionality, has much of a case going for it. Attorney-General Leslie Peterson has contended that equalization payments violate express provisions of the British North America Act, namely that all provinces were to be treated equally after entering Confederation. Since there is nothing in the BNA Act which even remotely suggests that all provinces must be treated equally, one must assume Mr. Peterson has other arguments in mind.

There used to be a "terms of union" section, long ago supplanted by statutory legislation, which obligated Ottawa to pay certain grants to the provinces and which said such grants were "in full settlement of all future demands on Canada." But this finality clause proved to be meaningless; ironically, it was British Columbia, in 1907, which was instrumental in getting it formally removed.

On the other hand, the efforts of Sen. Eugene Forsey and other Ottawa gurus to laugh British Columbia out of court seem rather premature. If there is nothing in the BNA Act which says federal equalization payments are unconstitutional, neither is there anything which says they are. Nor is there much judicial interpretation to go on.

"Equalization," of course, is a political rather than a legal concept. Generally, it means payments which the federal government makes to provinces, municipalities and individuals in order to correct economic disparities across the country. These payments take one of three forms: unconditional grants (including the ancient "terms of union" subsidies); tax abatements according to a formula which has the effect of transferring money from the have to the have-not provinces; and conditional grants, some years ago by Frank Scott and reinforced by some court decisions, is that the spending power of Parliament (as distinct from the legislative power) is unlimited. Governments can subsidize — i.e., give money to — whomever they please: "generosity in Canada," Mr. Scott declared, "is not unconstitutional."

If not, perhaps it ought to be. It makes little sense to have a constitution which allocates various legislative powers to the federal and provincial governments, as the BNA Act does, and then permits the federal power to spend as it pleases for programs in areas reserved for the provinces. The result, given Ottawa's unlimited taxing power (which is not in question) against limited provincial taxing powers, is to rewrite the Constitution by fiscal means, as Ontario, Quebec, British Columbia and others have so often claimed.

Tax and Spend

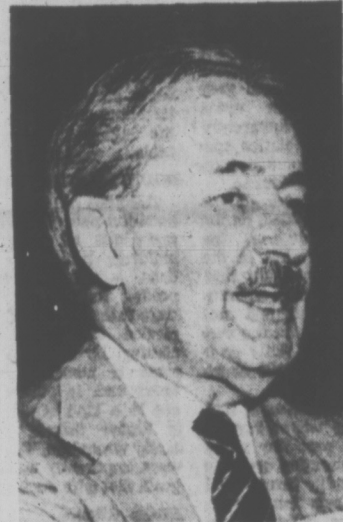

And indeed the British Privy Council did say, in holding the federal Employment and Social Insurance Act of 1935 unconstitutional under the BNA Act as it then stood, that the federal government's power to tax as it pleases did not necessarily mean it could spend as it pleases. If the legislation disposing of the tax raised is so framed that it affects provincial legislative powers, the Judicial Committee held, then it is invalid.

Unfortunately, however, this view was only incidental to the case in question and cannot be considered decisive. But it had its effect on Ottawa; in 1957, the Prime Minister, Louis St. Laurent, said federal grants for provincial purposes are permissible providing they are financed by general taxation rather than a specific tax, did not involve any element of compulsion on the provinces, and did not control the administration or operation of provincial functions.

Not Clear

Where this leaves various federal programs involving provincial jurisdiction is not entirely clear. In a 1957 Exchequer Court case (Angers v. Minister of National Revenue), Family Allowance payments were held to be constitutional. But that was an easy one: the federal-provincial shared cost programs, such as medicare and hospital insurance, do impose conditions, both generally and administratively, which provinces must meet in order to qualify for federal grants. They also effectively compel provinces to do certain things in the health field and restrict a provincial government's ability — and responsibility — to set its own policies and priorities in areas of provincial jurisdiction.

Ontario has been complaining along these lines for years but there has been no constitutional challenge. Now that one is coming from British Columbia, Queen's Park will be an interested observer — from the sidelines, of course.

some of which (medicare and hospital insurance, for example), are also constructed on an equalization principle.

All in all, these grants are now well in excess of $4 billions a year. Their redistributive effect may be seen from the fact that the formal equalization payment under the Federal-Provincial Fiscal Arrangements Act (which is only one component of the total policy) totals some $871 millions this fiscal year and none of it goes to Ontario, Alberta or British Columbia.

What constitutional authority is there for these expenditures? Some lawyers have contended it comes from the "public debt and property" clause in section 91 of the BNA Act which sets out the powers of the federal parliament, but the argument does not appear to carry much weight. The usual answer, constructed

To Prevent Nuclear Leaks

The international treaty designed to prevent the proliferation of nuclear weapons might turn out to be a dud if steps are not taken to set up inspection teams to determine if there is any secret transfer or theft of nuclear material. Canada, the first signatory of the nuclear safeguards agreement, is pointing the way towards practical measures to monitor the vital treaty.

Under the agreement, inspectors from the International Atomic Energy Agency will have virtually unlimited access to 20 nuclear facilities across the country. By means of checking at crucial points and by reference to private and government records the atomic detectives should be able to uncover illegal losses of atomic materials.

Critics have pointed out that the scheme will detect illegalities after the fact; there will be no active prevention measures in the manner of a police force. Visits from the inspectors will be unannounced, however, and this will be an added deterrent to international crime.

The possibility of atomic theft by individuals or gangs as well as through deliberate governmental deception adds an urgent touch to world politics. More adequate preventive measures should be considered at once to give better teeth to the non-proliferation treaty.

Bhutto Building Peking Hopes

RAWALPINDI, Pakistan — President Zulfikar Ali Bhutto is looking to an odd couple, namely Mao Tse-tung and Richard Nixon, to keep Pakistan and, incidentally, all Asia from sliding down the drain. A social reformer without ideological pedigree, Bhutto is philosophically about midstream between the Chinese and American chiefs of state. But he thinks they are the only people who can straighten out a mess unusual even for this untidy continent.

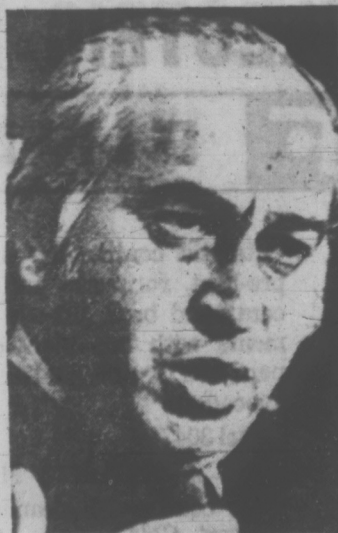

Indeed, the Pakistani's disastrous vision in the wake of the recent war with India is such that he pronounces a mea culpa on his own past and regrets the youthful folly that led him 22 years ago to work for Nixon's defeat as a Representative from California at the hands of Helen Gahagan Douglas. At that time Bhutto was a brilliant young student at the state university.

His gloomy view of today's world—a view that is darkly tinged with prejudices — sees India, urged on by the Soviet Union, giddily threatening new aggressions while Moscow in the end plans to pick up pieces all along the U.S.S.R.'s southern border.

Gobbled Up

Although he expresses his ideal in emotional tones, Bhutto's outlook is one of coldly cynical realism. For him, Mrs. Gandhi's India is an unwitting Kremlin stooge and, once it has completed the job of wrecking all semblance of stability on this most populous continent, it will in turn be gobbled up itself.

When that moment comes, says Bhutto, with lugubrious relish, neither India's "ancient wisdom" nor "the rope trick" will enable Mrs. Gandhi to "lasso the Soviet Union." And when that bell tolls, as it has already tolled for East Pakistan, Bhutto foresees the loss of India's provinces of West Bengal and Assam which, together with Bangladesh, will come under "red" influence. The only question not yet answered in the Pakistani's mind is whether that influence will be Chinese or Russian.

... coldly cynical

the U.N. will remain paralyzed unless the General Assembly is given mandatory powers to act — which isn't going to happen.

For these reasons, he constituted himself a kind of advance party for the Nixon journey to China — which itself was arranged through Pakistan — and flew there recently to see his old friend, Chou En-lai, and the man he most reveres, Mao Tse-tung, in order to ask for help. He almost certainly wanted a written defence pact but what he got was tea and sympathy, and advice that common interests transcend alliances in importance.

Certainly there is a commonality of Chinese and Pakistan interests. They want to deflate their mutual adversary, India, and share with the United States the desire to keep Russia from running away with the Asia power contest. Bhutto, seeing this and having failed to get a signed commitment from Peking, is looking for one in Washington.

Restrained Hopes

Yet he is evidently restrained in his hopes, being clearly impressed with the sage Chinese advice that common interests count more than promises. It was obviously such an interest — including a signal of friendship to Peking and a signal of caution to Moscow — that brought the United States Navy into the Bay of Bengal last December and, according to Bhutto, saved West Pakistan from an assault. That manoeuvre was not prompted by any treaty accord. We didn't help Pakistan in its 1965 Indian war.

Even Bhutto concedes that Pakistan's existing pacts, although still legally valid, are politically and militarily ineffective. What he really needs more than anything else is to assure the two great Pacific powers on which he particularly relies, the United States and China, it is in their own self-interest that what is left of Pakistan should be propped up and that Soviet influence should be constrained in Asia before it becomes predominant.

He knows that he requires the help of current history's odd couple, Mao and Nixon. From their deliberations he expects "fruitful and productive" results, for he is obviously aware that both Peking and Washington can see the danger for their own countries if all the remnants of an Asiatic power balance are allowed to disintegrate.

Provocation

What an attempt is being made to charge the British troops in North Ireland with misbehavior, although the evidence to the contrary is so strong that those with any sense of justice and fair play are not fooled by this absurd charge. It is sheer propaganda to kid the unwary.

One newscaster (hitherto neutral) said it was a wonder the troops didn't kill five hundred of the defiant demonstrators who have continuously provoked the troops beyond measure with their shootings, bombings and all kinds of atrocities. In fact the IRA-sponsored terrorists bombed a pub recently, killing thirteen of their own. They kept pretty mum about their funeral. They have been murdering police, soldiers and innocents at the rate of about thirteen a week for some time. They make every day a bloody day.

Never in history has there been so much provocation with so little retaliation. Those who would deceive people into thinking differently are partakers of their evil deeds, and no doubt will share in the certain condemnation of evil in the day when all wrongs are judged.

Greed for possession and power is plainly back of the trouble in Ireland. The South is not satisfied with twenty-six counties, but covets the six Protestant counties (North Ireland's ewe lamb). But the adage will prove true concerning them eventually "much wants more and loses all." — (Mrs.) L. Pratt, Galt, Ont.

Better Way

A heading in the Victoria Times last week said: "It sounds like legislative cremation of free collective bargaining" — a quote from CUPE. Maybe that would be the best thing that could happen to B.C.

If the best that collective bargaining can do is ground our airplanes, stall the trains, idle the ships and close the ports, stop the mails and tie up a transportation system, then we should be able to find some better method of solving labor problems. — Maurice Rookwood, 2464 Plumer.

From the Times of Feb. 25, 1912

The budget debate was concluded later this afternoon by a manly, dignified speech from H. C. Brewster, leader of the Liberal opposition, who pointed out whither the government was drifting with its reckless and anti-public policies. So far as physical and mental energies could go, he said, the opposition was doing its duty in criticism of policy and legislation, but the government was bringing down practically all the business of the session in the last few days, when no one could possibly have the physical strength to take up its consideration.

Jalna Has Key to CBC Vault

The CBC has proudly announced the sale of the Jalna series to Thames Television, as if it were a victory. But in fact it is a defeat, and a huge gamble which (in view of the series' artistic failure to date) amounts to irresponsibility.

What the CBC has done is to double the financial odds against it, by doubling the length of this immensely costly series, with no assurance that it will have any corresponding revenue. It has therefore assured another full year of tightened belts, and shabby production for everything else on the air, because Jalna has been given the key to the vault.

The level of expenditures lavished on Jalna has become notorious within the CBC, and a source of bitter grumbling from other producers who because of Jalna have to program with peanuts.

Why is the sale a defeat? First, because the CBC had to promise 25 programs, costing up to $200,000 each, in order to make a sale at $25,000 each. That sale covers only one-sixth to one-eighth of costs, yet to make it the CBC had to double those costs.

Surely that is irresponsible. It is the action of network heads who were desperate for a sale, any sale, in order to give the series some slight patina of success.

Secondly, the sale is a defeat because it was to Thames rather than to the richer and more prestigious BBC. The price was, I am told, a good one by Thames standards — but the BBC would have paid at least 50 per cent more if it had thought the programs good enough to buy. It didn't.

And neither, I suspect, will the U.S. commercial networks, where the CBC has always dreamed feverishly of making its money back, and making a reputation for Canada. My guess is that Jalna will be shown in the U.S. — but only on the educational network, which can afford to pay only modest prices compared to CNBC, CBS and ABC.

By BLAIR KIRBY

That sort of sale would be to Thames — a fourth-ranking substitute for real success. The best thing that can be said either for a sale to Thames or to NET is that it will go a long way to make the international reputation of a few Canadian actors, notably (so far in the series) Paul Harding and Joseph Shaw.

Meanwhile, the series is continuing its frustrating bits-and-pieces pattern, juggling half a dozen mini-stories at once, so that all we ever get in any one instalment is a series of unresolved and artificially theatrical confrontations.

Each performer is given his little moment of high-geared emoting. Everyone is always either talking about emotional turmoils we can't believe in or telling us about ones we don't see, and which I certainly don't care about.

The high point to date — and it was not higher than a pitcher's mound — came in the third instalment, when we were briefly allowed to concentrate on Finch Whitehead, who has apparently been unjustly railroaded into a mental home by the increasingly dictatorial Renny. Typically, we were never told how or why; but at least this chunk was believable, thanks to the acting of Joseph Shaw.

Shaw, who is a fine, sensitive performer, played Finch, while Paul Harding continues to astound with his ability to play the elderly Renny so well that the fortyish actor is never visible in the 86-year-old.

Kate Reid, on the other hand, becomes more and more clearly miscast as Adeline, both young and old. As the old lady she is patently too strong and vital and thus unconvincing, and as the young one she bullies her way through an unconvincing script.

Producer John Trent's device of having the story proceed on two time levels at once, half in 1918 and half in 1971, still seems an irksome interference without point or effect. It becomes merely one more excuse for breaking away from any promising plot line before it has time to become a story.

Jalna is more and more assuming the nature of an immense ego trip for its producers who must surely be the only ones who believe in what they're doing. And since they include the CBC's top programmers, the question is, who is there to control their waste of public money and how long will they be allowed to get away with it?

Artistic, financial disaster

EQUIPMENT like this experimental refuse crusher will be costly, and have an impact on world trade.

Poor Nations Will Pay Anti-Pollution Costs

GENEVA — Among the papers one hopes will not get lost in the shuffle at next June's Stockholm environment conference — and with 7,600 other documents around, it might — is a report from the UN Committee for Trade and Development (UNCTAD) having to do with the effects of planetary good housekeeping on world trade.

It reminds us not only that this is inescapably a planetary job we're taking on, but that the trade involved could easily run to hundreds of billions of dollars.

Some pale idea of the size of the business may be had from the sales figures for anti-pollution equipment alone. The United States is already spending more than a billion dollars a year on such hardware and software (for maintenance), and $5 billion, altogether on anti-pollution programs.

Race for Market

The rate is going up by about a fifth every year and the U.S. Council on Environmental Quality says $365 billion will have to be spent by 1975 for just a partial cleanup of American air, earth and water.

Europe, too, is spending around a billion dollars yearly for this sort of equipment and maintenance, at a rate going up just as fast, and competitors on both sides of the Atlantic are racing for this world market.

Meanwhile, a discernible dent is already being made on world trade patterns by a hodge-podge of national environmental regulations affecting imports. Several European countries are turning back food shipments tainted with DDT residues; new American and West German lead emission laws threaten to close those enormous markets to Fiat and Renault, whose small cars need high-octane (leaded) gasoline, and noise regulations at U.S. airports are bound to affect the commercial future of the Anglo-French supersonic Concorde.

From now on, UNCTAD says, environmental ground rules are clearly going to be such that any manufacturer who cares to stay in or invade the big markets will have to pay handsomely for the privilege. The most polluting industries, such as metal, energy, chemicals, paper and pulp, will of course be hit hardest.

By CLAIRE STERLING
The Washington Post

On average for all industry, though, compliance with adopted and pending standards will probably mean a 5 to 10 per cent increase in capital investment and as much again in production costs. (In the United States, according to the Council for Environmental Quality, private industry will have to put up 42 of those 165 billion dollars.)

Assuming the ground rules are not harmonized worldwide, they will certainly constitute steep barriers to trade. Even assuming they are harmonized, they would certainly look like steep barriers to that half of the world's population with less than $500 a year — often, very much less — to live on.

UNCTAD thinks that the rise in investment and production costs should mean an average 6 to 9 per cent rise in export prices. Richer nations might not mind paying that for the luxury of an impeccable environment. Poorer ones might, though, and that is only the beginning of their troubles.

Minerals Run Out

Whenever a rich industrial country tries to take something bad out of its air, earth or water, it almost invariably takes money out of some poor country's pocket. Most of the former import huge quantities of raw materials, and most of the latter have little or nothing else to sell. Restricting the use of lead in gasoline means reducing the amount bought from lead-producing countries. Banning the sale of canned tuna-fish, tainted with mercury, raises the cry for a ban on mercury-dumping into rivers and seas, the search for substitutes, and thus a cut in imports from mercury-producing countries.

So far, recycling of used raw materials has not gone very far because of technical difficulties. But the difficulties are sure to be overcome because research investment cannot help growing under the strain as raw materials reserves go down, extraction costs go up, and wastes keep coming along that nobody knows what to do with.

The world price of lead has risen 300 per cent in the last 30 years, for instance, and of mercury 500 per cent in the last 20 years. Under these circumstances, thrift in the use of such materials is not just a matter of environmental virtue but of elementary book-keeping.

Conference Set

It is true that some of those minerals may be running out before long anyway: the latest studies indicate that world zinc reserves may not last more than another 18 years, tin 15 and mercury 13. But knowing that can hardly be a comfort to Africans or South Americans or Asians whose countries' "terms of trade," as UNCTAD puts it, can only get worse in the meanwhile, as their customers' air, earth and water get better and better.

This isn't by any means the worst problem in the multi-billion-dollar environment game. Getting up all the billions, and inducing all the world's manufacturers to pay up without rattling, should by rights be worse still.

Nevertheless, this particular kind might give pause to earnest environmental crusaders. UNCTAD itself will be holding an international conference on the subject in South America this spring, a couple of months before the Stockholm conference opens, and organizers for the Stockholm gathering have been trying for over a year to find some way of talking around it, they have ended by asking — in fact, imploring — the world's wealthier states to chip in financially so as to redress trade imbalances, and to recognize that environmental quality must not be achieved primarily at the cost of the third world's economic development. In this case, though, saying is as saying does.

joy, depending on attitude, and it is the present attitude we would like to change. We want to see them in this party, not for what they can get out of it, for we have nothing to offer by way of contracts or patronage, but for what they can give.

"We offer them an opportunity to express themselves freely, to be heard with respect, and to work for a cause, and to work together as a group."

"If he finally has a voice, a voice which must be heard and respected, and some day in his own destiny, then I think he (the Acadian) will recover his initiative and develop both as an individual and as a group."

Chiasson sees the new party as a means of easing tensions in New Brunswick rather than dividing the French and English-speaking populations, as some have suggested.

"There have been incidents of violence already and unless the young Acadians have a forum in which they can air their frustrations, I think we shall see a sharp increase in violence within the next two years."

He was referring to incidents a couple of months ago, when English-language signs around Bathurst were defaced and painted over with F.P., for Frog Power.

On Jan. 17 in Bathurst, windows were smashed in the homes of families considered to be part of the English-speaking power elite.

Formation of the new party has come as no surprise to Claude Bourque, editor of the French-language daily newspaper, L'Evangeline — a name that is a constant reminder to Acadians of the past.

But Bourque said backers of the party should not be surprised that they may not be able to form a government or even elect a single member.

"But there's any other solution for a better representation and a better advocacy of French-speaking Acadian interests in the Legislative Assembly of New Brunswick?"

"The Acadian Party will grow and thrive to the extent that the other political parties refuse to recognize the legitimate aspirations of the Acadians."

But one Acadian has given the party little chance.

"They are doomed before they start; they won't get to second base," said Louis Robichaud, the Liberal who was the first Acadian to be elected Premier of this province, and now chairman of the Canadian International Joint Control Commission in Ottawa.

He said more would be accomplished if dissatisfied Acadians worked within existing political parties — efforts on an ethnic basis might work in other fields, but not in politics.

"Such attempts have been unsuccessful in Quebec and they will be in New Brunswick. They will lose their time, their money and their efforts and will become disillusioned."

"There are voices for Acadians in New Brunswick who are doing their best."

This reaction came as no surprise to Chiasson.

"There are a few Acadians who consider themselves as having made it in the system," he said. "But they were obliged to sacrifice many of their ideals along the way; compromise was necessary in order for them to succeed. For such people le Parti Acadien is an affront and an insult."

Downtown Building Limits Approved

Interim restrictions on the size of all new downtown construction were approved in principle Thursday by Victoria council.

Maximum height of a building will be limited to 14 storeys and bulk will be cut to about half the currently allowable amount under the new rules, expected to appear in bylaw form soon.

Council took the move as a temporary recognition that all the rules covering building downtown must be changed.

The new rules may change after further study, but they are known to be close to recommendations in the downtown report of Harold Spence-Sales, yet to be released.

NO STATEMENT

City solicitor Terry O'Grady told council Thursday no definite statement could be made about the effect the new restrictions might have on some current building proposals.

Without mentioning any specific development, O'Grady explained that in the event of a legal encounter, the question of non-conforming use would need answering.

This means establishing whether a specific development was already taking place when the new laws were introduced.

City hall may withhold issuing a building permit for 30 days and even extend this period, while awaiting its own final decision on new zoning laws.

MAY ASK COURTS

But at the end of the withholding period, a developer may still ask the courts to decide on the non-conforming use, or otherwise, of his development.

Some aldermen expressed fear that the limitations might not be only "interim" in nature, but planning chairman Mike Young commented that to believe that would be to believe that no one plans to act on the Spence-Sales report.

The actual height limitation in the interim rules is to be 140 feet — about 14 storeys.

The floorspace ratio is also to be reduced to a maximum of three to one.

Floorspace ratio is the measure of a building's bulk and at present the maximum in the downtown and light industrial area is 6.5 to one.

Height limitation at the property line will be 30 feet under the interim measure.

The current maximum heights allowed on buildings downtown are 75 feet at the property line, with limitation on set-back height depending on the size of the property built upon.

As an example the new Commerce bank at View and Douglas makes full use of existing height and bulk regulations, with 19 storeys and a floorspace ratio of 6.5 to one.

REID PROJECT

The restrictions will apparently closely affect two large proposed developments in the downtown area.

One is the controversial Reid project planned for the Wharf Street waterfront below Bastion Square.

The other is a lesser known high-rise-commercial development proposed for the vacant land south of The Bay department store.

John Copp of Copp Construction said today there is "no way" his development can be scaled down to 14 storeys.

Copp applied for a building permit Wednesday without knowing the new restrictions were to be announced Thursday.

TAKES ISSUE

Copp took issue with a statement by Ald. Young that Copp's proposal was vulnerable because he had been sitting on it for two years.

Copp said there is nothing in the agreement from the city he obtained two years ago to force him into early construction.

However, Copp said he is not looking for a legal fight with the city. He was prepared to scale the building down to 29 storeys. He said he believes he has a right to build on his property and this is the reason for applying for a building permit, whatever the state of council's intentions to limit the size.

MORE RESTRICTIVE

The recommendation to enact interim limitations came in a report from the Victoria Advisory Planning Commission, which said "the consultant" (Spence-Sales) has clearly recommended that future regulations be more restrictive than at present. This poses a problem in the period between release of the report and enactment of appropriate new regulatory measures.

The VAPC report also says the Spence-Sales report "provides a basis for discussion and action in regulating central area development. However, given such a complex topic, it is likely that the process of debate, policy formulation and program action could be lengthy."

"It is apparent that the C-2 zoning category is too general in its coverage and too generous in its provisions. The development of sophisticated, up-to-date regulations deserves the careful attention of all concerned."

The new interim rules and those that follow will definitely reduce the building yield on land, but former planning chairman Ald. Harold Olafson said he does not think building activity will be slowed down.

Young said the release of the Spence-Sales report will undoubtedly cause a "considerable amount of speculation" and "I feel we shouldn't be rushed into dealing with" the report.

Pacemaker Baby Dies

CHICAGO (Reuter) — Tonica Heard, the infant who made medical history by having an artificial pacemaker implanted to keep her heart beating when she was only 26 hours old, has died in Chicago's Mount Sinai Hospital, it was announced Wednesday.

The operation on Jan. 31, which gave Tonica a chance to survive a congenital heart defect, was hailed as a new medical breakthrough. She was believed to have been the youngest person ever to undergo a pacemaker implant.

Dr. Thomas Baffes, head of the surgical team which carried out the implant surgery, said Tonica apparently suffered heart failure.

$500 REWARD TO HIT PUSHERS

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — A system of rewarding anonymous informers whose information leads to the conviction of heroin pushers in this city was unveiled Wednesday.

Colin Brown, an insurance executive, said in an interview that under the system a person can call a local telephone number, pass on the information, then receive a reward up to $500 if a pusher is convicted on the information — all the while remaining nameless.

He said the advertisements and posters instruct anyone who wishes to provide information: "Do not use your own name."

"He's given a code name. We never want to know the informer's name," Mr. Brown said.

"When the informant sees that his information has resulted in a conviction — by reading the newspaper or calling us — he phones us and we tell him we'll leave it (the reward) wherever you want it but it would be in cash."

OLYMPICS TO COST MONTREAL $120M

MONTREAL (CP) — Mayor Jean Drapeau said Thursday for the first time publicly that cost estimates for the city's 1976 summer Olympic games are $120 million.

Speaking on a CBC-TV public affairs program, the mayor said the $120 million figure was submitted to the International Olympic Committee when Montreal bid for the games in 1969 and that the city saw no reason to change it.

He also said there would be no "special taxes" to cover the cost of the games and that construction that will be done for the Olympics would simply provide installations that the city would have to build anyway.

Panarctic Spent $50 Million Before Striking Black Gold

CALGARY (CP) — After four years, $50 million and 12 wells, Panarctic Oils Ltd. has drilled into an arctic island and struck crude oil.

The first sample of free oil to come out of the islands was flown out Thursday from Foulsham Peninsula on the west side of Ellesmere Island.

President Charles Hetherington announced the find in Panarctic Romulus C-42, a scheduled 12,000-foot hole started Jan. 29.

"We have to complete this well first. The oil was at 3,400 feet and there are a number of prospective horizons on the way down; what we find there will be of major importance."

Although the size of the find cannot be determined until after further tests and drilling, industry spokesmen said it would dispel a pessimism that had been settling into the industry over the oil prospects of the Eastern Arctic.

GAS SUSPECTED

Alistar Ross, president of the Independent Petroleum Association of Canada, said volcanic sills or layers had been found in the region and a theory started that gas might be discovered, but not oil.

Although "that was just a theory," the industry had begun to worry because of all the money flowing into the high-cost exploration area.

Mr. Hetherington said that when Panarctic moved on to the peninsula, 2,300 miles north of Montreal, "we anticipated this location would be a pretty good one."

"We have a seismic crew now in operation on that peninsula. This crew is looking for structures similar to Romulus and we have some good leads."

The find has not changed exploration plans—"just reinforced our belief this area is highly prospective."

"I consider that gas is highly valuable but it takes time to market because it's necessary to develop a very large threshold volume."

"With oil, particularly on Ellesmere Island, it can be moved out by tanker months out of the year."

"What they call the Greenland Current modifies the weather in this eastern area and navigation along the west shore of Greenland is relatively much more simple than going into the western islands or Alaska."

CHECKS TANKER OUTLOOK

Although Mr. Hetherington said any plans for development drilling would have to await further information, the company has looked into prospective tanker loading areas.

"We already have had some preliminary investigation into Mackinson inlet on the eastern side which looks fairly good."

Mr. Hetherington said the oil in the discovery well was of medium-light gravity, included a small amount of gas, and was sweet-free from troublesome sulphur.

Panarctic is no stranger to natural gas, having made finds on King Christian, Melville and Ellef Ringnes islands.

GOVERNMENT HAS PIECE

Panarctic, a consortium suggested in the 1960s by the late Calgary geologist J. C. Sproule who saw the need for several firms to bear the cost of exploring in the "inaccessible" area, was formed in late 1967 with the federal government putting up 45 per cent of the cost and 20 companies the remainder.

Panarctic is by far the largest leaseholder in the Arctic with 9.8 million acres directly under its control and a net interest of 33.4 million acres in conjunction with other firms.

Several companies are drilling in the Mackenzie River delta and on the peninsula to the east with Gulf Oil Canada Ltd. recording a discovery near Inuvik, N.W.T., last week.

Imperial Oil Ltd. had three discoveries in the general region during the last two years and two more wells with good indications.

Price, Pay Curbs Needed Says Young

HETHERINGTON HOT SPREEING

B.C. (CP) — Circumstances may still arise in which mandatory price and wage controls will have to be imposed temporarily to dampen inflation, chairman John Young of the federal price and incomes commission said today.

He told the B.C. Industrial Relations Management Association the commission believes the Senate national finances committee was too optimistic last year in arguing that inflation and unemployment could be cured without controls.

The committee recommended that more weight be given to controlling the money supply, taxing and other policies to dampen inflation, and increasing production to take up the employment slack.

It said the goal of not more than 12- to two-per-cent annual increases in the consumer price index, and not more than three-per-cent unemployment in the labor force, might be relaxed.

Dr. Young said the amounts to showing mild tolerance for inflation and lowering the employment goals as the country might have two to three-per-cent price inflation and four to six-per-cent unemployment.

International Mariner Probe

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Securities Commission is looking into a complex series of deals that followed formation of Toronto-based International Mariner Resources Ltd. last year through the merger of five mining companies.

through the Toronto financial community.

Norton Cooper, president of International Mariner and subsidiaries Silver Shield Mines Ltd. and Saskoka Mines Ltd., says he has no knowledge of an investigation. He said an exploration program by Silver Shield is "proceeding satisfactorily."

International Mariner, incorporated in British Columbia, is a result of a union of four B.C. exploration firms and Mariner Mines of Ontario.

Shares of International Mariner now trade on the Vancouver Stock Exchange at about 75 cents. They were as high as $2.17 a year ago. Silver Shield shares have risen from 55 cents when issued last year to about $3 recently.

A conference on alcohol, drug and tobacco abuse in Greater Victoria will be held at First United Church March 3 and 4 under the auspices of the Greater Victoria Alcoholism Association and the Drug, Alcohol and Tobacco Association of Greater Victoria.

Starting at 7:30 p.m. March 3, Rev. Fred Hayes will speak on "personality damage from alcoholism." He will be followed by William Munday on "an overview of drug problems" and R. L. Clarkson on "the tobacco problem."

Workshops will take place the next morning.

SAFE JOURNEY

LONDON (CP) — London's taxis are the safest in the world, says the cab drivers' weekly publication Taxi. Cable Maurice Shaw says one reason for the good safety record of taxis is the stringent overhauling and road testing the cars undergo annually.

"The accident rate in general would go down if ordinary cars had to pass similar requirements before going on the road," Shaw concludes.

Auto Insurance Hikes Studied

By BRUCE YEMEN
Times Staff

Under heavy opposition attack, Attorney-General Leslie Peterson early today told the legislature the government is studying the car insurance companies' practice of raising insurance premiums for driving offences.

Peterson said he didn't agree with opposition claims that the practice enabled insurance companies to disburse penalties properly belonging to the courts.

But he said the practice is being reviewed by the B.C. Automobile Insurance Board as part of a larger study of rate-making by insurance companies.

FINING THEM

Opposition Leader Dave Barrett told Peterson insurance companies are effectively imposing rates for minor traffic offences such as speeding.

Peterson said the principle is that law-abiding drivers should have better rates, but Barrett asked why rates for good drivers don't go down if what the attorney-general said is true.

"Tell me the exact number of drivers that have had their rates reduced because they have been law-abiding," said Barrett.

Barrett said he isn't a lawyer but you don't have to be to know that Peterson "doesn't know what he's talking about."

"The system works this way — if you are a good driver you can expect a regular increase."

He urged Peterson to start a newsletter to the insurance companies informing them of latest policy changes so they can tell their subscribers about them.

Robert Strachan (NDP-Cowichan-Malahat) said nothing Peterson has said indicates he is willing to curtail the powers of the industry to fine drivers.

The way Peterson runs auto insurance in B.C., Strachan said, is a "parody of a farce."

NOT YET
He said the insurance companies have had 15 years to prove they are willing to serve the public and they have not done so.

Strachan said 85 per cent of the people in the province want a government-operated automobile insurance but the Secords won't bring it in because they are trying to protest their friends in the industry.

"That's the basis on which your incompetence is based. It's another example of your gutlessness and I mean that," Strachan told Peterson.

He said he will not be satisfied until Peterson orders refunds of premium overcharges during the past two years and "forgets the Social Credit insurance agents in the province."

INCOMPETENT

At 1:10 a.m. Barrett had said he wanted to deal with automobile insurance and Peterson's "incompetence as an administrator."

He recalled the Donna Hitchman-Taylor case which last year caused him to get thrown out of the House for a week after he refused to give up asking Peterson to change the automobile insurance law which denied accident benefits to survivors of persons who lived for more than 180 days after a car accident and then died.

Three months later, in July, 1971, Peterson changed the 180-day rule, Barrett said, asking why it had taken so long.

FUTILE ACTION

He answered the question himself — "petulance" and "administrative malaise" on the part of Peterson.

Peterson said the action that followed Barrett's ejection from the House demonstrated the "futility" of his action. It was under study at the time, he said.

Peterson disagreed that premium increases for driving offences were a penalty.

"It's a question of what are the criteria for setting rates," he said, adding that the question was being looked at by the automobile insurance board.

Barrett reviewed other cases of complaint about B.C. insurance laws, saying Peterson's department had failed to answer letters from citizens and had failed to notify insurance companies of interpretations of the law which would help claimants.

No attempt was made, he said, to inform owners of campers compulsory no-fault insurance was useless when there were three children in the camper.

When no-fault insurance premiums were ordered reduced from $21 to $15 in January, Peterson failed to ensure that decreases covered the 1970 and 1971 policy years when motorists were overcharged, Barrett said.

School referendum opponent F. E. Wright plans to spend some of his own money on newspaper advertisements in response to the Greater Victoria school board's plan to advertise in support of the referendum.

Wright, of 993 Karen Crescent, was one of the organizers of a petition which forced the board to go to a referendum to get approval for a budget which is $412,000 above the provincially-set limit.

The referendum will be held March 11.

Wright said today he still wants to know why the board's administration budget increased from $374,000 to more than $1,260,000 in less than two years. He said he has yet to get a straight answer to the question and will say so in the advertisements he plans to buy.

He said he will wait for the board to publish their ads before he responds. The school board decided Thursday night to buy $705 worth of ads in three newspapers and radio stations to try to explain the referendum and say why it should be supported.

Doctors Welcome Curbs on Drugs

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The Canadian Medical Association Thursday commended the federal government for its intentions to crack down on the use of methadone and amphetamines and offered its cooperation "in every way possible."

Health Minister John Munro had earlier announced to the Commons that methadone, which is used as a substitute drug in heroin addiction treatment, and amphetamines, which are commonly known as "speed," can be prescribed only with his permission.

"It is gratifying to have the federal government consult the profession in depth before enacting such legislation — as has been the case on these subjects," the CMA statement said.

"We have no doubt that the necessary controls to eliminate misuse can be developed without hindering good medical care. We will co-operate in every way possible towards that goal."

"TAKE SOME TIME"

While urging "all possible speed" in the non-medical and medical abuses of methadone, the CMA however said that controls on amphetamines "will take considerable effort and some time to implement."

The CMA agreed with Munro that these regulations will not substantially reduce the supply to "speed freaks," who, for the most part, obtain their drugs from illicit sources.

And the controls will not also solve the "diet pill problem" but simply shift it to the use of other amphetamine-like drugs. Amphetamines are commonly "misused" by doctors for weight reduction and for the treatment of depression.

"It may prove necessary to recommend even more controls on these drugs," the CMA said.

Fishing and Mooching, And a Gift for Freddie

Part of one week's work, or no sooner had it been announced that the B.C. Salmon Derby would be extended to Saanich Inlet and Cowichan Bay this year, than Staffer Ernie Fedoruk was sidling up to noted fishing guide Ted Peck, and whispering: "Can you teach me how to mooch?"

Ernie is zip for two in B.C. derbies, but now that he's in his own grounds, watch out! And other Island fishermen should be pleased as well. Incidentally, it is recommended that you attend the Sportsmen's Fishing Clinic at the Red Lion next month. Several experts will be featured, including Peck and Jimmy Gilbert, to name two. Proceeds will go to the B.C. Wildlife Federation.

Learn-a-fact-a-day-dept. When the World Hockey Association held its National Hockey League draft recently, there must have been a tongue-in-cheek approach in some of the thinking. Bobby Orr, for instance, went 99th, Phil Esposito, 99th, and Tony Esposito, 1,000. Gordie Howe was last. And also, goalie Bruce Gamble was the only NHLer not picked. But then Bruce has a heart condition.

Hockey fans who can't get tickets to Canuck games may be interested to know that in Massachusetts, the same legislature is studying a bill which would partly protect the average fan, as opposed to the season ticket holder. A bill before the legislature would limit the number of season tickets sold by the New England Patriots football team, and require that 18 per cent of tickets to each game be sold at the gate. . . . Meanwhile, the estimated TV viewing audience at this year's Super-dull Super Bowl game was $4,900,000. . . . and on television, NBC certainly didn't distinguish itself in its coverage of the Winter Olympics, especially that fellow who kept repeating, almost every time a contending skier failed to make a long jump: "he choked up" . . . which makes a lot of chokes, the biggest one being by NBC.

If everything is "Super" in this era, have you heard about the Louisiana Superdome? The simple advice is that no fan will be able to buy a bad seat in the place, even if he wanted to. That's because there is a revolutionary giant-screen color television system which will furnish every spectator with a bird's-eye view of all the action. Six huge TV screens, each 39 feet wide and 33 feet high, will be suspended on a giant gondola from the peak of the superdome, and will provide fans with a super "up-close" view, as well as instant replay. . . . This goes for other forms of entertainment as well as sport. . . . besides, the fans can now stick around for the post-game shows. . . . they will be piped in. . . .

"God hunting" was one of the card on the Cougar players when coach Fred Hucal decided to quit hockey and go home to his farm at Caroline, Alta. . . . as a token of their esteem for his help, the players presented Fred with a double-barrelled Magnum shotgun as a going-away gift. . . . Needless to say, Fred was slightly "shook-up". . . . Doug May who quit the Island for the mainland last fall is in a new business. . . . "I'm in snowmobiles," is the way he put it. . . . And when the Canadian firefighters' curling championship is held here, there will be some class on the ice. . . . Doug Wyarr, who is representing Saskatchewan in the Brier, is one of the top threats, and so is Aubrey Neff, who competed in the B.C. Consols in West Vancouver with his all-farmer rink. . . . And it may not be generally known but Bernie Sparkes once was offered a baseball contract with Los Angeles Dodgers. He was an infielder. . . .

If the reserve clause in baseball and hockey is always under fire, perhaps a precedent has been set. In Australia, the high court has ruled that at the Rugby League's transfer and retention system is invalid. The court ruled that the system acted as a "restraint on trade" and prevented players from earning the maximum benefit for their football skills. As a result, players whose contracts have expired are free to offer themselves to the highest bidder, and in the early swapping, no less than 35 players switched allegiances. Others are still negotiating. . . . Also from Under Under is a new world record for a non-stop run by Tony Rafferty of 122.3 miles in 26 hours and 40 minutes. . . . Rafferty finished with a broken toe, blistered feet and a strained knee. . . . he was allowed six, 10-minute stops in the 26 hours. . . . He called it a "oneer" . . . and no wonder!

And in the Q and A category, available information is that the ringer that ran in the first running of the Longacres Mile at Seattle in 1933 was Exocetide, a class horse. He won it under the name of Blue Boot.

Wings Beating Odds In Playoff Picture

By Canadian Press

Detroit Red Wings were so far out of the National Hockey League playoff picture in late December not even Jimmy The Greek would have laid a $3 bill on their remote chances of making the post-season playoffs.

But, if the Los Vegas odds-maker, and anyone else with hope and charitable connections, produced the non-existent bill or even corresponding coinage, he'd be in line for a healthy payoff when the season ends April 2.

That's 17 games away for the Wings and only 15 for Toronto Maple Leafs, with whom they are battling for the fourth and final playoff berth in the NHL's East.

The Wings took a big step in the right direction Thursday night, blanking Vancouver Canucks 2-0 to move two points ahead of Toronto. They now have 63 points in 61 games to the Leafs 61 points in 63 games.

Elsewhere, Buffalo Sabres continued their cut-up with Chicago, scoring four late goals in a 5-3 win over the West Division Black Hawks, and Montreal Canadiens took an early 3-0 lead en route to a 4-2 victory against Minnesota North Stars.

The Wings had little indication of who was boss at the season's start. Then coach John Wilson took over from Doug Barkley and immediately let it be known who was calling the shots.

He minimized the days players got to relax, prolonged the practice sessions and turned the Wings into playoff contenders.

John McLellan, last year's NHL coach of the year for getting Toronto into the playoffs, also had problems. Leaf defenceman Rick Ley earlier this week blamed the Toronto tailspin on management other than McLellan.

With Wings riding high in fourth, and the Toronto position getting worse, Detroit appears headed for a playoff spot for the second time in the last six seasons.

Alberta Students Lead in Bonspiel

University of Alberta scored two victories Thursday to grab an early lead in the Western Canada Intercollegiate Athletic Association Far West Division men's curling championships at the Victoria Curling Club.

The Alberta rink defeated University of British Columbia 6-4 and University of Lethbridge 9-5 in the opening two rounds of the three-day, round-robin competition involving five foursomes.

University of Calgary, which drew a first-round bye, downed University of Victoria's Harris Loy entry 6-4 after the UVic club dropped a 7-6 decision to Lethbridge in the first round.

In women's competition, Alberta and Calgary have 1-0 records after drawing first-round byes. Alberta tripped Lethbridge 9-2 and Calgary hammered UBC 11-3 after scoring five on the seventh end.

Ann Butler's UVic entry posted an 8-6 win over Lethbridge after dropping a 10-9 decision to UBC in the opening round.

Final scheduled draw is at noon Saturday.

Rugby Triumph

Wayne Robinson counted three tries Thursday to lead St. Michael's University School to a 31-0 rout over visiting Elizabeth Fisher during a Victoria Junior High School Rugby League match.

Corvallis, Ore. — Oregon State University held defending champion University of Victoria Vikings to a 4-4 deadlock during a Northwest Intercollegiate Rugby Conference match here Thursday.

Gaither Zinkon and Rob Hindson proved to be an effective foundation for the UVic pack, which had to battle the heavier Oregon forwards on a muddy, rain-swept pitch.

Ablett Haunts Cougars Again

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

You never notice Jeff Ablett until he starts shooting, but that's enough to establish the Medicine Hat winger as the Tiger thorn that continues to pain Victoria Cougars.

Albert scored twice and picked up a pair of assists Thursday as the visiting Tigers roared back from a 3-0 deficit to defeat Victoria's Cougars 6-3.

Thursdays bit of Ablettism before a Memorial Arena turnout of 1,421 fans also spoiled a gritty display by Victoria's remnants.

HURT LAST TIME

The last time Tigers came calling, Ablett scored two goals — including the winner in overtime — and drew three assists as the 'Hatters edged Victoria 7-6.

The chunky forward doesn't appear as dominant on the ice as he is on the scoresheet. His skating is no better than average, and, on Victoria ice, he hasn't been noted as a roughian.

He sticks to his position, and he can shoot. Medicine Hat coach Jack Shupe reckons Ablett's wrist shot is "one of the most effective in the league." Which may be why he shares league goal-getting honors with Brandon's Ron Chipperfield.

Thursdays pair raised Ablett's total to 33. Chipperfield got his 53rd in Wheat Kings' 7-4 victory over New Westminster Bruins.

SNEAKY SHOT

"Jeff has a sneaky shot," said Shupe. "He has a habit of dropping his head. Goalies figure he plans to pass. The next thing they know, the shot's by the goalie."

Ablett's overtime winner in that 7-6 game and his first goal Thursday were identical — sneaky fast and from the same sharp angle that caught Victoria goalie Darryl Fedoruk unawares.

Ablett's first goal got Tigers rolling after Gary Donaldson's pair and one by Don Morrison had provided Cougars with a 3-0 lead.

Tom Lysiak also popped a pair while Stan Weir and Ed Johnstone added singles.

CLEARING ERROR

Johnstone's goal was the crusher. It came only 40 seconds after Ablett put the 'Hatters on the scoresheet, and stemmed from Blake Robinson's clearing miscue in front of Fedoruk.

The three-goal margin flattered the Tigers.

Down to only 14 players, including backup goalie Rick Tkalec, the Cougars recruited centre Mel Bridgeman from the junior "B" Cubs and came up with a gallant effort.

They out-shot Tigers 41-20, including a 19-5 spread in the opening period when muscle tactics produced a Medicine Hat parade to the penalty box.

CARTER MAY RETURN

Victoria's player problems began with arm breaks suffered by Dean Magnus and Jim Atamanenko, continued when captain Murray Kennett was stricken with mononucleosis, and compounded by Jim Carter's walkout from practice on Wednesday.

Carter, however, could be back in the lineup Saturday when the Cougars entertain Vancouver. It was learned he plans to meet with coach Mitch Pechee today and could be reinstated.

CITY SOCCER RIVALS TANGLE ON SATURDAY

Prestige on the home front will be one of the stakes Saturday at Royal Athletic Park when Victoria rivals Gorge Molsons and West-United tangle at 2 p.m. in Pacific Coast Soccer League match.

Molsons, playing their first season in the coast circuit, currently hold down third place with a slender, one-point margin over United.

Gorge slipped ahead in the cross-town struggle for supremacy last weekend, nipping Vancouver Firefighters at Athletic Park Saturday before United battled North Shore to a scoreless draw in a Sunday match on the Mainland.

Leading Gorge by two points and sharing the top berth are North Shore and Paul's Canadians.

Finesse Around Green Starts Littler Rolling

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Veteran Gene Littler twice chipped in from off the green, forged a seven-under-par 65 and established a two-stroke lead Thursday in the first round of Jackie Gleason's $260,000 Inverrary Classic.

The 41-year-old Littler, winner of 24 tour titles, needed only 24 strokes on the slick, lightning-fast greens in his early round on the 7128-yard Inverrary Golf Club course.

Australian veteran Bruce Crampton was in second place with a 67 in this 72-hole chase for a $52,000 first prize, the largest on the pro tour this year.

Rookie Forrest Fezler, Mac McLendon and Bob Smith followed at 68 with a large group in a tie at 69.

They included Masters champion Charles Coody, England's Tony Jacklin and streaking rookie Lanny Wad-kins, who now has 10 consecutive rounds under par.

Also at that figure were Tom Weiskopf, Bobby Mitchell and Doug Sanders.

Most of the game's great names had their difficulties, however. Jack Nicklaus was five over par after five holes, turned in 40 but rallied for a 73. Arnold Palmer had two bogeys en route to a 74. Lee Trevino again had his first-round troubles, taking a 76. South African Gary Player matched par 72.

Littler, long recognized as the owner of one of the game's classic swings, had a fantastic short game going for him in the bright, warm sunshine that greeted the early starters.

Ben Kern of Toronto was the best of three Canadians with a 74. George Knudson, also of Toronto, carded a 75 and Wilf Homenuik of Winnipeg a 76.

BOWLER OF WEEK

Two games above 200 helped Edy Cockle capture women's tenth annual Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest. Rolling in Ladies' Classic League at Mayfair Lanes, Edy chalked up 203-181-205-588 series to earn award that qualifies her for Bowler-of-the-Year rollofs in April.

Only one thing appears a certainty in the Vancouver Island high school girls' basketball championship tournament starting today at Belmont.

There will be a new titleholder. Defending-champion Claremont failed to qualify, leaving the scramble to Belmont, Mt.

Douglas, Victoria and Oak Bay from the Greater Victoria loop as well as Campbell River, Port Alberni, Lake Cowichan and Nanaimo.

Oak Bay, tangled with Campbell River, the upper-Island champion, this afternoon; Mt. Douglas tackles Lake Cowichan at 5:30, Victoria meets Nanaimo at 7 and Greater Victoria champion Belmont faces Port Alberni at 8:30.

Action resumes at 9 a.m. Saturday and continues through to the championship final at 9 p.m.

Top three teams in the tourney advance to the provincial final next month in Terrace.

Warmer Weather Turns Thoughts to Camping

Some rambling notes along the trail:

Relatively warmer weather the past few days has started to stir thoughts of camping and we've been sorting through some of our gear in anticipation of a backpacking trip in Strathcona Park this summer... also this gear will have to be ready for the weekend jaunts needed to put us in condition for the longer expedition... one of the first items on the agenda was to have "Vibram" soles put on our boots... these deeply-lugged soles, favored by most hiking and alpine clubs, seem a pretty good investment for $10... although we tend to miss our caulk boots sometimes while walking through the forested areas, these new soles will provide a better foothold on a wider variety of terrain.

One minor obstacle we're glad occurred now, rather than later, is slowness of the provincial government in supplying aerial photographs... when we paid our money, delivery was promised in "two to three weeks"... that was a month ago... so anyone else thinking of using these photos, which supply a lot more information on the route to be followed than a topographical map, had better not wait until the last minute to place an order.

Some of the news filtering out of the Victoria-Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association meeting earlier this week... derby hours will be from daybreak until 2 p.m.... minimum weigh-in size for salmon, except for the Junior Derby, will be five pounds... boundaries will remain the same... details on individual derbies will be released at later date.

Present executive of VSIAA consists of Al Wright, president; Mark Woodward, past president; Ray Ritchie, honorary president; Walter Der, first vice-president; Ed Hardy, second vice-president; Jim Gallie, secretary-treasurer; as well as directors Alf Lohr, Frank Jenvey, Sid Sidaway, Ray Sidaway, Wilf Wilson, Taffy Wakeford, Andy Stephen, Chuck Mudrak, Lorne Cunningham, Bruce Colgrave, W. Higgs and C. Mayall.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Nelson collected top honors during the annual VSIAA banquet and awards presentation night Saturday... Harvey won the trophy for the largest salmon of the year... a 31.12-pounder... his wife won the corresponding trophy for distaff anglers with a salmon that weighed in at 23.08 pounds... Cec Ashton stepped up to receive the award for the largest coho (16.13) caught in 1971... other award winners were Gary Hatfield, Bob Redgrave, Art Hatfield, Frank Jenvey, Ada Smith, Tony John and John Rose.

Anyone from Vancouver Island thinking about making a fishing or hunting trip to the Cariboo region will be cheered by news of a route that chops 147 miles off the distance from Vancouver... Evans Products, a forest company with a mill in Lillooet and another about to go into operation at Pemberton, will open its roads to the public on weekends this summer...

A 20-hour (10-week) student hunter training, conservation and outdoor safety course will start Tuesday at the Victoria YM-YWCA... the course is free of charge and covers such diverse topics as fish and wildlife identification, emergency first aid procedures, bush survival techniques as well as firearms safety and handling... further information is available by telephoning Lloyd Lomas of the fish and wildlife branch at 382-6111, local 3550.

Tickets for the Sportsman fishing clinic, set to run March 7 to 10 at the Red Lion Inn, are now on sale at Robinson's Sporting Goods as well as the Red Lion front desk... the $6 ticket covers the full four sessions (from 7:30 to 10:30 p.m. each day) and proceeds will be turned over to the B.C. Wildlife Federation... half of the 300 tickets are gone due to advance sales in local rod and gun clubs... the program covers an "indoor derby" with many valuable prizes as well as films, slides, demonstrations and lectures... Doug Field (son of Rex Field), Ted Peck of Vancouver as well as Bruce Colgrave and Jim Gilbert will handle the first two sessions devoted to salt-water fishing... Bud Dunnett of Parkville will handle the third session on steelheading and Brian Brown will conclude the clinic with advice on freshwater angling.

Island Pointer Club will be holding a Canadian Kennel Club-sanctioned field trials beginning at 8:30 a.m. Sunday... activities will take place at Hourigan's Farm on Helmcken Road... three classes of competition... puppy, derby and gun dog... are scheduled and the entry fee is $3... spectators are welcome.

Best spots for salmon-fishing success this weekend might be in Saanich Inlet waters... from the Narrows through to McKenzie Bay, Willis Point and Indian Bay... the bulk of the catch there has been grilse... for larger salmon, give Oak Bay or Sooke a try.

Best steelheading rivers on the Island have been the Salmon, Eve, Gold, Campbell, Oyster, Puntledge, Nanaimo, Cowichan, Koksilah, San Juan and Sooke.

Blacken the Fish - Better the Day for Fishing

Probe Could Result In Pro Boxing Ban

WINNIPEG (CP) — A ban on professional boxing in Manitoba could be the result of a government-ordered investigation of a four-fight card that resulted in the death of one boxer and a claim by another that he took a dive after his life was threatened.

Larry Desjardins, Manitoba recreation minister, said Thursday the inquiry will also examine the actions of the Manitoba boxing and wrestling commission.

Mr. Desjardins said a ban on boxing in the province could result from the inquiry under Judge Benjamin Hewak of the county court.

MAY SERVE AS GUIDE

The report of the commission "might serve to guide us in any new legislation we might want... or it might result in us asking the attorney-general to lay certain charges," the minister said.

The inquiry will relieve the Manitoba boxing and wrestling commission of its responsibility to investigate the fights and commission chairman Norm Coston said he was glad to see the investigation.

NEED A JUDGE

"It should have been done sooner," he said. "We need someone of the calibre of a judge to sort out all the implications."

Desjardins announced the inquiry following a cabinet meeting a few hours after the minister disclosed he had received a signed statement from heavyweight Jim Christy of Detroit.

Christy, knocked out in the second round of his bout with Canadian champion George Chuvalo, said he was visited at his hotel room by a unidentified man who told him the fight must end in two rounds if he wanted to get back to Detroit alive.

"What could I do?" Chuvalo and his manager Irv Ungerman both described Christy's statement as "stupid."

"This guy is easy to hit," Chuvalo said. "He's very mediocre fighter. Yeah, I think I hit him pretty hard."

CHECKING PRELIMS

The commission of inquiry is also to look into the two preliminary bouts, both ending in second-round knockouts. Nafis Ahmat of Toronto stopped Sam Poke of Detroit and Muhammad Ali Kamaric of Regina put away Jessie Fagan of Detroit.

In the final bout of the card, light-heavyweight Stewart Gray of Toronto was knocked out in the seventh round by Canadian champion Al Sparks of Winnipeg in a title bout.

Gray, 27, died in hospital about 24 hours later having regained consciousness for only a brief period. He underwent two hours of head surgery Tuesday morning but doctors said he died from brain damage.

NEED WIN AND LOSS

For either B.C. or Alberta to gain a tie and force a playoff on Saturday, one of them would have to win its game and Quebec would have to lose to Ontario.

Alberta had had a chance to move up with Quebec Thursday but lost it when B.C., skipped by Gord Walker of Victoria, stole one on the second extra end and defeated Slim Otterson of Calgary 7-6 in the ninth round.

The Walker foursome, which also includes third Wayne Winkler, second O. J. Powell and lead Elmer Hoffman, took its bye in the 10th round.

DELICATE SHOT

The Victorians, enjoying a solid 87 per cent shooting average against Alberta, forced extra-end play when Walker cut-out two Otterson rocks with a delicate, last-rock draw on the 10th-end. Alberta's shot stone lay about an inch from the button but desperate sweeping by the B.C. crew enabled Walker to beat it out.

On the first extra end, Otterson missed a glorious chance for victory when faced with an empty house, he was a shade heavy with his last rock and slipped through the house.

The shaken Albertans missed their first four shots on the second extra end and that enabled Winkler to drop in the winning shot. Asked to draw behind a guard, Winkler buried his shot completely in the four-foot ring, almost on the tee line.

Otterson tried a difficult chip with his first rock but was a shade heavy and Walker promptly added perfect cover. That left Otterson with an almost-impossible raise-split, and the Alberta skip couldn't pull it off.

Huskiettes Worry Mike More Than Floor at UBC

Like it or not, University of Victoria Huskiettes are off to Vancouver for tonight's start in the Western Canada Intercollegiate Athletic Association women's basketball final.

Of course, Vikettes are happy to have qualified for the four-team playoff tournament, which leads to the Canadian final, early next month. However the venue, University of B.C.'s War Memorial Gymnasium, has UVic athletic director Mike Elcock up in arms.

"We're violently opposed to playing on their (UBC) gymnasium floor," said an irate Elcock. It's a sprung floor and the ball goes all over the place. They've (UBC Thunderettes) played on it all season."

He says UVic offered to host the tournament or play in Saskatoon when suggestions were requested on a site for the final, which includes UBC, UVic, Saskatchewan Huskiettes and Manitoba Blonettes.

Thunderette coach Mike Gallo agrees with Elcock, but is playing down the site, mainly because his club must win tonight's opening game to advance to Saturday's final against the winner of the Thunderettes-Blonettes encounter.

Vikettes must play the tough Saskatchewan crew, which romped through league play undefeated.

"I agree with Mike, but since the site has been set I don't want to make a big thing of it and upset the team," said Gallo. "The opposition is tough enough without worrying about the floor."

Want to Test a Sailboat?

If you have a sailboat that you think is a winner, the Royal Victoria Yacht Club's invitation regatta is the place for you.

This year's regatta is slated to be sailed in waters off Sidney, Saturday, March 4, and Sunday, March 5.

Even boats that belong to no official yacht club can compete.

There will be one race on the Saturday, beginning at noon, and two shorter ones on the Sunday, with start guns being fired at 10 a.m. and 1 p.m.

Boats will be racing under the IOR (International Off-shore Rule) handicap system.

If you have neither a valid nor arbitrary IOR rating for your boat, there's still time to get one.

Application forms are at Boson's Locker, Sealtrend and Oak Bay Marina. Get one, fill in details of sail inventory and other specifics and have them at the RVYC's clubhouse on Ripon before midnight Sunday.

Those skippers whose boats already have ratings have until Thursday to register.

The Turkey Head Sailing Association expects to be well represented at the coming regatta with about 25 boats going to Sidney to compete.

They had a 17-mile long-distance race Sunday in ideal wind conditions of about 15 knots.

AROUND OUR SHORES

By Pat Dufour

Jack Paterson's Menehune was over-all winner, beating out Gerry Howell Jones' Heilwr, Bob Van Den Drieshe's Noosa, Greg Oliver's Sea Fax III and John Nelson's Kaya.

Canoe Bay Sailing Club boats will be out again Sunday for a race scheduled to start in the vicinity of the government wharf at Sidney at 10 a.m.

Miles Dighton's Obsession was the big winner when the club sailed a six-miler in luscious winds that caused four of the fleet to call it quits Saturday.

After her came Gordie Ingalls' Salt Shaker, Steve Christian's Invicta, Denny Davis' Rozinante and Ole Backhaus' Shalom.

Thunderbird-skippers will be competing for the top dog status in their class this weekend in mid-winter championship racing, to be held Saturday and Sunday at Oak Bay. A minimum of three races will be sailed with the first one beginning Saturday at 10 a.m.

Royal Vic. dinghy sailors will have a choice of three championships for which to compete Saturday. Juniors will race in El Toro, as will the men. Women trying for ladies' championship honors will be using Davidsons. Start time is 1 p.m. at Cadboro Bay.

Last Saturday Humphrey Golby was top Davidson skipper, being trailed by "Rocky" Rochford, Roy Barber, Jim Davis and Gordon Hobson.

In El Toro competition it was Tim Roots, followed by Ian Pickles, Tara Kenning, Jim Williams and Mike Williams.

John Readshaw was top X class dinghy sailor. He beat Doug Gray, Kaspar Schibli and Walter Roots.

This week's salute goes to one of Victoria's finest sailors, Neville Life, whose tragic death has left a void that will not easily be replaced.

Neville was a run-of-the-mill man. He gave more to the sport of sailing than he ever took away.

A courageous and competent sailor, he could take victory or defeat with equal grace.

Even in sickness, he served the Royal Vic well as commodore in 1971, taking his full part in preparations for Swiftsure and other events.

Mini-House Open Thursday

By DONNA CLEMENTS
Times Staff

LAKE COWICHAN — Lake Cowichan social studies teacher Murray Thompson is convinced the best way for students to learn about the parliamentary system is to experience it themselves.

Thompson has been organizing his classes into mini-houses of parliament for the past eight years. The "state" opening of the ninth parliament will be held Thursday.

"I feel quite committed to this method of teaching Grade 11 social studies," Thompson said. "It is one of the best ways to imprint the material into the students' minds."

Thompson uses Sir Erskine May's 14th edition of British Parliamentary procedure, a standard universal work, as his daily guide while the students conduct their own parliament.

Prime minister for the ninth parliament is 16-year-old Delbert Phillips, who heads a minority socialist government with 19 members. There are 13 Liberals, 10 Conservatives and two independents.

The school's parliament is modelled on the federal government with the only addition being a minister of education.

"We have a minister of education because matters in this field are of great importance to us," Thompson said.

He uses the federal government as a model "because I don't want the students to become just provincially minded. At the same time I make sure they don't lose sight of the provincial government."

Each student represents a constituency and participates in debates and discussions.

"We observe the full Parliamentary ritual such as etiquette with the usual bowing, scraping, fable-rapping. There are impromptu remarks and points of order thrown into sessions," Thompson said.

Students filled out questionnaires in December and were placed in political parties. They then held conventions and selected their leaders.

For the first time since he has been teaching the course this way, Thompson was elected Speaker of the house.

Each member of parliament represents an imaginary constituency in real cities in Eastern Canada. For example, Prime Minister Phillips represents Toronto - Queen's Park and Opposition Leader Audrey Jung represents Toronto - E. York Centre.

Thompson explained this helps introduce a prerequisite of the course in which each student must do an in-depth research study of an urban city.

By students having to prepare a "mammoth report" comprised of maps, a study on the city as a supplier and consumer in the area plus its history, economics and market background, Thompson feels they are then prepared to represent their constituency.

PRACTISING PROCEDURE for opening of Lake Cowichan School's ninth parliament are teacher and Speaker of the House Murray Thompson, Sergeant-at-arms (with school-made mace) Charles de Roy, 17, clerk of the house 16-year-old Kay Sugimoto and deputy clerk Wendy Waugh, 17. (Donna Clements Photo.)

The parliament generally deals with current affairs but also delves into history.

Thompson feels that his method of teaching the course helps students become better citizens because they gain a greater understanding of laws. At the same time, they learn public speaking.

Each year 35 students from the school are taken to a sitting of legislature in Victoria. In January the students actually sat in the house in M.L.A.'s seats and conducted a session. They had their own robes, and legal cravattes, gavel and mace made by students several years ago, treasury box, eagle legal quill, and parliamentary stationery.

Crisis Centre Needs Help

DUNCAN — Directors of the Cowichan Valley Crisis centre are looking for 14 persons to work full-time when operations begin April 1.

Publicity chairman June Yelland said today the organization whose goal is to help desperate people who can't cope with emergencies, is looking for a youth worker, a secretary, a screener-trainer who will need two assistants, and nine young persons.

The first five positions will earn around $360 a month while the young people, who will study the Cowichan Valley to determine what kind of problems exist and the type of assistance needed, will be paid less.

"They will also form an important nucleus of the centre," Mrs. Yelland said.

Application deadline is March 3. The address is Cowichan Crisis Centre, Box 723 Duncan.

NO MUMPS VACCINE FOR B.C.

The provincial government, which now provides immunization for the two types of measles, won't be buying a new three-in-one vaccine which would also add immunization from mumps.

Dr. A. A. Larsen, director of the provincial health department's division of epidemiology, said today mumps is not seen as a sufficiently significant problem to call for immunization at public expense.

The three-in-one vaccine recently approved by the federal food and drug directorate protects against rubella, rubella and mumps, the first two being types of measles.

The province now supplies both measles vaccines to children's clinics.

Larsen said triple and double vaccines are expensive. But a double vaccine covering both types of measles is being considered because it could save money in the long run.

The two measles vaccines

currently provided by the province have to be given separately. A double vaccine could be given in one injection and that together with less packaging may make the savings worthwhile.

The province also provides vaccinations for polio, typhoid, diphtheria and rheumatic fever.

A woman found unconscious Wednesday night in a ditch near the Malahat was identified by RCMP today as Dale Cloverdale, 19, of 1026 Pemberton, Victoria.

The girl remains unconscious and in critical condition in Cowichan District Hospital. She was taken there shortly before midnight Wednesday.

Miss Cloverdale carried no identification when she was found, and she was identified only when a friend came forward to police Thursday to report her missing from work.

Investigators still are baffled about the circumstances of the incident. The details as they have them so far:

Miss Cloverdale left work in the Sweet Sixteen shop at the Hillside Shopping Centre, 3176 Shelbourne, at 9 p.m. Wednesday, driving a blue 1964 Ford, licence number AAG-209, owned by her mother, Mrs. Pat Cloverdale of Sidney.

She was spotted unconscious in a ditch on the Shawnigan Lake cutoff, 1½ miles from the Malahat, at 11:15 p.m.

Bruises on the woman's face made it difficult to estimate her age, and police at first thought her to be about 14. She was clothed and had not been sexually assaulted.

Ronald Arthur Flewin, 20, a Victoria man with no fixed address, was charged with murder in provincial court today in the stabbing death of a 21-year-old man in a hotel parking lot early Thursday.

Flewin, a short, dark man with shoulder-length hair was remanded to March 3 to fix April 20 for preliminary hearing of the charge.

Prosecutor John Macintyre said the Crown would require "some time" to assemble evidence, including rounding up witnesses to the slaying and searching for the yet unlocated weapon.

Judge William Ogilvie said a reasonable delay would be justified, because some of the evidence could be expected to be "of a scientific nature," but he agreed with defence counsel Robert Price that the delay should not be an "indeterminate" one.

The preliminary hearing is expected to take two days.

Police reports on the events at the main parking lot of the Colony Motor Inn, Douglas and Hillside, show a wild scene involving more than 30 persons preceded the fatal stabbing.

An argument in the hotel beer parlor was continued outside after closing time at 1:30, with half a dozen young men taking part.

At one point before police officers arrived, a car was being driven at high speed in circles around the lot. Then a beer bottle was thrown through the windshield of the swerving car.

Constables Frederick Mills and Robert Blackie were interviewing witnesses to the melee shortly before 2 a.m., with their cruiser parked 50 feet from the hotel door, when Streeter stumbled to the side of the car and collapsed to the pavement.

The victim was pronounced dead from three stab wounds less than half an hour later in hospital.

A young man turned himself in at city police headquarters at 9:30 a.m. Thursday. He and a number of witnesses were interviewed before the non-capital murder charge was laid today.

Timber Land Subdivision Called Unfair

MacMillan Bloedel's plan to sell as real estate tracts of land no longer suitable for logging today was called unfair.

Mark Holmes, Capital Regional District director for Salt Spring Island said land bought at low prices for forestry purposes and enjoying a special low tax levy should not be used for land speculation profits.

The plan was announced Thursday by MB board chairman J. V. Clyne, who described the land involved as "primarily recreational."

"The owners of these tree farms are enjoying lower taxes than the ordinary holder of land," Holmes said. "It's unfair to permit lower-taxed timber land to be subdivided and to allow the owners to reap enormous capital gains."

He said low-taxed timber land should remain as timber land because it was acquired for that purpose and is taxed on that basis.

Holmes said MB owns about three-quarters of Galiano Island and about 5,000 acres on Salt Spring Island as well as property on other islands.

He said there is no possibility of preserving green belts on the Gulf Islands if the timber lands are used for real estate.

"This is just another Marathon Reality," he said. "It's horrible."

Bids 'Moderate' For Housing

Three bids totalling $1,070,455 were submitted Thursday for a dispersed rental housing project for low-income families in Saanich.

The proposals have to be studied in detail by the technical committee of the three partners involved — federal provincial and municipal — but Al. Edith Gunning, chairman of Saanich lands and housing committee, said today she hopes they will prove acceptable.

"I am delighted with the bids," she said. "It looks as if we may have 62 units of attractive housing in a variety of forms, and the prices are fairly moderate."

The scheme, unique in British Columbia, aims to get away from the "ghetto" concept of low-income housing by small, attractive groupings dispersed over a wide area of the municipality.

The specifications called for 60 dwellings of two and three-bedroom units. But Chris

Dowling, manager of Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, said the fact that 62 units have been submitted does not mean that two will have to be cut.

Krieger, Stricker and Company Ltd. submitted two bids — one for 20 units at a cost of $318,600 and the other for 18 units at $303,350.

J. McLaren Construction Ltd. submitted a 20 unit, $379,780 scheme and Victoria Home Builders Association entered a four-unit project at a cost of $68,725.

Requirements were that the proposals should be for 20 units or less, with 75 per cent of the accommodation being two-bedroom units.

The federal and provincial governments will share the capital cost, 75-25, and the operating subsidy will be split 75-12½-12½ between Ottawa, B.C. and Saanich.

Rents will be fixed by the B.C. Housing Management Commission which will operate the project.

Equal Amount for Greenbelts

He said logging companies have a certain responsibility to the people of British Columbia since the government over the years has leaned over backwards to assist them.

"For example, I'm under the impression that the more land a company has under tree farm licences, the more it receives cutting rights on Crown land."

Elton Anderson, a director of the Federation of B.C. naturalists, said the MB real estate venture will have a profound effect on regional district planning.

"If the company is going to do this, then the government should take out an equal amount of land from Crown forest lands and use it for parks and greenbelts," he said.

The MB venture has also added fuel to the Nitinat controversy, involving Trustat, Squamish and Hobbit lakes, the last unspoiled low-level lakes on Vancouver Island.

The National Parks Branch, backed by conservationists and environmentalists, are fighting to save the lakes' watershed from the axe, and to include the 8,000-acre forest area into the Pacific Rim National Park.

MacMillan Bloedel and B.C. Forest Products are opposing the proposal on the grounds that it would mean a loss of forest lands and reduce the flow of fibre to the mills.

Archibald Galbraith, chairman of the Association of Vancouver Island Municipalities, said MB's decision to go into real estate has shot down the argument the Nitinat triangle would mean a serious loss of timber.

"If they are going to use large tracts of their timber farms for real estate, they can hardly argue that they need the timber in the Nitinat triangle," he said.

Trespass Probe Started

By CLEMENT CHAPPEL

The federal department of transport is investigating a possible trespass on federal property by the Princess Patricia apartment development in West Bay.

If the trespass is confirmed, construction of a public walkway along the Victoria waterfront may result.

City officials said the alleged discovery that the Princess Patricia development and a nearby Diamond Developments building have both encroached on federally-owned foreshore could be a bargaining lever with which to open up the waterfront.

DOT officials were not available for comment but city sources confirmed that

DOT is surveying the foreshore.

The Princess Patricia was completed about seven years ago. The Diamond Developments project is under construction.

Encroachment on the foreshore by Diamond Developments first came to light last year midway during construction.

MP David Anderson was promised an investigation by DOT minister Don Jamieson, and Diamond Developments did not deny the charge.

On Thursday, Victoria council received a report from the Victoria Advisory Planning Commission which contained the allegation that the Princess Patricia had also illegally filled in the shoreline. The VAPC report says: "It appears that a similar trespass took place when the Princess Patricia apartment was built on the adjoining site, and fill appears to have encroached on to the foreshore, again on to lands controlled by the federal Department of Transport."

The APC report adds that "the matter of public access across these parcels is now being explored."

In a report prepared by the city planning department yet to be made public, a waterfront promenade is proposed.

Hope for this promenade was raised when the federal government recently promised to sell the city the Bayview Estate which is the last open piece of natural land in the West Bay area within city boundaries.

Completion of the waterfront promenade would be greatly facilitated by access to the Diamond Developments and Princess Patricia properties.

The VAPC report discusses the foreshore question as a sidelight of its recommendation to refuse a rezoning request on another adjacent property.

West Bay Investments, the company that built the Princess Patricia, had applied to rezone the adjacent property from highrise to ordinary apartment jurisdiction.

The West Bay company is controlled by its parent, Slegg Bros. Lumber Ltd. The Princess Patricia was sold three years ago to Amon Investments, a Vancouver company.

ALDERMEN BACK NIGHT FERRY

Victoria council Thursday supported a drive by local business and other organizations to get a night ferry route between here and the Lower Mainland.

Council's motion was backed strongly by Ald. Ove Witt, who said citizens should "put a lot of pressure on the government to do something for us."

There are many business and sports organizations, as well as private individuals, who would benefit greatly if the B.C. Ferry service operated a late night crossing.

"This would be very important for the community at large, and particularly for the business community," Witt said.

Ald. Mike Young said he understands the CPR is planning to start a night freight route between Victoria and Vancouver. Any such route should be on the public ferry service, he said.

B.C.'s Two-Day Naval Fleet Relieved by Old Rainbow Hand

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

An English octogenarian who was in on the birth-pangs of Canada's navy visited CFB Esquimalt on Thursday.

He is John Elliott. He's 81 and still limber enough to scramble down the hatchway of a submarine.

He was aboard the cruiser HMCS Rainbow when she steamed into Esquimalt Harbor Nov. 7, 1910, having left the British port of Portsmouth in August of that year.

He was 19 then, serving as captain's valet to the Royal Navy skipper, Capt. J. D. D. Steward.

On Thursday, he toured the dockyard and was shown over the Canadian submarine that now bears his old ship's name.

This is Elliott's first visit to Victoria since he returned to England in 1915.

His first reaction:

"Oh, my God — look at all those highrises!"

In addition to being present at the birth pangs of Canada's navy, Elliott witnessed one of the most artful acts of smuggling carried out on this coast.

The contraband goods — two submarines!

This happened at the outbreak of the First World War.

B.C. Premier Richard McBride, concerned over the lack of coastal defences, made a deal with J. V. Paterson of the Seattle Drydock.

They met in secret at the Union Club. McBride wrote a cheque for $1,150,000 and endorsed it.

By doing so, the province then became owner of its own navy — two submarines in the Seattle drydock, built for the Chilean government.

The submarines were up for grabs because Chile had fallen down on the payments.

They were smuggled out of Seattle. If the authorities had known their departure would have been stopped because it meant breaking American neutrality.

Elliott was aboard the sloop HMCS Shearwater that escorted the two submarines back to Esquimalt.

The submarines, named Iquique and Antofagasta, belonged to B.C. for two days.

They were then bought by the Canadian government, serving here for three years before leaving for Halifax and England in 1917.

Elliott will shortly be heading for the Queen Charlotte Islands on the last leg of his pilgrimage into the past.

B.C. Producers Advised To Sharpen Sale Skills

Better timing, promotion and packaging would help B.C. producers meet the competition from imported fruits and vegetables, the legislative agriculture committee was told Thursday.

W. A. Eadie, produce division manager for Woodward's Stores, Vancouver, said his firm has a policy of buying B.C. produce unless forced to other sources by "irregularity of supply, seasonability, seasonality, quality, variety or price differential."

But he asked a number of questions which if answered would help strengthen B.C. produce in the marketplace, including:

Why do B.C. growers come on the market prematurely before proper maturity is reached? Why can't individual growers be specified through the marketing board system? Why continue growing varieties that have lost popularity? Why not more discussion between growers and the people that sell the final product? And why do B.C.

products with the exception of apples, cherries, pears and apricots arrive on the market in less saleable conditions than imports?

Eadie said more promotion is needed and pointed out that Idaho potatoes "got their start" in popularity through an advertising campaign that featured a nude Marilyn Monroe picture on 100-pound bags of potatoes.

He told the committee that one of the problems for local growers is that year-round supply of imports has eliminated the "excitement of the season" for different products.

But good promotion should be able to restore that excitement to assist B.C. produce, he said.

Asked by a committee member if food shoppers generally don't know what to look for when buying fruits and vegetables, Eadie replied:

"You can read all the books you want but the vast majority of shops with their eyes."

After pointing out that the grading system refers more to size and shape of produce than its over-all quality, Eadie was asked if perhaps there shouldn't be a grading system based on taste as well.

He replied that there would be "nothing wrong with that" but he stressed that shoppers' preferences are often based on personal background, particularly geographical.

Woodward's has to import Idaho potatoes, for instance, because of the numbers of people who insist on them. As a former Alberta resident, Eadie said he thinks there's nothing like an Alberta potato.

He said it is surprising how much some people will pay for a well-promoted import product and gave the following price comparisons for Canada No. 1 graded potatoes, 10-pound bags:

Lower mainland variety, 59 cents; Interior B.C., 65; Alberta, 79; Idaho, 89; California fresh dug, $1.48; Florida new potatoes, $1.65.

Eadie said the prices were for the Vancouver area for early in February this year and that all varieties were in demand.

Job Plan Helps Unemployed

By HELEN MELNYK
Times Staff

The opportunities for youth concept has grown to include the big people.

This winter more than 500 Victorians are involved in the federal make-work program sponsored by Canada Manpower. This includes on-the-job training as well as the local initiatives program, where municipalities and various organizations co-ordinate work projects and upgrading courses for people already employed in industry.

The idea is to get unemployed people off the welfare rolls and back into the economy, according to Frank Schroeder, acting assistant manager for the Victoria branch of Canada Manpower.

Rather than waiting for job slots to open up, people are encouraged to create their own work, he said. The government pays all or a great part of the salaries in hopes that eventually the work projects will become self-sufficient.

The work doesn't necessarily have to be profit-oriented but may be involved in bettering the community, he added. There are projects run by groups to establish a low cost dental clinic, counsel and rehabilitate alcoholics and drug users, and to help the aged and invalids.

One of the newest programs under the federal scheme is on-the-job training, with the federal government subsidizing an employer to train employees for work where he could not afford to do so otherwise.

The program gets unskilled people some job training and earning at the same time and gives employers a boost in expanding their business, Schroeder said.

Many employers put off hiring more people because they cannot afford to pay wages for a trainee who is not productive for a period of time, he said.

This is particularly true of the small business man, Schroeder said. To take on a new staffer may mean that he will have to pay him wages for three months and not get any immediate returns. This may mean losing out on $1,500.

Under the plan, an employer can have the wages of an employee subsidized by the government during a six to 12 week training period, Schroeder said. All applications are carefully screened by Manpower to insure that the employer intends to actually train the person rather than just use him for a period of time.

Trainees are paid an average of $100 a week, plus fringe benefits such as employment insurance. About 56 Victorians are training for such jobs as sewer pipe cleaners, machine operators, tire service repairmen, travel agents, and instrument repairmen.

Quick Entry

Schroeder says the on-the-job training may make for a quicker entry into employment than classroom training courses.

"Training in the classroom can in no way reproduce actual working conditions," he said. "After finishing school, a person may have a certain amount of theoretical knowledge but he still has to sell himself to the employer."

"One of the features of the training program is that a person is involved in the actual job site. An employer has the opportunity to assess his work right from the beginning of the training."

Mrs. Dorothy Wilson is learning how to assemble and engrave trophies for a trophy shop under the training scheme. Her 20 years experience as a housewife was no help when she hit the job market.

Since her youngest child entered school last fall, she found that there wasn't enough to do at home, and also that her husband's weekly paycheck could do with a shot in the arm.

Another trainee is Mrs. Belle Floyd who's learning how to assemble hearing aids. After moving to Victoria in June 1969 with her family, she was unsuccessful in her job hunting until she got involved in the training program.

Enjoy Work

Though both women said they enjoy their work, there is no guarantee that they will be taken on permanently once the initial training period is over.

Although there is no certainty that a trainee will get a job, he will be in a better position when looking for a job, Schroeder said. If he can't get work in the same field, he may be qualified in related areas.

The federal program may be responsible for a number of weekly psyches, but there are still many unemployed. As of the end of January of this year, 5,600 Victorians were registered with Manpower. The figure may include those already employed and merely seeking better positions, but it doesn't take into account all the people looking for work.

Schroeder doesn't think that the program is a drop in the bucket.

He foresees that the plan will have long lasting effects on the economy.

"And the psychological effect on the people back working makes it worthwhile," he added.

Funds are still available to assist training projects, he said. Applications will be accepted until March 31.

Don't Ignore Birth Of 'Special Child'

DEAR ABBY: This is my first letter to a column:

How should one react to the news that their friends have had an "abnormal" child? I think I can answer that because we had one. We were lucky enough to be told immediately of our baby's condition and did not have the agony of the slow realization that "something was wrong."

Feeling it best to face the problem, we freely told our friends and relatives about our "special" child. Although we knew very little about what to expect, he was our baby, and we knew we wanted to keep him with us. He is now a "lovable, mischievous 11-year-old Mongoloid, going to a special school, and we have never regretted our decision.

Perhaps "congratulations" are not in order, but to ignore the presence of a new baby in a home, when you would normally express interest in, I think, cruel. To this day I remember the pleasure I felt when someone came to see our baby, to hold him, and to let me talk about him.

One of the burdens a mother of a retarded child has is not having anyone with whom to compare notes about her child's progress. Every tiny gain has a tremendous important meaning for the mother of a handicapped child.

So, do acknowledge the birth of a special child. Or send a little gift. Or send flowers to the mother. Continue to show an interest (not curiosity), and encourage the parents to get in touch with their local society for retarded children for help with mutual problems. It will be rewarded with much love, affection, and gratitude.—Edith.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069.

Whole Grain Cereals Top Nutritionist's List

By DAVID MAY
Times Staff

Mothers, if you've got your children's health at heart, prepare for a struggle at the breakfast table.

All those nice, spreading, sugar-coated flakes of cereal are doing your offspring more harm than good, according to Pat Wolczuk, nutritionist with the provincial health department.

The cereals aimed at the manufacturer of child consumers — products with names like Count Chocula, Cap'n Crunch and Rascals — carry no indication of vitamin content and have negligible food value, says Miss Wolczuk.

She places cereals into five groups. At the top of her nutritional list comes whole grain cereals, such as oatmeal or rolled oats, high in thiamin and niacin, two essential B vitamins.

Next come the non-sweetened cereals made from a wheat base. Our nutritionist singled out Kellogg's Pep, made of whole wheat flakes, as one of the best for food value in this category. She also considered General Mills' Total to be good, but pointed out that its cost per one ounce serving is higher than the Kellogg's product.

Non-sweetened enriched cereals fall into the third category. This includes Kellogg's Corn Flakes, Rice Krispies, Nabisco Rice Flakes and Kellogg's Product 19.

Miss Wolczuk uses the term "non-sweetened" to distinguish this group from the sugar-coated cereal variety. The cereals' basic ingredients may still, however, contain up to 12 per cent sugar.

The term "vitamin enriched cereal" makes Miss Wolczuk uneasy.

"We don't really know what the manufacturer's basic product contains, before the enriching is done," she says. The point is, if you're beginning with a nutritionally low product, you've got to put in quite a few additives before food value rises meaningfully.

The vague may currently be to advertise your cereal as "vitamin enriched," but there are still some cereals, rated by Miss Wolczuk as non-sweetened and non-enriched, which give no indication on the package as to basic content, far less added vitamins. This includes General Mills' Wheaties and Quaker Corn Flakes, for example.

Pre-sweetened enriched cereals like Kellogg's Sugar Frosted Flakes and Sugar Snacks are saved from the bottom of the nutritionist's heap by the presence of their added thiamin and niacin (they also contain iron, but this, to a person on a well-balanced diet, is merely a bonus, says Miss Wolczuk).

The great danger of this group lies in this sugar coating. Miss Wolczuk says that tests have now proved conclusively that it is the sugar in a child's food intake that leaves the coating of plaque that can lead to dental decay. Pre-sweetened cereals contain around 45 per cent sugar, as opposed to the 12 per cent in most ready-to-eat brands.

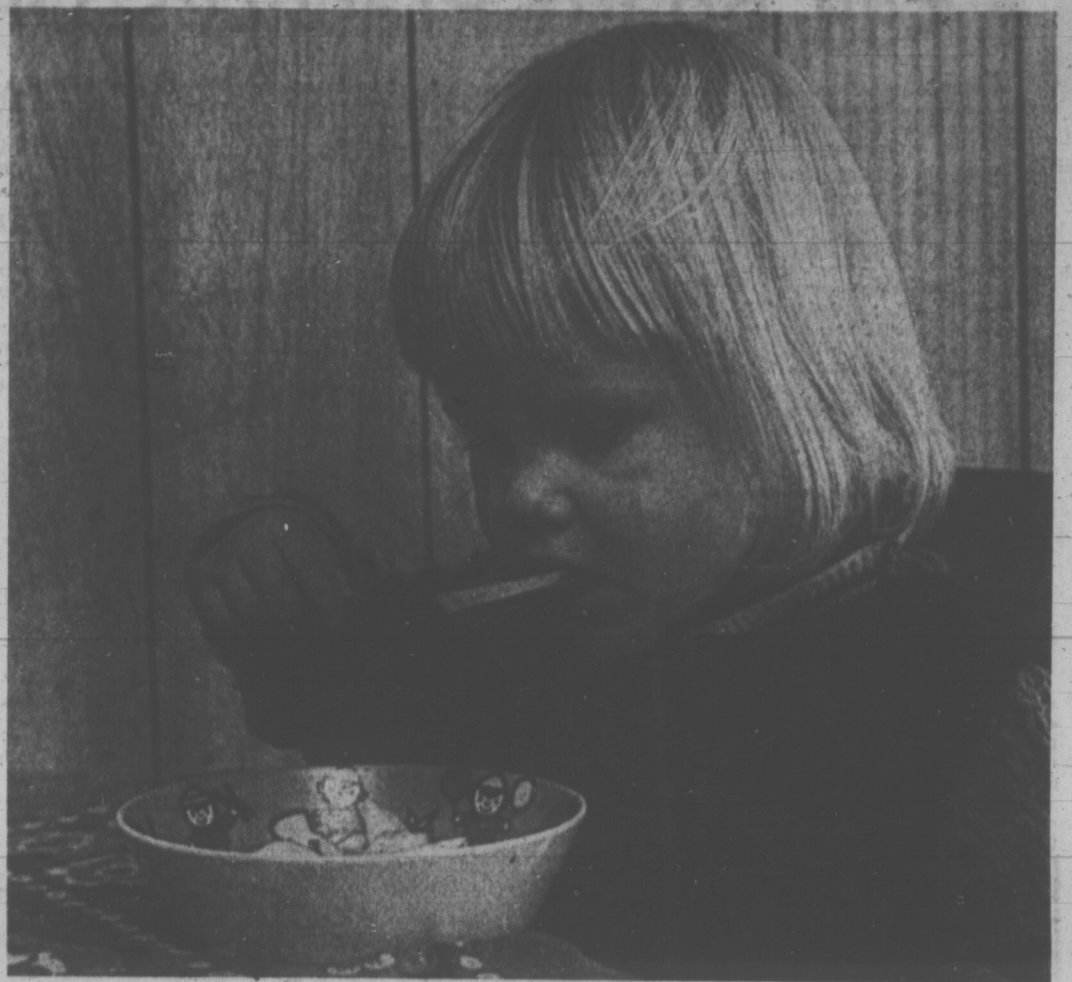

The final classification, that of pre-sweetened, non-enriched cereals embraces such exotically titled products as Quaker's Honey Munch, General Mills' Count Chocula, Franken Berry and Kellogg's Rice Krispies and Cornflakes. These, Miss Wolczuk says, have no redeeming vitamin qualities and are frequently eaten without milk. This means the eater will not get riboflavin, also known as vitamin B2. These products are also expensive per one ounce serving.

These brands are heavily advertised, especially on television, and are attractively packaged with the young consumer in mind. How can a mother, should she wish to, resist the temptation to give junior what he wants?

The answer, says Miss Wolczuk, is simply to remember what a breakfast cereal is supposed to do as part of a balanced diet.

The value of a one-ounce serving of cereal should equal the food value of one slice of whole wheat bread. This bread base is taken as it is known to supply the B vitamins, niacin and thiamin. A teenage boy needs 1.1 mg. of thiamin a day and 11.8 mg. of niacin. Ideally, one third of this should be derived from breakfast. The milk poured over cereal gives the necessary vitamin B2.

When shopping, check your cereal packages carefully. Look to see if the product you're buying has added vitamins and if so, how much. Then, having established nutritional content, divide the cost of the package by the number of ounces it contains. Sometimes, two or more products contain exactly the same proportion of vitamins, but prices may vary considerably.

Many breakfast cereals aimed at children don't indicate vitamin content

'Progressive' Approach Aids Guelph's Learning Disabled

By WALTER McINNIS
Times Staff

Recognition that learning disabilities in children can be the result of temperament, not an absolute handicap of intelligence or perception, has led to a promising remedial teaching program being developed at Guelph University in Ontario.

Dr. Dennis Stott, head of the university's Centre for Educational Disabilities, says the program embodies primarily "self-learning, self-correcting discovery methods" and is geared to the child who cannot function in a normal educational institution.

Stott has been working in the area of learning disabled children for approximately 20 years. He was educated at Cambridge, Ontario and the University of London and has been on the faculty at Guelph for the past six years.

He is in Victoria to address today's annual convention of the Greater Victoria Teachers' Association.

Practical Value

"My chief field is learning disabilities from the point of view of correction, and one of our chief concerns at Guelph has been to develop remedial programs that will be of practical value to teachers," he said in an interview Thursday.

"First of all, we work from a philosophy we think is progressive as opposed to the old, standard, orthodox approach which consists of testing the child's intelligence and seeing his disability in terms either of deficit of intelligence or perceptual handicap.

"We reject that because, first of all, intelligence is such an intangible thing and there are so many inconsistencies. It is quite obvious when you get to know these children they are not unintelligent."

The Guelph remedial teaching program begins by teaching the child how to learn.

New Approach

"In a systematic way," Stott says, "it is a new approach. It has been realized by some psychologists that people do have to learn how to learn."

"This has been realized at the theoretical level, but up to now I don't think anybody has actually embodied this in a teaching program."

The Guelph program, to be published in the near future by the Gage Company, Toronto, has been named Flying Start Learning to Learn Kit.

Stott says it consists of a series of games children enjoy playing but at which they cannot do well without a productive application of their minds.

"In other words, they have to think — they can't get anywhere by guessing."

"It also trains the child who withdraws from any kind of challenge because of a lack of confidence," Stott says. "It starts him on a very easy game and gradually builds him up, in the same way a physiotherapist would build up someone who had a severe physical disability. . . we do the same with the child's learning habits."

"We build up his confidence."

Stott says application of the approach has been successful, but he hesitates to trot out statistics.

"We tend not to emphasize this aspect at the present time because so much misuse has been made of this kind of thing, especially by people who are naturally interested in their own methods. It's for other people to take our methods and test them, impartially."

According to Stott, observations indicate that learning disabilities in children are little more than an extension of their total personalities.

"If he is behaving in a disorganized, impulsive way in his life, if he has this kind of temperament, then when he comes to learning he won't have the patience to think things out. He will bypass his intelligence and whatever intelligence he has will be beside the point."

Behavior Problem

"In other words, we think more of handicaps of intelligence, but of handicaps of temperament, behavior."

Stott, in speaking of "learning disabled children," is primarily concerned with the child within the ordinary school system who cannot cope, who is failing his grades.

But the term can encompass those conveniently labelled retardates, as well. And the Guelph system can be applied with some degree of success in teaching that class of child.

"If you go into any school full of retardates," he says, "you will find children who have simply retreated into retardation as a means for withdrawal from the challenges of learning, again of whom one can say nothing about what their intelligence may be."

Easier Way

"They have developed very sophisticated strategies for putting on this pretense of dullness."

It is a comfortable position for the child, he says, because it is easier than struggling along behind a number of ordinary children.

"I'm quite convinced there is a proportion, a significant proportion, of children who have been labelled retardates and put in a school for the trainable retarded who in fact have temperamental handicaps."

Stott Thursday evening toured the Greater Victoria School Board's Learning Assistance Centre for remedial teaching, and said it is one of the best he has seen.

He said he will recommend to members of the Guelph public school board a visit to Victoria, to examine it.

Help Pollution Fighters

Are you concerned about oil pollution around our shores? Do you shudder at the possibility of a super-tanker piling up on the rocks somewhere around southern Vancouver Island and spilling its cargo?

Then listen to Victoria MP David Groos who, with his colleague David Anderson, MP for Esquimalt-Saanich, is working to prevent any such nightmare coming true.

Anderson is striving to stop the Trans-Alaska Pipeline System altogether, which would automatically cut off tanker traffic from Valdez to Bellingham, and Groos is working toward establishing better controls on the shipping we already have in this area.

Speaking last weekend at the annual dinner of the Lower Island Liberal Association, David Groos reminded his audience that there are a number of threats to the preservation of our beaches and shores, but by far the greatest is the threat of oil pollution.

Not only the threat that will come from vessels passing by in the future but from those that are here right now or will come here "whether or not the Trans-Alaska Pipeline becomes a reality."

Hits Water

Do we really know what happens when oil in quantity hits the water? he questioned.

To begin with, it doesn't all float. Some of it sinks to the bottom. A small amount mixes with the water. It moves across the surface with the winds, it moves below the surface with the tides, and it rolls with those same tides and currents along the bottom.

"Everywhere it goes," he elizabeth forbes

said, "it kills and fouls, sometimes mercifully quickly and sometimes very slowly. It gets into the marine life cycle and poisons untold generations of marine life." Quoting from a report he prepared as general rapporteur to the military committee of the North Atlantic Assembly, Groos told of "a relatively small spill" that occurred in 1969 off Woods Hole on the Massachusetts shore.

Oil Blanket

Ecological effects of the spreading blanket of oil beneath the surface were severe. The oil decimated offshore marine life in the area of the spill and as it spread out across the bottom of the bay in the following months it retained its toxicity and ruled out commercial shell fishing for a good many years.

Tankers they are building for the Valdez-Bellingham route will carry about a million barrels of crude, Groos then pointed out. It will need three of them, every day, to take the maximum Valdez output.

Conversion tables tell you a million barrels, if spilled in our waters, would make a trail of crude oil 18 feet wide and an inch thick for a distance of 700 miles.

Therefore he believes the need right now is for better navigational aids "on this wild British Columbia coast," better pilotage arrangements,

He says the three "slick lickers" that will be stationed at Victoria, Vancouver and Prince Rupert, are a step in the right direction but they are "not nearly enough protection for our vulnerable shores." Much, much more is needed.

He intends to continue to fight for better controls. And he asks every person who is haunted by the fear of what could happen here, to join him.

Consumer Promised 'Bundle of Rights'

One more staff member may be added to the provincial Consumer Affairs Office, but there are no plans to build a large staff. Attorney-General Leslie Peterson said early today.

Peterson said the legislature has application for the extra staff member is before the provincial treasury board.

He was replying to Eileen Quilty (NDP — Burnaby North) who said consumer affairs officer Michael Hinton had made a report to the legislature seeking more help.

Peterson said the government's approach to consumer affairs is to provide a "bundle of rights" to consumers and leave them the option of exercising the rights. He said there was no plan to build up a large branch to "look over the shoulder" of consumers and companies.

Allan Williams (L — West Vancouver-Howe Sound) in a scorching attack on Peterson said his consumer affairs philosophy was "to be strong" with consumers.

Williams said the so-called "bundle of rights" was more like a "Chinese puzzle" to consumers. The people who most need the help of consumer laws — such as elderly persons trapped by doorstep sales — are the least likely to be familiar with the law's protections, he said.

Williams said the understaffing of regulatory agencies under Peterson's control shows he just can't administer his department.

"You haven't the least understanding of your responsibilities," Williams charged after accusing Peterson of "winking" and "giggling" over serious issues.

"You fall and you fall and you fall," Williams said.

"British Columbia's Anthony Eden," someone called out.

Williams disagreed, saying: "Anthony-Eden had class."

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — Adoption of children, as practised by Canada's Eskimo people is legal and binding, Mr. Justice William Morrow of the Northwest Territories court ruled this week.

Traditional verbal agreements to give or accept children for adoption, within the Eskimo community, are binding legally even though no court procedure is involved, he said.

The decision was given in the case of a mother of four daughters who sought to reverse the adoption of one of her four children.

Until now, there had been no specific ruling by the courts on the legal status of custom adoption.

Mr. Justice Morrow, in a 19-page judgment, said the child was given away when the mother became ill and required prolonged treatment in Edmonton.

The father was unable to take care of the girls, so they were given to families of friends and relatives.

Egg Board Practices Unfair, Backbencher Says

Opposition MLAs are not the only members who have trouble getting cabinet ministers to answer questions.

On Thursday, Dudley Little (SC - Skeena) had to wait until Premier Bennett left the legislature before he could get Agriculture Minister Cyril Shelford to say something about egg marketing boards.

The Sacred backbencher raised the question of unfair practices in the egg marketing board for the second consecutive day.

While he was speaking, Bennett said to Shelford,

"Don't answer, he's made his point."

Shelford then sent a note to Little saying he'd answer later in the debate.

TWO DISTRICTS

Later, Little again denounced practices of the egg marketing board, because he said they discriminated against producers in northern B.C.

He called for northern and southern egg production districts. He said one of his constituents may lose $63,000 in a court case for over-production of eggs.

"If he loses the case, he will lose $63,000 and we'd have to depend on the Fraser Valley for eggs," he said.

The producer is in Terrace. Without the production of his 30,000 chickens, said Little, eggs will have to be shipped north at a cost of $3,000 per crate.

Weekly cost would be $30,000. Shelford later denied Little's estimate of shipping costs. The minister said the cost is $350 a crate and he warned that B.C. over-produces eggs.

Shelford said the producer is capable of supplying enough eggs for the entire province, but that would destroy the pricing system and glut the market.

'UNREST' CITED

He said the answer of regional distribution problems is for someone to buy out a Lower Mainland producer and move the flock north.

Shelford emphasized only five per cent of B.C. egg producers resent the way the board is operating. Gordon Dowling (NDP - Burnaby Edmonds) said Shelford is wrong.

"There is a great deal of unrest on Vancouver Island and the Interior about the priority given to the Lower Mainland producer," Dowling said.

The house briefly discussed again the question of selling apples in liquor stores. Shelford said it would cost too much money to put in the required cooling systems, and Opposition Leader Dave Barrett said the liquor control board made $70 million in 1970 and that's enough profit to pay for coolers.

Barrett said the question is simply of finding provincial outlets to break the control chain stores have over distribution of fruit.

Robert Williams (NDP - Vancouver East) said government policies for licensing egg producers encourage development of large industries.

In some cases, he said, it would cost $350,000 to buy a producing flock. It's not good enough for Shelford to say buy out a flock and move it north because of these high prices, Williams said.

He said the main problem is the government's lack of imagination in dealing with agriculture.

"That's what happens when you have an old government," said Williams.

Williams asked Shelford to try to convince fellow cabinet ministers to make public the results of the Canada Land Inventory studies which contain valuable information for regional planning.

B.C. is the only province which hasn't made the information public, Williams said. Shelford said he would try to have the studies released.

His estimates were approved late in the afternoon after a generally friendly debate.

DRESSED DOWN

'A Body of Evidence' on Topless Dancers ...

A quiet New Democrat backbencher gently dressed down Attorney-General Leslie Peterson Thursday for his actions against topless and bottomless dancing.

James Lorimer (NDP - Burnaby-Willingdon) said he noticed that ever since last December when Peterson "teed off" against the topless and bottomless dancers, he was aware that the attorney-general "holds no brief" for these girls.

But Lorimer said it was probably wrong for Peterson to have asked whether people would want their daughters dancing in topless clubs, because most of the performers are married.

"He should have asked 'would you want your wife doing this,'" Lorimer said.

"Now the answer to that, I won't presume to say, but it appears the club owners were more afraid of losing their liquor licences rather than of being convicted under the Criminal Code."

Peterson was about to rise, but Lorimer said he knew the attorney-general would deny ever having directly threatened the clubs with loss of their liquor licences.

But that was implied, he said. Lorimer then referred to events in January when Vancouver police photographed activities at the topless clubs.

"He sent a number of police officers to these places to take photographs because he wanted a body of evidence," Lorimer told Peterson.

Moments later the house erupted in laughter.

"Oh, it took you longer to get that than I thought it would," he said.

Lorimer said it is bad for police morale and damaging to their generally good public image if they have to take such pictures without charges having been laid.

"Now there's only two points I wish to raise in all this," Lorimer said. "Does the attorney-general regard himself as the custodian of public morality and believe that the state should regulate the entertainment world and when the attorney-general referred to liquor licences it amounted to a threat to topless clubs."

Some people, he said, prefer to see topless and bottomless dancing rather than going to a ballet, and they should have this choice.

He said Peterson only has three choices in this situation: charge the clubs and the dancers, change the law or forget about it.

"I strongly urge the attorney-general to follow the third option. It is my opinion that it's a very dangerous practice for a government to threaten to take action against an individual if that individual refuses to conform — not to the laws of the land — but to the whims of the attorney-general."

Lorimer also said the province should stop awarding queen's counsel titles to lawyers. He said law is the only profession which has such status symbols.

Many people have criticized the latest list of QC awards which included the name of Vancouver mayor Tom Campbell. Lorimer said he wasn't going to criticize any individual on the list.

"I say they all quality and I'm opposed to them all," He noted the award originally was bestowed upon defenders of the king or queen of England.

"If the QCs that are appointed here were advising the queen, the monarchy would have died years ago, and I say this with all due respect and without prejudice," Lorimer said.

Chateau de Shelford, Please

If the agriculture department can develop a species of B.C. grape to make first-rate wines, it should be called Chateau de Shelford in honor of the minister, the legislature was told Thursday.

Denis Cooke (NDP - New Westminster) said Agriculture Minister Cyril Shelford should take the lead in encouraging research on the subject.

The appeal came in a brief debate on the quality of B.C. wine, which Cooke said left much to be desired. Premier Bennett entered the debate briefly to announce: "B.C. wines are better than Ontario wines."

"How would you know?" a number of MLAs asked in unison and Bennett, a teetotaler, laughed.

Shelford, responding to a query from Herb Capozzi (SC - Vancouver Centre) said he had written national airlines asking them to serve western wine on eastbound flights. Capozzi said eastern wine is served on westbound flights.

'GOODBYE RYE' STORE SHELVED

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson Thursday rejected a plea for a duty-free liquor store at Vancouver International Airport.

Peterson told the legislature such a store would mean a loss of tourist revenue from travellers who now must buy their goodbye B.C. rye at a government liquor store.

The request was made by Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East) who said B.C. has a reputation throughout the world because it doesn't have a duty-free store.

"When people fly out of sin-free British Columbia they should be able to have a bottle of Canadian rye whiskey tucked under their arm," Macdonald said.

After Peterson rejected his request, Macdonald said, "You're defaming British Columbia in the eyes of the travelling public."

Liberal Urges Commission On B.C. Crime

By BRUCE YEMEN and PETER McNELLY
Times Staff

A royal commission into crime in British Columbia was urged in the legislature Thursday by Garde Gardom (L—Vancouver-Point Grey).

Gardom said Attorney-General Leslie Peterson was failing to deal with crime and referred specifically to the heroin trade in B.C. which at $150 million annually rivals the gross revenue of B.C. Telephone Company and B.C. Hydro.

"You've got to stop pussy-footing with the crime problem," Gardom said, suggesting an immediate conference of law enforcement agencies.

He also suggested parole be granted only after careful examination of the probability of rehabilitation or likelihood of repeating criminal activities.

Replying to Gardom, Peterson said B.C.'s over-all crime rate declined in 1971 but there was a substantial increase in crimes of violence.

'Transients' Blamed

Some of the increase, he said, must be blamed on the increase of transients from Eastern Canada.

Peterson said he had recommended to Ottawa last summer that there be no parole for drug traffickers. He said judges are sentencing traffickers and seeing them freed within a few months.

"That's why there is this uprising at the moment from our provincial judges. We need heavier penalties."

He said he doesn't think judges should have full power over who should get paroled, but they must be consulted. Peterson added he hoped he would be able this session to introduce a "rather large" bill regarding investment companies and their regulation by the securities commission.

The legislation has been under study for some time, he said. Peterson added he has not received any requests from the commission for extra staff.

Gardom also called for: —Compensation for victims of crime in a provincial program which might later be melded with a proposed federal program.

—Additional staff for the provincial securities commission to help battle shady operators on Howe Street.

—A public inquiry into the law governing securities and financial corporations.

—A law requiring company balance sheets to reflect true values rather than face values and to be accompanied by statutory declarations.

—Establishment of the right of citizens to sue the Crown.

Poor Get Bad Deal

Robert Strachan (NDP—Cowichan-Malahat) said people will not respect the law in B.C. until they believe there is full equality before it.

He said it is widely believed that poor people get a bad deal in court compared with more wealthy citizens.

Welfare mothers get fined and sometimes jailed if they defraud the rehabilitation department and people go to jail for six months for stealing a steak from a grocery store.

But "white collar crime" is rarely punished in comparison, Strachan said.

"There's probably more white-collar crime than any other crime in Canada," he said.

Strachan called for more legal aid and application of the service to civil and criminal cases.

Peterson said much remains to be done in this field but legal aid fees have been increased and Ottawa may soon enter a cost-sharing agreement with B.C. which will make even more services possible.

What Recipe for Justice?

Brandishing a copy of McLean's Guide with a picture of Premier Bennett on the front and a cigarette advertisement on the back, Bill Hartley (NDP—Yale Lillooet) asked Peterson:

"What is the recipe for justice in B.C.?"

He said he wanted to know if the Victoria newspapers published photos of Bennett and Peterson and ran favorable editorials, would they be able to publish cigarette advertisements without reprisal.

Barrie Seaton — North Vancouver-Seymour — Peterson had opened the office of attorney-general to derision by threatening withdrawal of government advertising from the newspapers.

Clark said government advertising has continued to run on KVOS-TV, Bellingham, Wash. "and they have always run beer ads."

Peterson didn't reply to Clark's statements but asked Hartley if he could find any government advertisements in McLean's Guide.

Peterson also recited the list of all MLAs who voted for the Tobacco Advertising Restriction Act when it was passed by the legislature last year. It passed unanimously.

Clark and Robert Wenman (SC—Delta) pressed Peterson for reforms in laws governing the right of credit reporting agencies to gather "inaccurate, hearsay" evidence which amounts to "legalized slander."

Wenman said people must have access to their files and the right to make corrections. Files must be updated regularly and wiped clean after three years of good credit, he said.

Clark said Wenman had voted against a private member's bill continuing such reforms in a previous legislative session.

Slides Kill 9

OASTA, Italy (AP) — Dozens of snowslides which rolled down Italy's western Alps last weekend killed nine persons and swept away or damaged dozens of houses, authorities reported Thursday. Four persons were buried and killed by avalanches in the Aosta Valley. Five lost their lives under snowslides in mountainous villages in the Piedmont region.

Privacy Act 'Useless Baggage' — MLA

The provincial Privacy Act is "useless baggage" and should be dumped from the statute books, a New Democrat MLA told the legislature. Ernie Hall (NDP—Surrey) said only three charges have been laid under the 1968 statute. In one case there was no decision, the second was a "Mexican standoff" and the third saw the decision reversed, he said.

Hall said Peterson had promised to study the act pending outcome of a Supreme Court of Canada case last year. But there has not been any action from the attorney-general.

"Where are the many amendments? What's happened to the decision from the Supreme Court of Canada?" Hall said he used to go easy on Peterson because he also held the labor portfolio. But that ended in 1971, Hall said.

as Peterson went into "semi-retirement" with only one job.

"So his job should have been twice as good this year but it wasn't," Hall said.

"... the best Canadian feature-length movie ever made. It is also one of the finest released anywhere in the world in 1971."
—CLYDE GILMOUR, Toronto Star

"The one that's truly worth celebrating, however, is Mon Oncle Antoine—the beautiful, exhilarating French-Canadian movie, directed by Claude Jutra."

"Antoine's opening means that the best Canadian movie ever made has finally been given a chance to reach the public."
—MARTIN KNELMAN, Globe and Mail

"I think people like Claude Jutra should be considered national heroes in the arts."
"It is a beautiful film, full of acute observation and macabre humor. In my estimation it is equal to the best we've had from France in recent years."

Monkey Blows Chance

KOTA BAHRU, Malaysia (Reuters) — Queen Elizabeth was kept waiting by a monkey here Thursday, during a royal performance arranged by the Sultan of Kelantan on the scorching sands of the Beach of Passionate Love.

Topping the bill was Jambol, a five-year-old male monkey, trained for more than a month to scramble up a palm tree and collect a coconut for the royal visitors.

But Jambol, who performed well during rehearsals, appeared to suffer from stage fright in the presence of the

Queen, the Duke of Edinburgh and Princess Anne and ignored the pleas of his trainer. The Queen visited this northern town near the Thai border on the fourth day of her state visit to Malaysia.

CALGARY (CP) — Edna Loughheed, mother of Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed, died Thursday in hospital at the age of 70. She had been ill for some time.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A man's right to stroll the streets or to be a downright idler, living off his wife, was upheld Thursday by the Supreme Court in a blow at vagrancy laws across the United States. Justice William O. Douglas led the court in a 7-4 vote invalidating a Jacksonville, Fla., ordinance and in extolling the "unwritten amenities" of life.

The Florida city, like cities and states throughout the U.S., had made it a crime for "rogues and vagabonds," for "common drunkards" and "common night-walkers" and for "common railers and brayers" to show themselves in public. The proscribed list, a remnant of 14th-century England, included all sorts of other undesirables as well.

Such laws offend the U.S. Constitution, Douglas said, because they give the police arbitrary powers to make arrests and because the ordinary citizen doesn't know if what he is doing is legal or not. Besides, he added, they interfere with the "life-style" of some Americans and with "the amenities of life as we have known it."

TORONTO (CP) — Profit is not a "dirty six-letter word," says Robert Stanfield. It's necessary if private enterprise is to play its proper part in the drive to create jobs. The Progressive Conservative leader said society has a duty to provide jobs for those physically and mentally able to work and to ensure they are properly paid.

FRESNO, Calif. (UPI) — Rodger MacAfee, the communist farmer who put his 409 acres of land up as collateral for Angela Davis' $102,500 bail, said he would have attended her all night party but "someone had to do the milking." The red-faced, overall-clad cooperative farmer said he turned over the deed to his $630,000 farm because Miss Davis was a "fellow communist" and he believed in the struggle she represented.

"It was a matter of justice,"

DOUGLAS
... let 'em be

... let 'em earn a matter of humanitarianism and a matter of my responsibilities to a fellow Communist," the 33-year-old father-of-five sons said.

NEW YORK (CP) — Clifford Irving and his wife, Edith, failed to appear in a state court Thursday for examination in two lawsuits.

Irving, 41, had been ordered to submit to pre-trial questioning in a $105-million libel suit filed by art dealer Fernand Legros against Dell Publishing Co., publishers of a paperback edition of Fake, a book about a forger written by Irving. Mrs. Irving had been directed to appear for examination about Irving's purported autobiography of Howard Hughes.

DANBURY, Conn. (AP) — "Terrific, free!" exclaimed Rev. Daniel Berrigan, the anti-war priest, poet and writer as he walked out of a federal prison Thursday. He was imprisoned for 18 months.

Father Berrigan was released as his brother Philip, also a Roman Catholic priest, was on trial in Harrisburg, Pa., on charges of conspiring to kidnap presidential adviser Henry Kissinger. Both Philip and Daniel had been sentenced to three-year terms at the federal prison here for burning U.S. military draft records at Catonsville, Md., in 1968.

'No Abortion on Demand'

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau Thursday took a strong stand against abortion on demand after hearing an appeal for repeal of Canada's abortion laws.

Answering a woman who represented a local women's liberation group, Mr. Trudeau said that "at some point, an abortion is a killing."

A woman should explain her reasons for seeking an abortion just as any man who has killed must answer for his deed, the prime minister said.

The quietly emotional exchange capped a question-and-answer session at a crowded town meeting organized by the Liberal party here.

About 800 people listened as Mr. Trudeau handled questions ranging from French-language television to the monarchy.

The prime minister was in Sault Ste. Marie to begin a two-day swing through Northern Ontario. He visits North Bay, Sturgeon Falls, Strathcona, and Sudbury today before returning to Ottawa tonight.

Early Thursday, the prime minister was in a relaxed mood as he told party supporters at a Liberal reception that they should not be pushed around by critics of the government's record.

He pointed with pride to environment and consumer affairs legislation and efforts to establish more national parks.

Mr. Trudeau received a brief at the town meeting from a women's liberation group led by Rosalie Gardezi of Sault Ste. Marie.

Mrs. Gardezi later pressed the prime minister to take further action to repeal the abortion laws.

Mr. Trudeau replied that the government has liberalized abortion legislation by allowing committees of three doctors in hospitals to rule on requests for abortion for health reasons.

"I don't know if your slogan is free abortion on demand... but quite frankly it is not mine," Mr. Trudeau said.

He said that killing is sometimes justified. People were killed in war or in self-defence. But a man who kills in self-defence must justify his action before the courts. A woman seeking an abortion also should have to answer for her actions.

Some women claim that they have rights over their own bodies.

"But the fetus is not your body—it's somebody else's body," he said.

On the monarchy, Mr. Trudeau said the government will not move to abolish the institution in Canada.

He said another head of state would have to replace the monarchy, and there seemed to be no region to take this step. The monarch had a symbolic appeal for many Canadians while others had no feelings about it at all.

A high school student demanded French-language television for the city but Mr. Trudeau said he could make no promises.

A request by the city council for a deep-water port at Sault Ste. Marie was treated sympathetically by the prime minister.

The prime minister however said that a request for an international airport at Sault Ste. Marie was out of the question at the moment. It would be too expensive to build at this time.

Trustees Approve Ad Plan

Greater Victoria school board Thursday night approved the format of an advertisement to be placed in Victoria's two daily newspapers supporting a referendum which seeks $412,000 above the provincially-set limit for spending.

The board was told the ads will cost just more than $700, including some coverage on local radio stations. The referendum on school spending will be held March 11, the same day as a byelection to fill a vacancy on the board.

The ad outlines the board's budget situation this year, which has hardly been pleasing.

First of all, enrolment fell, resulting in a decrease in the amount of money granted to the district from the government since grants are based on the number of children in the district.

Then an arbitration board ruled that teachers should get a salary increase of 7.6 per cent. The board had budgeted for a 6.5 per cent increase and has had to pay the extra 1.1 per cent (amounting to about $165,000) on a non-sharing basis.

SUPPLIES COST MORE

Added to this, non-teaching staff were given a 7.5 per cent salary hike and supplies and equipment costs rose by about 10 per cent.

And then the provincial government decided to cut back on the amount it would allow school boards to spend, from an extra 10 per cent of the basic education program (the minimum amount the government decides should be spent in the district and which it shares) to only an extra eight per cent.

When all these factors are considered, it is not too difficult to see why the school board has had to go to the ratepayers for that extra $412,000.

It is the first time the board has had to ask ratepayers for money to pay for operating expenses.

In the ad, the board points out that the cost to the individual taxpayer will be almost one mill, or $1 per $1,000 assessed value of property.

SHARP WORDS

Two of the trustees at the Thursday meeting had sharp words over what they considered could be greater cutbacks in specific areas of the budget to provide more money for other more necessary parts.

Peter Bunn criticized the $71,000 which is allotted for substitute teachers, calling it a "very, very high-priced, baby-sitting system" and "a convenient service for teachers."

The board has proposed to cut $10,000 from this figure if the referendum fails.

Bunn wants less money spent on the substitutes and proposed a system whereby schools would have to do without substitute teachers unless the regular teacher was to be away for more than four days.

Superintendent A. J. Longmore said the administration is studying closely the system of substitutes and already eight or nine schools have volunteered to do without subs for one or two-day stretches.

Longmore said it would be dangerous for the district to move right into a chopped-down system like the one Bunn proposed without first studying the possibilities.

Later, Mrs. Daphne Temrie asked why more money could not be cut out of the construction and maintenance department's area of the budget by doubling up on some of the supervisory and assistant supervisory positions.

"Are you proposing that we lay off people so that teachers can get richer?" asked Bunn, who heads the board's construction and maintenance committee and has also come down hard on teachers for seeking more than the 6.5 per cent pay hike the board offered.

"Why sacrifice painting the schools and keeping the places clean only to provide more money for teachers?" he asked, adding that the increase in the construction and maintenance department's budget over last year's is only about 4.5 to five per cent.

Bunn said the department could not function efficiently without supervisory personnel.

Construction and maintenance supervisor S. H. Dietze said that if the referendum fails, the department will propose further cuts in personnel to the administration "to do away with any fat, if there has been any, at the supervisory or assistant supervisory levels."

Longmore said the administration could recommend no further cuts in that department's budget.

OIL CLEANUPS 'A DREAM'

SEATTLE (AP) — Until systems to clean up oil spilled in Puget Sound are put to the test, "we'll still be living in a dream world," a University of Washington professor has told a symposium on oil spills.

Official Moves

MONTREAL (CP) — Gerry Brennan, director of St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary, has been transferred to the regional headquarters of the penitentiaries system, Paul Faguy, federal commissioner of penitentiaries, announced Tuesday.

Dr. Juris Vagners said plans for containing large oil spills don't mean those spills can be handled properly.

Those plans include preparation for containment booms, an oil skimmer and a barge on station next spring at Bellingham.

John Glude, associate regional director of the National Marine Fisheries Service, said he is concerned with the "superficial look we've been taking" at what oil spills do.

"Maybe we're not looking deeply enough," he said. "Max Blumer (who investigated effects of a diesel-oil spill in Massachusetts) found hydrocarbons in the tissues of marine organisms months after the smell and taste of oil were gone. But I don't think he or anyone else knows what this means."

Another speaker, Warren Bennett, president of Lido-Superior Refineries, said at least six million gallons of automobile lubricating oil is unaccounted for each year in Washington and much of it is dumped into storm sewers or on the ground. That oil eventually reaches Puget Sound, he said.

"It is unfair to point to one industry, the oil industry, and hold it responsible for accidental spills when all of us are contributing."

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 16-year-old juvenile was remanded in provincial court Thursday to March 8 for pre-sentence report and sentence after he pleaded guilty to a rampage of breaking, entering and theft in December and January.

The boy admitted 10 charges, including a break-in and theft of $2 from a church collection tin and theft of two .22-calibre pistols from the home of a friend's parents.

He was also charged with possession of a third pistol, which was found hidden in the basement of his home the day of his arrest.

Judge William Ostler ordered the boy held in custody until sentence is passed, after prosecutor John Macintyre called the offences "an extraordinary rampage."

The spree ended late in January when the accused was apprehended after stealing a $20 pair of boots from the Bay on Douglas.

In traffic court, Judge E. F. N. Robinson sent a 58-year-old motorist to jail for six months after he pleaded guilty to his fifth impaired driving offence.

Edward George Bissenden, of 1280 Newport, had already been sentenced to 15 months imprisonment for two of the earlier convictions.

Court was told the accused was fined $300 for impaired driving in 1965, sentenced to 14 days in jail for the offence in 1966, six months in 1967 and nine months in 1969.

His driver's licence was suspended for two years.

Bissenden was stopped by Oak Bay police for erratic driving Feb. 18 on Foul Bay Road.

Jimmy Black, 35, of 1485 Admirals Road, was fined $350 and given a four-month partial driving ban after he pleaded guilty to impaired driving Feb. 24 on Fisgard.

Judge Ostler gave James Harnden, 19, of 737 Courtney a suspended sentence and placed him on six months' probation on a charge of theft involving less than $50.

David Laws, 23, of 728 Hillside, was remanded to March 8 for pre-sentence report and sentence after he pleaded guilty to breaking, entering and theft and common assault.

Police said Laws kicked in a glass door at Canada Safeway Ltd., 2635 Quadra, and stole $15.55 in change. He was arrested when he returned later the same night for a second visit and was noticed by passers-by wandering along the aisles of the store.

The assault charge involves two fracas with another man in connection with a personal debt.

Daniel J. Spittle, 17, of 635 Langford, pleaded guilty to possession of hashish and was remanded to March 9 for pre-sentence report and sentence.

Turner Outlines Job Plans

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister John Turner and Energy Minister Donald Macdonald briefed the Commons for the first time Thursday on how they plan to operate their new cabinet posts.

Mr. Turner, formerly in justice, and Mr. Macdonald, from defence, moved into their present jobs in last month's cabinet shuffle.

MPs from both sides of the House followed the minister with remarks on a grab-bag of topics as the Commons continued its debate on last Thursday's throne speech.

The debate on the policy-setting speech continues today.

Mr. Turner defined his new task bluntly: To create a job for every Canadian who wants one.

The economic indicators are encouraging, he said. But he added:

"Statistics are no substitute for jobs. No economy works as well as it should if there are men and women who seek work and want it and can't find it."

Mr. Macdonald said he sees the need to speed his department's review of energy matters, and hopes to bring statements on those reviews to the House this year.

Resource policy had to be fitted into broader industrial issues, including economic performance, bigger exports and social sensitivity in northern development.

On the issue of foreign ownership, Mr. Macdonald said he favors government decision on particular investment proposals rather than over-all limits on investment in resource sectors.

MAY MEAN SHIFT

But plans would be judged "with foreign investment having the onus of demonstrating its contribution to our Canadian well-being, and to the aspirations of Canadians."

That position may indicate a shift from the views of former energy minister J. J. Greene who last year cited the need for a comprehensive government policy on foreign investment in resources.

That was after the government blocked the sale of Home Oil Co. of Calgary to a prospective U.S. buyer.

Mr. Macdonald said the government would continue to bargain hard for access to U.S. markets for Canadian resources "which have been further processed in Canada to the highest possible degree."

"We are moving closer to the goal of full and unimpeded access to United States markets for oil and gas produced in Canada which is clearly surplus to domestic security and commercial requirements."

The government has been negotiating with Washington for entry into U.S. markets for Canadian uranium — now barred, completely — and for oil and gas.

Mr. Turner, in an energetic speech filled with optimism, said reducing unemployment would not be easy. The labor force was growing, federal powers were limited and geography and climate raised barriers.

But the economy was healthy and showing signs of growing more rapidly this year.

The growth rate of the gross national product had outstripped any other non-Communist country last year.

Among the MPs who joined the debate—which traditionally rambles over any subject a member chooses—R. G. L. Fairweather (PC—Fundy-Royal) called for government aid to Canadian book publishers and manufacturers.

He said the domestic market is swamped with foreign books, with little encouragement for Canadians to enter.

SUGGESTS PROGRAMS

Quoting government figures, Mr. Fairweather said that of $222 million in books sold in Canada in 1969, 65 per cent were imported.

He suggested federal provincial programs for library and school purchases from Canadians; Combines Act investigation of distribution; modernization of tariffs; encouragement of standardization in the industry; development of children's books; and use of the CBC to attract readers.

Keith Penner (L—Thunder Bay) criticized the Canadian transport commission for permitting U.S. charter airlines to fly into Northern Ontario. It amounted to a sell-out, he said.

Romuald Rodrigue (SC—Beauce) criticized delays in unemployment insurance payments.

Hyliard Chappell (L—Peel South) called for anti-strike legislation.

He suggested that labor disputes be settled by public juries, and that unions be held responsible for damages to employers or the public resulting from strikes.

Lincoln Alexander (PC—Hamilton West) attacked the government for not committing itself to full employment. The country was "sick and tired of style—it wants content."

Water Bill Study Asked

Oak Bay's municipal treasurer Ian Forster has been asked to study how elderly residents on fixed incomes can get relief from high water bills.

Council's finance committee is trying to establish rates that would help the elderly but still produce enough revenue to meet the costs of water provided to Oak Bay by the Greater Victoria Water Board.

The board recently increased its charges.

SURVEY PLANNED

Forster was asked Thursday to conduct a survey based on a charge of $3 being levied for a minimum of five units. Included in the survey will be estimates of revenue that would be obtained if apartment buildings were assessed on the charge of $1 per suite, plus costs of water used over the five unit minimum.

Municipal engineer-planner Geoffrey White noted that Oak Bay had not increased its water rates in 1971 in spite of increased costs of water from the board.

The committee will call a special meeting when Forster's survey is available in order to be able to make firm recommendations at council's next meeting.

Stressing the need for expediency, Ald. Shirley Dowell said, "every two weeks longer we wait is costing us money."

U.S. JURY VIEWS FILMS IN SMELTER DAMAGE SUIT

BELLINGHAM, Wash. (AP) — Two films plaintiffs made to show what they contended was damage from the Intalco Aluminum Corp. plant here were shown to the jury Thursday in a $795,000 damage suit against the firm.

The films were shown to the jury after the judge viewed them first and ruled they were admissible. One of the films, narrated by Paul Barci Jr., showed clouds developing over the Barci property, on which trees with dead limbs were pictured.

Barci and his father, Paul, owners of a Ferndale cattle farm, contend in their suit their property was damaged by fluoride and other emissions from the refinery.

Intalco has disclaimed damages though it has acknowledged that fumes, sediment and gases from the refinery were carried by air currents over the Barci property.

Barci said the films showed the damage from the plant and the farm's proximity to the plant.

The second film showed crippled cows hobbling about the property.

The younger Barci's wife testified she had been affected by atmospheric condition on the farm since moving there in 1970. She said she suffered burning sensations in her throat and had headaches.

Objections Sought

Oak Bay residents living near 960 Foul Bay will be asked if they have any objections to the home being converted into a guest house.

Oak Bay council's zoning committee decided to make the canvass Thursday while considering a request from Mrs. Margaret Stuart to have the property rezoned for a guest house.

Ald. Brian Smith observed: "This is another case of spot zoning. We should take a look at it and circulate the neighbors."

Building inspector Bill Skead said he had inspected the property and found it "eminently suitable" for a guest house.

He said it met all the requirements as far as guest house zoning was concerned but would require some interior changes to conform with fire safety requirements that have to be met before a guest house licence is issued.

FIRE WARNING

Fire Chief Bill Pearson warned about the proposed use of wooden shakes by developer John Mace on the top two storeys of two five-storey buildings he hopes to build on the block fronting on Newport, adjacent to Windsor Park.

Pearson said, in the case of a fire, "If one window blew the fire would spread fast. He suggested asbestos-type shingles could give the same effect and be much safer."

Municipal engineer-planner Geoffrey White said Pearson was concerned about how a fire truck could be brought into the inner courtyard of the planned complex if a fire took place in either of the buildings.

Smith said: "I was wondering how a pedestrian could get through private doors — let alone a fire truck."

(At Monday's council meeting Mace had said that entrance to the courtyard from Newport would be by doors, use of which would be restricted to those in the block's apartments or stores.)

Jerusalem Artichokes
... It's Worth Trying

With constant inquiries for advice on growing vegetables of high nutrition, we suggest again this year the planting of tuberous artichokes, sometimes called Jerusalem artichokes, and believed to be originally a North American native plant.

These are similar to Chinese artichokes, but of more irregular shape. Both are easily grown in almost any kind of soil once it is broken up and cultivated a bit while the crop grows.

It is unfortunate that complete food analysis values of root artichokes has apparently not been carried out.

We have a listing of protein content 2.2 per cent against 2 per cent in ordinary white potatoes, and total carbohydrates 17 per cent against 19.1 per cent for potatoes. Further than that we cannot go, except that huge quantities of root artichokes were grown as a substitute for white potatoes during war periods in Europe; this as a result of the roots being fed to livestock previously and found to produce profitable results.

The tubers, which can be purchased now at some Chinese vegetable dealers, are planted whole about a foot apart and six inches deep, in March if the soil is workable.

Jerusalem artichokes will grow well as a tall summer screen at the end, or fence side, of the vegetable plot. Closely related to the sunflower, the plants have stout unbranched stems to six feet or more, finally topped with small yellow flowers.

A double staggered row will allow the stems to protect each other from the wind blows. Twelve tubers will be enough to start with for the yield is about twenty-fold.

Tubers are ready for use as the plants begin to die down in fall, though the main part of the crop will keep better in the cold soil than in today's type of home storage.

About the first of October the tall stems are cut down and laid lengthways over the rows of tubers as a light protection from frost, and to mark the position of the crop.

During winter, lift enough tubers for a week's supply at one time. The flavor is quite distinct, not at all like a white potato in spite of some writers' claims.

Jerusalem artichokes are more like water chestnuts, though not so sweet. If you like to make your own Chinese dishes from fresh vegetables try some of these tuberous artichokes. You just wash them carefully and quickly, then slice into julienne strips to cook for 10 minutes, just like so many other vegetables.

After the end of February it is difficult to obtain fresh artichoke roots, so look around now for a dozen to plant during March.

SOLUTION MONDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

George W. Beynon, who died in 1965 at the age of 101, was one of the leading personalities in the world of bridge. His first career was that of a professional hockey player in Hamilton, Ontario. He subsequently made music his major occupation, studying at La Scala in Milan, and later directed orchestras in Europe and America. He was the musical director of Birth of a Nation (1915). In 1917, he retired to East Orange, N.J.

Forced out of retirement by the 1929 crash, Beynon made a new career in bridge. He rapidly became an authority on tournament directing, and continued, as a member of the press, to report tournaments. He also founded a successful correspondence school for would-be directors. When he celebrated his 100th birthday in September 1964, he was probably the oldest working newspaperman in America.

Here is a deal he played at the party celebrating his 100th birthday. He was sitting South.

North-South vulnerable. North deals.

been divided 3-2 originally. Had Beynon done this he would have gone down, losing two tricks to West's remaining K-10 of trumps.

But Beynon foresaw the possibility that West might have started with four trumps. So, at trick three, he returned to the South-hand via the ace of hearts. He then led the seven of trumps, and when West followed with the six, dummy's five was played. With the seven winning, a trump was now led to dummy's ace. The defender's only winner was West's king of trumps.

If, in theory, East had taken declarer's second trump lead of the seven with the ten-spot, declarer would still have been home safely. In this case, the only outstanding trumps would now be the king. Upon regaining the lead, Beynon would have cashed his trump ace, telling West's king.

This was not a complicated slam to play correctly, even for a man 100 years of age. Nevertheless, I hope that when I get to be 100, I will be able to play as well as Beynon did on this deal.

FIGURES FUN WITH

By J. A. H. HUNTER

Ann was collating the pages of the Report. She had a stack of each page on the table, just the right number, and was building up a separate stack of complete sets. "It's a chore," she said. "So far I've taken just as many minutes as there are stacks here."

"Fine," replied Greg, checking her work. "It's odd all the stacks have the same number of sheets now."

She smiled. "That's funny. Then I figure it will take me exactly one and a half hours to finish if I go on at the same speed."

How many pages in each complete set?
Thanks for an idea to D. Murdoch, Toronto.

Upon winning the opening diamond lead with his king, Beynon led his four of trumps, and finessed dummy's queen successfully when West followed suit with the deuce. A more optimistic player would now have probably cashed the trump ace, on the assumption that the five

Secret Report Bares Third Crossing Cost

b.c. briefs

WEST VANCOUVER (CP) — Local taxpayers would face a $1 million bill for local street and bridge construction if a third crossing of Burrard Inlet is built, a public meeting was told.

The claim was made in a fact sheet handed out by the North Shore Transportation Committee, which opposes a planned tunnel crossing of the inlet.

Terry Simpson, a member of the committee told the 150 persons at the meeting the figure was obtained from a copy of a secret report "stolen" from the municipality of West Vancouver.

The report was prepared for city council by a consulting firm and an engineering firm, he said.

The fact sheet said the $1.3 million to be paid by the three North Shore municipalities under the crossing proposal is not intended to pay for projected road and bridge construction complementing the crossing.

GIVES DETAILS

The fact sheet gave details of the supplementary construction it said was contained in the report to council, and said the cost would be $7 million to taxpayers.

West Vancouver council admitted the report's existence but did not discuss it in public or release copies.

The crossing proposal is being opposed by a number of civic officials and citizens' groups in the Lower Mainland, mainly on the grounds that it does not provide for a system of rapid transit.

In a straw vote at the end of the meeting, a majority of those present backed a motion rejecting the crossing plan in its present form.

Unofficial Search

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — The official air and sea search for provincial court judge Anthony Robinson of Kincolith has been called off, but an unofficial search is to continue.

The unofficial search will be carried on by a brother of the missing judge and members of the Indian north coast district council. The council embraces seven villages, of which Kincolith is one. It is hoped to charter a search plane and private fishing vessels will continue the hunt.

Trafficker Jailed

PORT ALBERT (CP) — Roy Eldon Stamp, 26, formerly of Calgary, was sentenced to 15 months after pleading guilty in provincial court Thursday to a charge of trafficking in LSD. Stamp had 53 caps of LSD in his possession when arrested here by RCMP.

Car Hits Hotel

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Joseph Bogalski, 23, of nearby Red Rock was killed when his car crashed into the entrance of a hotel. Bogalski had to be gripped from the wrecked car.

Students Complain

VANCOUVER (CP) — The University of British Columbia plans to set up a special committee to investigate student complaints about final-year medical studies.

Most of the 66 students in third year petitioned the academic senate about what they said was a planned heavy workload coupled with their normal studies and the loss of a $2,000 stipend that was to have been paid because they will receive no summer vacation.

have been issued to the two-mile flat sawmill operators in Quesnel that all bee-hive burners have to be eliminated from operation by June. There now are 14 burners, owned by five different mills, in operation in the area.

Trial Date Set

VANCOUVER (CP) — Charles Robert Redden, 28, of North Vancouver, a suspended employee of the Unemployment Insurance Commission, faces trial April 4 on two charges of defrauding the commission. He was arrested Feb. 9, charged with possession of an Unemployment Insurance Commission cheque for $110. He is also charged with defrauding the commission — an undetermined amount while employed as a systems analyst.

Drugs in Prison

MATSIQUI (CP) — James Floyd Steeves, 29, already serving a term in the Matsiqui medium-security institution, faces two drug charges following an RCMP investigation. He is charged with possession of heroin and methadone for the purpose of trafficking following a probe of the discovery of a cache of drugs at the institution.

Mystery Pickets

FORT ST. JOHN (CP) — Work on a million-dollar arena-swimming pool development is slowly grinding to a halt after mystery pickets appeared at the site carrying signs, claiming there is non-union labor on the job. Carpenters, electricians and laborers now are off the job. Many of them feel they are supporting attempts by the Pipefitters Union to organize pipefitters working on the development.

Beehive Ban

QUESNEL (CP) — Alex Fraser, Social Credit MLA for Cariboo, said Resources Minister Ray Williston has advised him that "instructions

Dies at Airport

RICHMOND (CP) — Coroner R. J. Talmy will hold an inquest into the death of an unidentified man while under police escort. Police said a 34-year-old Prince George resident collapsed and died at Vancouver International Airport after a flight from Trail. The man was being escorted by an RCMP officer to Riverview Mental Hospital.

Abortion Study Continues

Doctors and board members at Queen Victoria Hospital are studying how voluntary abortions and sterilization operations could be added to the hospital's workload.

But doing the operations at the hospital is not yet established policy, board chairman Alex Wood said today.

They have not been done to date because until recently because the hospital was under the control of the Sisters of St. Ann and the Catholic church is opposed to such operations.

Wood said the matter was discussed at the hospital board meeting Thursday night and a committee of doctors on staff and board members will continue to work on details of how the workload might be handled.

"We still have the basic problem of all the hospital's beds being filled," he said.

Warrior this month the sisters gifted their equity in the hospital to the community and turned operation over to a public body — the Southern Vancouver Island Hospital Society.

Beyond the Star Gate—A Likeness of Man

WASHINGTON (WP) — The first spacecraft to fly out of the solar system carries a greeting from earth for an alien civilization.

The spacecraft is the Pioneer F that is scheduled to be launched from Cape Kennedy Sunday night on a mission to Jupiter. Pioneer will swing by that planet on its way into the cosmos where there is a remote chance it might be recognized as an artificial body and intercepted by an intelligent and advanced civilization.

Pioneer's greeting is engraved on a plaque fixed to the spacecraft's antenna support struts. On the plaque are the images of a naked man and woman, the man with his right hand raised in friendship. They are shown standing slightly apart in front of Pioneer, which is drawn to scale.

To left of the man and woman is a radial pattern of abstruse lines that depict the 14 pulsating stars (pulsars) in the Milky Way galaxy. A 15th line reaches far to the right and symbolizes the centre of the galaxy where earth is located.

"The pulsars are the only stars in the galaxy that are running down at known rates, just like clocks," said Cornell University's Dr. Carl Sagan, one of three people who conceived and designed the plaque. "They are ideal symbols to specify where the spacecraft came from and when."

NASA AGREED

Sagan said the original idea for the plaque came from the Christian Science Monitor's Eric Burgess, who approached Sagan three months ago over the lack of a plaque on the spacecraft.

"I agreed with him, but I didn't think there was any chance that NASA would go along with anything so frivolous," Sagan said. "But I called John Naugle (NASA's associate administrator for space science) and he was astonishingly congenial about the idea."

Sagan then turned for ideas to Cornell's Dr. Frank Drake, who together with Sagan has long been interested in ways man might use to contact intelligent beings from another solar system.

"We discussed a lot of possibilities, like whether to depict a man, woman and child," Drake said, "but we agreed that the message had to be something that described ourselves."

Sagan brought his artist wife Linda into the discussion, and it was she who thought of a simple drawing of a naked man and woman.

"We wanted to show what we really looked like," Linda Sagan explained. "Besides, what kind of clothes would you put on them? Clothes would be misleading as well as dishonest."

FEATURES UNIVERSAL

Drake, Sagan and Sagan's wife also decided to give the man and woman no single racial characteristic. The woman's eyes are Oriental, the man's facial features are Negro. Both could also be Caucasian.

"We want to depict this plaque as coming from all mankind," Sagan said. "That's also the reason there are no flags or political messages on it."

Sagan said the space agency accepted the naked couple, but objected to Linda Sagan's original drawing of the woman as being a bit too explicit.

"I spent several days at a Telex machine, sending new versions of the man and woman to NASA's Ames Research Centre in California," Sagan said. "The final version has been toned down considerably."

Besides the man and woman and the pulsar map, the Pioneer message contains two other sketches.

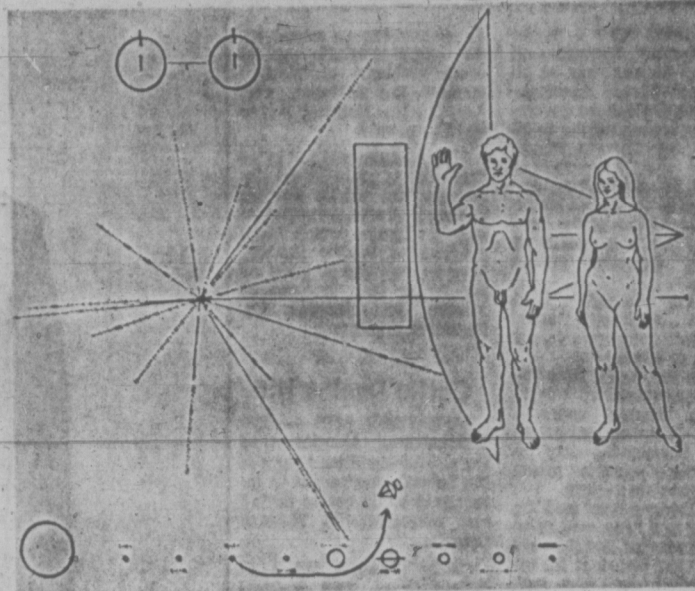

At the top left of the plaque is a schematic drawing of two states of atomic hydrogen, the most abundant atom in the universe. The energy difference between the two states provides the most precise standard of time known to science — which can be used by anybody looking at the plaque as a clue to the pulsar map.

MAP DIFFICULT

Below the pulsar map is a second schematic of the solar system, showing Pioneer leaving earth and swinging behind Jupiter toward the Milky Way galaxy.

Sagan estimated that Pioneer's message will travel a distance of 2,000 light years (18,000 trillion miles) in the next 100 million years — the time he guessed it might take for an alien civilization to discover it.

"In a sense," he said, "it will be the longest lived work of man in history — no matter how long man survives."

AUSSIES CHARGE B. C. CRIMINAL

VANCOUVER (CP) — Raymond Joseph Palmer, one of B.C.'s most-wanted criminals, was charged in Sydney, Australia, Thursday with illegal possession of firearms and was remanded in custody to March 3, Australian officials reported in a telephone interview.

Palmer escaped from the British Columbia Penitentiary in January, 1970, while serving a six-year sentence for possession of stolen bonds.

Australian police said Palmer also is wanted for questioning about the murder of a police informer and a mailed bomb that blew off the hands of a B.C. Penitentiary guard in 1966.

They also said Palmer and his brother, both of whom were arrested in a police raid early Thursday, were being questioned by Australian narcotics agents and that Honolulu police have been asked to be on the lookout for a third man who left Sydney by air for Hawaii earlier this week.

Palmer, 35, surrendered without a struggle when armed New South Wales State and Australian federal police burst into a home in the Sydney suburb of Guilford. The brother, who was not named, was arrested simultaneously in a nearby house.

SEEING-EYE SCOUT Daryl Wright, 13, right, is one of Regina scout troop members taking part in a training program to prepare the blind for the day they will have a real seeing-eye dog. Wright responds to the commands of Miss Doris Merkosky in the same manner as will the dog.

Recital Scheduled

A student recital in which the studios of 18 Victoria teachers will be represented will take place Saturday at 8 p.m. at St. Matthews Hall.

Sponsored by the B.C. Registered Music Teachers' Association, there will be piano, violin, vocal and choral numbers.

Taking part will be Valerie Sing, Nicky Stow, Andreas Wessler, Douglas Stafford, Linda Pearson, Lynn McAllister, Lise Murray, Susan Stepanick, Kim Dugas, Janice Eldridge, Laura Anderson, Lorena Lauzon, Susan Pye, Diana Ottosen, Pamela Tucker, Ernest Stricker, Cathy-Anne Skillings, Patricia Wasylenko, Monica Reed, Catherine March, Ronne Winter, Marc Desrube, Helene Barker, Elizabeth Butler, Sylvia Cox, Jean MacRae, Daniel Barer, Sydney Condorashoff, Annabelle Burrows, Vite Melderis, Robert Winquist and Susan de Burgh.

Accompanying violin numbers will be Mrs. E. J. Bland and Walter Prossnitz.

FEM-LIB 'FOOLISH'—GOLDA

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir thinks women's "liberation" is foolish and it's men, not women, who suffer from discrimination.

"Men are discriminated against," she told a visiting delegation recently, "because they can't give birth to children as we do."

Mrs. Meir, 73, is the mother of two and grandmother of five. In her words, the women's liberation movement "is pretty foolish."

B.C. Hydro Buys Gas Turbine Units

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Hydro and Power Authority announced today it has awarded two contracts for gas turbine units for two generating stations which are to go into operation next year, at Prince Rupert and Port Hardy.

Total value of the contracts is $6.8 million.

The units will use modified jet aircraft engines, each driving a turbine coupled to an electric generator. They can be powered by either diesel oil or natural gas.

The units will be the largest of their type ever ordered by B.C. Hydro.

A 40,500-kilowatt unit for Port Hardy will be supplied by the Curtis-Wright Corporation of Woodbridge, N.J., under a $3.7 million contract.

A $3.1 million contract goes to United Aircraft of Canada Limited of Longueuil, Que., for a 28,619-kilowatt unit for Prince Rupert.

Kiernan Scuttling Rights—Fisherman

OTTAWA (CP) — Homer Stevens, president of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union, Wednesday accused Conservation Minister Ken Kiernan of British Columbia of trying to scuttle bargaining rights for fishermen.

Mr. Stevens said in a statement that Mr. Kiernan has told the Fisheries Council of Canada, an employers' group, that any federally-granted bargaining rights for fishermen might be unconstitutional.

The council quoted Mr. Kiernan in a submission to the federal government concerning federal legislation to amend the Canada labor code to give bargaining rights to some fishermen.

Mr. Stevens, in Ottawa with a union delegation to make submissions on the legislation, said Mr. Kiernan was collaborating in a "semi-secret" way with the fish companies to attempt to deny bargaining rights to fishermen.

B.C. Liquor Ad Ban Law 36 Years Old—Lawyer

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia government merely lifted an exemption from newspapers in the provision when it passed legislation in 1971 prohibiting the advertising of alcoholic beverages, a lawyer for Attorney-General Leslie Peterson told B.C. Supreme Court Thursday.

The lawyer, Lloyd McKenzie of Victoria, opening his defence on behalf of the government in a test case challenging the validity of the legislation, said the province has had a law regulating liquor advertisements since a 1936 revision to the Liquor Control Act.

Reading from a section of that revision which said newspapers were exempted from the ad ban, McKenzie said the exemption came as a result of "considerable political pressure" at the time. However, he did not explain how magazines also came to be exempt.

... Also through British Columbia history, our legislators have looked upon liquor as a necessary evil and they have resorted to a variety of devices to regulate, confine and curb its lawful distribution," the lawyer said.

"They have blown hot and cold on it. The legislators have always been in the contradictory positions of discouraging, or even prohibiting, its sale on the one hand and, on the other hand, assuming increasingly monopolistic powers with respect to its sale."

"They have been against the promotion of the sale of liquor from early times and the latest amendment is merely the most recent manifestation of this attitude."

McKenzie said there was nothing revolutionary about the legislation outlawing liquor advertisements. The government was simply extending the legislation to include newspapers.

British Columbia had prohibition from 1916 to 1921 and "if a province is competent to outlaw the sale of liquor within its borders, it is competent to outlaw advertising of liquor for sale within its borders."

McKenzie began his defence after lawyer Douglas McK. Brown of Vancouver concluded his argument on behalf of three publishing firms and four tobacco companies which brought the action against the attorney-general.

Involved in the action, which started Tuesday and is expected to end today with decision reserved, are Time Canada Ltd.; Maclean-Hunter Ltd.; Southstar Publisher Ltd.; Benson and Hedges Canada Ltd.; Imperial Tobacco Products Ltd.; Macdonald Tobacco Marketing Ltd. and Rothmans of Pall Mall Canada Ltd.

The seven firms charge that Liquor Act amendments and the Tobacco Advertising Restraining Act, both of which took effect Sept. 1, 1971, are unconstitutional and invalid. The legislation prohibits liquor and tobacco ads in newspapers, magazines and billboards.

Brown told the court the B.C. legislation could cost publications such as Time magazine millions of dollars in fines if they were convicted of contravening its provisions.

He said conviction carries a fine of not less than $1,000 and not more than $2,000 on a first offence. On a second offence, conviction could bring a minimum fine of $2,000 and a maximum levy of $3,000.

He said that in the case of Time magazine, a weekly, fines could total a minimum of $3,000 every week. But if each liquor and tobacco ad in the magazine were considered separately, fines "could run to millions of dollars."

Time magazine has continued to carry liquor and cigarette advertising in editions distributed in B.C., despite the government ban.

Brown said the intent of the legislation was to "stop, effectively stop, all advertising."

Because the magazine is an article of commerce in interprovincial trade, it should not be compelled to change its method of operation, he said. It should not be forced to publish a separate edition for B.C. containing no liquor or tobacco advertising.

Peterson's Judgment Hit Over Gastown Aftermath

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson's handling of the aftermath of the Gastown riot proves his incompetence, Alan Williams (L. — West Vancouver-Howe Sound) told the legislature early today.

Speaking at about 3 a.m. during the B.C. legislature's longest sitting, Williams fired a bitter denunciation of what he termed the attorney-general's "appalling lack of judgment" throughout the Gastown case.

He was referring to Peterson's decision to prevent laying of charges against five Vancouver policemen following the Aug. 7, 1971, disturbance.

Williams, a lawyer, noted actions could have been taken in court or through the disciplinary mechanisms of the Vancouver police commission.

PUBLIC CONFUSED

He said people have a right to expect every citizen will be treated equally before the law. But in preventing the laying of charges, he said, Peterson could only have confused the public.

"I find this to be a strange and unseemly action on the part of the attorney-general," Williams said. "So many people who witnessed the entire Gastown incident from afar, who saw the steps that were taken" would naturally be confused.

The Liberal MLA emphasized he was not judging the actions of any of the Vancouver police. But because Peterson's actions led to public confusion about the meaning of the law, he said, it follows that the image of Vancouver's police was lowered.

The attorney-general was the instrument through which the police appeared to escape punishment, Williams added.

"How do you explain this to the young person who says 'I'm being hassled by the fuzz'?"

HONOR Demeaned

Williams said Peterson's three-year career as attorney-general has been catalogued by incidents which are characterized by "ineptitude, perhaps exceeded by inexcusably bad judgment."

He also said Peterson's manner of awarding Queen's Counsel citations had demeaned that honor in B.C. "in a way which has never occurred before."

Williams disagreed with James Lorimer (NDP-Burnaby-Willingdon) who had earlier called for abandoning the practice of awarding QCs.

Then he returned directly to Peterson's conduct as attorney-general to say: "The minister has been called incompetent. I think he is — incompetent, inept and shows bad judgment."

Peterson rose and said it is easy for Williams to make these statements, but they are merely "straw men."

"I suppose he does the same thing occasionally in his practice at law," Peterson said.

He said all the Gastown references are also "straw men" because former B.C. Supreme Court Justice Thomas Dohm recommended in his special inquiry into the incident that charges should not be laid.

Barrie Clark (L. — North Vancouver-Seymour) told Peterson he had done "a lousy job" in the past year.

He said the police should have pursued an individual policy of arresting people for smoking marijuana, rather than showing up in a large group.

He said the police should have pursued an individual policy of arresting people for smoking marijuana, rather than showing up in a large group.

The riot began when police charged a throng of people gathered in Gastown for what originally was intended to be a marijuana smoking protest event.

U.K. COALMINERS OKAY PAY PACT

LONDON (AP) — Britain's 280,000 coal miners today ended their country-wide strike, casting an overwhelming majority vote to accept a settlement that guaranteed a speedy windup of a power crisis disrupting Britain's economy and idling millions.

The miners voted by 210,039 to 7,581 — a margin of more than 27 to 1 — to accept a big pay offer from the state-run National Coal Board. The offer was based on the recommendations of a government-appointed court of inquiry.

The miners will go back to work Monday.

The results meant that officials could go ahead with plans for an industrial recovery after a power famine had threatened to close industry.

Power cuts are expected to continue for several weeks, until coal supplies are built up again at power stations, but the outcome of the vote means the government now can go ahead with reduced cuts.

UBCM Gets Grant

The Union of British Columbia Municipalities has been granted $3,000 by the federal urban affairs ministry for completion of a study on suburban land development.

It comes as part of grants totalling $113,500 announced today for housing research.

They include $45,000 for inter-governmental committee research aimed at improving housing, $50,000 to the Institute of Urban Studies at the University of Winnipeg, $14,000 to the Nova Scotia Public Housing Tenants' Association, and $1,500 for three public seminars on community planning sponsored by the Calgary Community Institute.

Drivers Hurt

Two drivers were sent to hospital Thursday afternoon after a two-car crash at the corner of Cook and Pandora.

Jean Bourquin, 36, of 4150 Birtles, was treated and released from Royal Jubilee Hospital for face cuts. Albert Johnson, 57, of 3535 Richmond, suffered minor leg and back injuries.

Car damage totalled $2,000.

YELLOW: CURIOUS?

As readers of either Victoria's daily newspapers may have gathered by now, the city will soon be replacing the white centre stripes on streets with yellow centre stripes.

Apparently, the yellow stripes are easier to see ... or something. Anyway, traffic engineers think they're better.

But what will happen when the yellow stripes start appearing? Will people panic? Will they career crazily from side to side, possibly searching for Oz? Will they cry? Will they demand explanations? Will they turn the rascals responsible out of office?

Who knows?

Perhaps participating problems of that kind, city traffic engineer David Campbell asked council to spend about $500 to buy an ad in the Times and Colonist explaining the change.

On Thursday council turned down the request. And now the public will never know what the ad might have said.

As a public service, therefore, the Times is pleased to bring you this announcement:

TIRED OF THE SAME OLD WHITE LINES EVERYWHERE YOU DRIVE? SEE THE NEW, IMPROVED YELLOW LINES! WATCH 'EM GO BY! STEER SAFELY AROUND CORNERS! AND REMEMBER: STOP ON THE RED ... GO ON THE GREEN ... DON'T MESS WITH MR. IN-BETWEEN.

Commutation Makes 'Mockery of Justice'

WINNIPEG (CP) — Police Chief Norman Stewart said Thursday he was "not at all surprised" at the announcement that the federal government has commuted the death sentence of Thomas Mason Shand.

Shand, 32, of Winnipeg, was sentenced to be hanged March 8 after conviction of the June 27, 1970 stabbing death of Winnipeg Detective Robert Houston.

Chief Stewart said: "They've commuted every other death sentence... for killing a policeman."

It was the fourth time the cabinet has suspended a death sentence imposed under a five-year trial law that allows capital punishment only in cases where police or prison guards are slain on duty.

The Winnipeg chief said the trial law was "supposed to be for a trial period, but it hasn't been a trial period at all because they haven't done anything difference to what they were doing before."

"It is making a mockery out of justice."

The death sentence for killing policemen should not be abolished, he said, but he couldn't look ahead and even begin to think of what was going through the minds of the politicians.

Shand was the only person currently under death sentence in Canada.

Drug Praised

SASKATOON (CP) — Rifampin, a new drug used in the treatment of infectious pulmonary tuberculosis, "may be the best drug we have," Dr. E. D. Ring of the Saskatoon Sanatorium, said Thursday.

The drug was approved recently by the federal drug administration but has been used by Saskatchewan doctors for about a year.

Problem Remains

SASKATOON (CP) — Problems of grain handling 'at Vancouver can be solved but this won't eliminate the income problems of Western farmers, Roy Atkinson, president of the National Farmers' Union, said.

"If we continue to sell large quantities of grain at the extremely low prices we are moving it at now, we will soon face a situation which large numbers of Prairie farmers have no cash and no grain either," he told the annual meeting of Canadian Co-Operative Implementers.

Cattle Deaths Hit

SASKATOON (CP) — The Saskatchewan Association of Rural Municipalities may ask the federal government to investigate cattle deaths during rail shipments to Eastern Canada.

Clarke Vickers, reeve of Willow Creek, said Wednesday cattle losses on the rails have reached "alarming proportions." Eastern cattlemen are threatening to establish their own cow-calf operations if the situation is not remedied, Vickers said.

Curbs Studied

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Manitoba government may introduce legislation this session to limit the types of education expenditures the province's 47 school divisions can finance by special levy.

Education Minister Ben Hanuschak said Thursday the province may have to consider legislation "defining the types of expenditures and the extent to which they should be borne by the property owner."

MLAs Battle All Night

RCMP Or BCP?

By PETER McNELLY
Times Staff

If the federal government abandons the name of the RCMP, British Columbia will create a provincial police force, Attorney-General Leslie Peterson said Thursday.

The surprise announcement brought an immediate and mocking denunciation from Opposition Leader Dave Barrett.

He accused Peterson and Premier Bennett of being "phonies" who removed the Trans-Canada Highway signs to suit their separatist whims and later talk like nationalists for political advantage.

Peterson rose in the legislature after George Mussallem (SC-Dewdney) made an emotional speech criticizing Ottawa for altering RCMP insignia.

Mussallem showed the House a picture in the Victoria Times of the signs on Victoria RCMP cars changed to read only "police."

'OUR OWN FORCE'

"If they're not going to have a Royal Canadian Mounted Police, then certainly this province is going to go the way other provinces have and that is to have our own provincial police force," Peterson said.

Bennett led strong desk-thumping applause from the government benches after which Barrett jumped up.

"What a bunch of hypocrites we've dumped on us tonight," Barrett said.

"Will you get up on your feet and say you're opposed to the Trans-Canada Highway?" he asked Mussallem.

Barrett was referring to the government's removal of Trans-Canada Highway signs last fall and their replacement with signs saying B.C. 1. "That's the most hypocritical statement I've ever heard from that member in this house and also the most hypocritical by the attorney-general."

SHOUTING MATCH

Not only are the highway signs being replaced, he says, but the government intends to challenge the system of equalization payments, he said. "Now we're going to have a British Columbia police force."

"No, a Royal British Columbia Police force," Peterson shot back.

"Oh, you're phonies. You're a bunch of phonies that's what you are," Barrett said. Bennett and Peterson were

WEARY LEGISLATOR Gordon Dowding (NPD-Burnaby-Edmonds) takes a break in his party's caucus room this morning as government forced a through-the-night sitting which sets a modern record for length. By noon members had sat 16 hours. In 1866, colonial council sat 24 hours, from 1:15 p.m. April 23 to the same time the next day. (Bill Halkett photo.)

N. Ireland Minister Shot

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — John Taylor, Northern Ireland home affairs minister, was shot and wounded by gunmen in the All-Ireland ecclesiastical capital of Armagh today, officials reported.

First reports said he suffered head wounds but was still alive when admitted to hospital.

Taylor, in his mid-30s, is the first member of Prime Minister Brian Faulkner's cabinet to come under assassination attempt since the outlawed Irish Republican Army opened its present campaign to unite the North with the neighboring Irish Republic.

In Coleraine, Northern Ireland witnesses told an official inquiry Thursday of seeing British paratroopers shoot down fleeing demonstrators during the Jan. 30 Londonderry rioting that resulted in the deaths of 13 civilians.

One of the witnesses, a Roman Catholic priest, said he saw a single demonstrator fire two or three shots at soldiers from a hand gun. But he disappeared before troops returned fire.

Other witnesses made no mention of any shooting on the part of civilians, who were engaged in an illegal civil rights march when troops broke it up.

The inquiry established by the British government is being conducted by Lord Wid-gery, chief justice of England. It entered its fifth day today and is expected to continue for some weeks in this village 35 miles from Londonderry.

James Chapman, an English civil servant with the defence ministry and a former regimental sergeant-major in the British Army, testified Thursday he saw paratroopers shoot into a crowd of between 150 and 500 persons scrambling away from the soldiers over a rubble barricade in the Bogside district.

Watching from the window of his home, Chapman said, he saw eight armoured vehicles sweep into Rossville Street and between 50 and 100 soldiers dismount.

"Almost immediately they assumed firing positions. . . . They fired immediately into the crowd who were trying to cross the barricades less than 50 feet away. . . . I saw three bodies fall."

Ronald Wood, a Londonderry postman and also an Englishman, said he saw a man "gunned down."

"He was facing a soldier and he was hit in the front. He had not fired any shot and had not thrown any bomb."

Rev. Edward Daly, a Roman Catholic curate, said he saw two young men shot. The priest had been running with the crowd as the paratroopers

Nimsick Suspended In 'Showdown Sitting'

By BRUCE YEMEN AND PETER McNELLY
Times Staff

A bleary Legislature strained to the end of a record-breaking 16-hour and 33-minute sitting at 12:33 p.m. today after a marathon showdown over the government's unlimited power to drive the house into exhausted submission.

One veteran New Democrat MLA was "named" and suspended from the house until next Tuesday and closure was almost imposed in a short-lived compromise effort which back-fired in the face of Oak Bay MLA Scott Wallace.

Twelve opposition attempts to adjourn the debate went down to defeat as the combined NDP, Liberal and Progressive Conservative forces battled the Social Credit government in a gruelling sitting that began at 8 p.m.

Refused to Sit Down

It took 18 hours and 18 minutes for the $39.8 million in attorney-general department spending estimates to get house approval. Debate began at 4:15 p.m. Thursday.

Leo Nimsick (NDP-Kootenay) was suspended by supply committee chairman Herb Bruch (SC-Esquimalt) at 3:40 a.m. when he refused to sit down and stop arguing furiously against Premier Bennett's insistence on approval of Attorney-General Leslie Peterson's spending estimates.

The longest previous sitting of the B.C. legislature lasted 13 hours and 15 minutes from 8:30 p.m. to 9:45 a.m. on April 29-30 1962. The Vancouver Island legislative council had a 24-hour sitting in 1866 before the province of British Columbia was established.

Proposed "deals" between the parties to end the deadlock failed during the long night as opposition forces stuck to their guns, sharing speaking duties among each other. Only a few Socialists took part in the debate.

The 64-year-old Nimsick shares with the 71-year-old Bennett the title of longest consecutive service MLA. Both were elected in 1949, but Bennett had served in the house earlier.

The premier spent little time in the house through the night but was called back frequently for adjournment votes. He looked weary, as did most MLAs.

Debate 'Breaks Down'

At 11:30 p.m., Barrett moved adjournment of the debate for the first time. He said adjournment was necessary to keep the MLAs from getting bitter by staying up too late.

"We'll get the boss up," he said, after making the motion and referring to Bennett who usually sleeps in his office during night sittings.

Barrett's motion failed, then he said:

"The tone of this house is set by the government and we've done enough damage to the reputation of this house earlier this week."

He asked Bennett to reconsider. Bennett would not. Barrett became angry.

"I'm a little tired of getting this system rammed down our throats by one man who thinks he knows everything and we're not taking this any more. This is absolutely stupid and we might as well have this out now rather than later in the session," Barrett said.

"I'm fed up with this system. You abuse this house, you abuse everything and we're not going to take this any longer. He (Bennett) goes out and sleeps in his office and now we're demanding our rights."

Speaker William Murray was called into the house and told the members they had to accept the directions of chairman Herb Bruch. Murray said he knew it was late and tempers might flare, but people should try to behave in a parliamentary manner.

Barrett Motion Fails

(PC — Oak Bay) moved adjournment.

"In view of the number of members who are sleeping, I move the chairman do now leave the chair," Wallace said.

At the time, Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell, Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gagliardi, Labor Minister James Chabot, Herb Capozzi (SC — Vancouver Centre) and Alex Fraser (SC — Cariboo) were either sleeping or acting as though they were.

As the motion went down in defeat, Robert Williams (NDP — Vancouver East) said,

Punitive Raid

BEIRUT (UPI) — Strong Israeli air and ground forces struck today into Lebanon along a 60-mile front to within 34 miles of Beirut in a major seek-and-destroy mission against Arab guerrilla bases. Arab and Israeli military sources called it one of the heaviest punitive raids since the 1967 war.

Well, Almost All

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI) — The Chilean government says it will pay back only $84 million of a $92 million government-guaranteed loan made by the Kennecott Copper Corp. in 1967. SAO PAULO FIRE TOLL HITS 16

SAO PAULO, Brazil (UPI) — A floor-by-floor search today of the skeletal remains of a department store-office building uncovered more victims of the fire that totally destroyed the 28-story building.

Discovery of eight more bodies raised the death toll to at least 16 persons.

The fire, worst in Sao Paulo in several decades, was the most spectacular in the city's history, with helicopters airlifting at least 150 persons to safety from the roof of the blazing building. At least 400 persons were injured, many of them in serious condition.

Police and hospital sources said most of the casualties were from burns or caused by people leaping from lower floor windows.

'Berserk' Mob Raids UIC Office

BATHURST, N.B. (CP) — Police reinforcements stood by today in the wake of Thursday's battle between demonstrators and police at the local office of the federal Unemployment Insurance Commission. The demonstrators were gone, however, and the streets of this northern New Brunswick city were quiet.

A crowd estimated by organizers at about 1,000 held a preliminary meeting at Bathurst College, some travelling up to 125 miles to participate, and city police chief J. J.

O'Neil said about 500 continued on to the UIC office.

The staff was evacuated and the building locked before the group arrived. Police were standing guard inside.

"We were completely unprepared for what happened," said Chief O'Neil. . . . They just went berserk."

He said police had gone out of their way to direct traffic as the demonstrators marched through the town and had expected a peaceful demonstration.

No arrests were made as the protesters scuffled with police and smashed glass doors at both the front and rear of the building but the chief said he was "quite certain" charges would be laid. "We recognized some of them."

He said one RCMP officer had his nose broken in the melee and another officer had "the boots" put to him by the crowd after he was pulled outside the office.

The commission said the office will be closed today and only male employees will be reported for work. Files will be guarded around the clock by RCMP, it added.

Toronto Airport Normal

By The Canadian Press
Air Canada, biggest user of Toronto International Airport, reported today that none of its flights in or out of Toronto have been cancelled because of an air technicians' strike.

The company scheduled 107 flights today. CP Air reported its 13 flights also were on schedule.

However, delays in commercial flights tend to build up during the day because of the absence of radar, which has not operated during the strike, now in its 18th day.

In Montreal, Air Canada cancelled six flights today, four to Toronto, one to Ottawa and one to Chicago.

PoWs Exchanged

NEW DELHI (UPI) — India and Pakistan traded wounded and sick prisoners of war today, marking the first such exchange since the 14-day war between the two countries ended Dec. 17. An International Red Cross transport plane flew from New Delhi to Rawalpindi to start the exchange.

Hijackers Get $5M

BONN (AP) — Transport Minister Georg Leber announced today the West German government paid a ransom of $5 million to obtain the release of a hijacked Lufthansa jumbo jet and its 14 crew members.

Leber told a news conference that a Lufthansa security official carried out the detailed terms for the payment of the money to members of an Arab guerrilla organization in Beirut, Lebanon.

He said the money was handed over at 7 a.m. EST

Wednesday about 35 miles from Beirut airport, several hours after a deadline given by the hijackers for exploding the aircraft and its crew.

"It was like a perfect thriller plot," Leber said.

He said the $5 million ransom was the only demand made by the five hijackers, whom he described as members of an organization called the Victims of Zionist Occupation, a "daughter organization" of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine.

NUNEATON, England (UPI) — Police said 36 drums of cyanide found dumped on a children's playground contained enough poison to kill millions of Britons.

"Scores of children play on the site," a police spokesman in Nuneaton, outside Birmingham said Thursday. "There was some leakage from some of the canisters and if a child had touched it and put his fingers to his mouth it could have been fatal."

The police said children found the drums Thursday in a disused brickyard used mostly as a playground.

Police put a guard on the site and began an investigation to find out who left the drums.

"A dangerous feature of this deliberate dumping was that some of the drums had been clearly marked in paint with the words 'poison' or 'cyanide' and a deliberate attempt had been made to erase these words," one police officer said.

"To dump in this way is a diabolical action," chemist John Cope said. "There is enough here to wipe out the entire population of the midlands."

Chou Pledges Friendship

PERING (UPI) — Chou En-lai has pledged after four days of intensive summit talks with President Nixon to "work unswervingly" to promote friendship and normalization of relations with the United States.

Nixon, noticeably fatigued and somber, said in a banquet toast a few hours after the latest meeting with Chou that he hoped "peace and harmony can be the destiny of our two peoples."

Nixon expressed hope during his remarks, at the banquet he hosted in the Great Hall of the People, for "a new world order in which nations of people with different systems and different values can live together in peace. . . . letting history rather than the battlefield be the judge of their different ideas."

The president told Chou and the other 500 guests: "We began our talks recognizing that we have great differences. But we are determined that those differences not prevent us from living together in peace."

In response, Chou agreed with Nixon there are wide differences between the two systems of government but declared:

"It is the common desire of the Chinese and American people to enhance their mutual understanding and friendship and promote the normalization of relations between China and the United States."

"The Chinese government and people will work unswervingly toward this goal."

Neither Nixon nor Chou provided any clue to any agreements that may have been reached during Nixon's unprecedented visit to China.

But it was known that agreement in principle has been reached on a greater exchange of persons such as students, newsmen and scholars, increased trade and some form of diplomatic communication in the future, short of full formal relations.

These details "filtered through an extraordinarily tight lid of secrecy that both sides placed on the summit talks. The news blackout on the part of Nixon's official White House party was considered unparalleled in recent presidential history as far as international meetings were concerned."

It has been presumed that a formal communique would be issued at the conclusion of the discussions. But there still was no word tonight — less than 12 hours before Nixon leaves the Chinese capital — when and if a statement would be forthcoming.

Dictator, Dictator, Yells NDP's Barrett

"The only way you can justify it, is that it is the action of an old bully."

The incidents leading up to Nimsick being named began at 3:30 a.m. when the NDP whip stood to address Bennett.

"As whip of the opposition I would like to say a few words to the premier. The premier asked us to negotiate at 3:30 a.m. He didn't have the courage or decency to call for negotiations at 11:30 p.m. Now he does it at 3:30 in the morning."

CONTEMPT

"He shows contempt for the people of British Columbia. He wanted to show he was boss of the house."

Chairman Herb Bruch was standing while Nimsick was shouting at Bennett.

"Two members cannot be standing at the same time," Bruch said.

"Then why don't you sit down?" Nimsick shouted.

"Cheap commie tactics," shouted Labor Minister James Chabot.

"Get yourself a new pair of jackboots," shouted Ernie Hall (NDP-Surrey).

"I order the member to be seated," Bruch told Nimsick.

"I'm not threatening the chair at all, I'm trying to fight for the people of British Columbia," Nimsick said.

"Dictator, dictator, dictator," Barrett shouted at Bennett over the noise between Nimsick and Bruch.

"Tell the people of British Columbia how you operate at three o'clock in the morning," Nimsick yelled at the premier.

Nimsick yelled at the premier.

"This is not the way to operate the legislature of British Columbia," Nimsick continued. He had been shouting continuously for nearly 10 minutes.

"I ask the honorable member to withdraw from the legislature," Bruch said.

"Why should I withdraw?" Nimsick said.

Finally, Bruch said, "I name you for refusing to leave the chamber."

Barrett, his voice straining with anger, shouted to Bennett above the din: "We're not going to be bullied any more by you, ever, ever."

"Your black morning," said Bob Williams to Bennett.

Nimsick was suspended from the legislature until 2 p.m. Feb. 29 on the motion of Education Minister Donald Brothers seconded by Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell.

The motion carried by a vote of 30 to 15 at 3:40 a.m. All opposition members voted against the government.

Speaker William Murray said to the NDP member who had sat continuously in the house since 1949, the longest of any MLA sitting:

"Mr. Nimsick, will you leave the chamber?"

"I'll do it on behalf of the people of British Columbia," Nimsick said.

"He can take his hammer and sickle with him," said John Tisdalle (SC-Saanich and the Islands).

"John Birchers, fascists," said Robert Strachan (NDP-Cowichan-Malahat).

RECESS

Wallace made his motion to have the question put after a 10-minute recess in which the New Democrats had turned down an unspecified "deal" with the government.

"We can make no deals,"

Barrett announced in the house. "You're the house leader," he told Bennett. "You determine what's done."

Wallace was then recognized by the chair and said that it appeared the two sides of the house had reached an impasse "by no particular design" and that as the one single member of the house it wouldn't be out of place for him to move the question now be put.

A confusing procedural fight then erupted, with Barrett claiming the motion was out of order because there had been no seconder.

On checking the house rules, he agreed no seconder was needed but pointed out that such a motion must not "infringe the rights of the minority" in the judgment of the chairman.

Noting a substantial number of MLAs were still attempting to speak, Barrett said such a motion would in fact infringe those rights.

As Bruch appeared to be moving to a vote on the Wallace motion, Liberal Leader Pat McGeer shouted that a "deal" to bring closure in the house would be a "disgrace to the democratic process."

Wallace then rose to "categorically and completely deny" that there was any deal with the government.

WITHDRAW

After more confusion, Wallace rose again to say: "I thought I was helping ... in light of the reaction, I withdraw my motion."

Bruch, after a delay, denied opposition charges that Wallace's motion was out of order and added that unanimous consent of the house was needed for a motion to be withdrawn.

Barrett, meanwhile, had challenged Bruch's original ruling by saying that minority rights would be infringed if the closure question was put.

Bennett then left the house just before 7 a.m. and was driven home by his deputy Lawrie Wallace. He returned at 9:15 a.m. and said he'd had a bath and felt fine.

MOVE FAILED

Bennett was greeted with another adjournment motion which failed.

Earlier, Resources Minister Ray Williston accused the opposition of not being prepared for the debate.

"Get up as men and ask what you want to find out and we'll stay here a week or two weeks if you like, but don't kid the public."

"If you've done your homework, get on your feet and ask your questions."

UGLIER

The debate got uglier after that with Chabot saying the NDP was a "bunch of commies," and Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gagliardi heaping scorn on the opposition.

"This has been one of the crudest sham battles I've ever seen on the floor of this house," Gagliardi said.

"That man's an idiot. He's got no right to harangue the house this way," Strachan said.

At 2:40 a.m. Ernie Hall said he didn't like debating serious public issues at that hour. Bill Hartley (NDP-Yale-Lillooet) called out: "It's hard on the premier. It's going to kill the premier."

There was no reaction from the Socreds.

ABUSE

At 4:22 a.m. Bob Williams (NDP-Vancouver East) urged Peterson to "stand up for himself" against the pre-judgment. Williams then moved another adjournment.

Bruch ruled it an abuse of the rules because the committee had "indicated it wishes to continue the debate." The opposition challenged the ruling and another division was held, government voting against opposition.

Liberal Leader Pat McGeer speaking for the first time in the debate at 4:55 a.m., said it was a "great pity" that the house was sitting at that moment.

"The possibility of rational debate has long since disappeared," he said. "All we are doing is helping to discredit the parliamentary system."

"If that isn't insanity, I don't know what is," he said.

Nothing that legislatures usually sit through the night only in times of "overriding causes," McGeer said. "The great overriding cause this evening is the mental aberration of the people who run the government."

Liberal Leader Pat McGeer appealed to Peterson at 8:30 a.m. to pull his salary vote back "in the name of commonsense and in the interests of the well being of the members of this house."

McGeer recalled that lengthy night sitting had "led to the death of a member of this house" in previous years, George Hobbs, a New Democrat MLA, died in 1962 not long after being stricken during a long sitting.

McGeer was gavelled down by supply committee chairman Herb Bruch who ordered him to speak to the vote under debate.

The mood of the House, except for the few high-pitched moments, was almost mellow by normal standards as the marathon wore on.

When debate resumed after a recess about 8 a.m., Herb Capozzi (SC - Vancouver Centre) called over to the opposition:

"If you don't quit now, we'll put Tisdalle up."

Opposition MLAs regularly go through a mock surrender when John Tisdalle (SC - Saanich and the Islands) speaks.

When Frank Calder (NDP - Atlin) rose to speak for the first time shortly after, he said, "I have a few questions for the attorney-general."

"Why?" asked a Socred.

"Because I have to leave for Vancouver at 9 o'clock," replied Calder.

Unlike many legislatures, the B.C. legislature has no night sitting time limit beyond which unanimous consent of the house is needed to continue.

Opposition MLAs have made an annual, unsuccessful attempt to have such a limit to prevent the long night sittings which have become a trademark of B.C. politics—"legislation by exhaustion."

up on their feet shouting at Barrett. The NDP leader explained he meant only the premier and the attorney-general were phonies, not the entire government.

Then he had to withdraw the statement on the order of committee chairman Herb Bruch.

"You can't have it both ways," Barrett was saying when Bennett shouted across the floor.

"Where's your political commitment?" said the premier.

"Well, we have a federal party and we're not ashamed of it. Where's your federal party?" Barrett said.

He said there's nothing wrong with the name RCMP and it should be retained as "part of the tradition of this country." Barrett then told the government it can't have things both ways.

"This government should announce that it has an absolute commitment to Canada—that it will not change the name of the Trans-Canada Highway."

"Will you send a telegram tonight?" Barrett said.

"Not at your request, no," Peterson answered.

Outside the house, Peterson said he had no doubt most of B.C.'s RCMP would join a provincial police force. He refused to answer questions about how much it would cost to run the force, whether Ottawa would pay any money toward it and whether the province could afford its own police.

"You'll have to wait until you take your seat in the house before you can ask those questions," he told the reporter.

While Peterson was speaking in the corridor, Robert Williams (NDP-Vancouver East) walked past saying "Jingo bells, jingo bells."

Under existing agreements, B.C. will pay $10 million in fiscal year 1972-73 for its share of RCMP costs in unorganized territories.

The figure is up dramatically from 1971-72 estimates of $6.98 million for RCMP. Ontario and Quebec are the only provinces with provincial police forces.

B.C. had a provincial police force from 1858 until 1950.

MAYOR LIED—POLICE

MONTREAL (CP) — Two policemen testified today Mayor Jean Drapeau lied to a Quebec Police Commission inquiry when he said he knew nothing of a document allegedly signed by a woman in 1967 and incriminating Montreal Police Chief Jean-Jacques Saulnier.

Lieut. Emile Ducharme and Constable Leo Villeneuve told the inquiry the mayor lied when he said he knew nothing about a declaration by Martha Adams and that it was not among the mayor's documents.

The two policemen said the declaration had been included in a series of documents they gave Mayor Drapeau in May, 1967, and had been discussed during a meeting a year later with the mayor "for about two hours."

Auto Insurance Hikes Studied

By BRUCE YEMEN
Times Staff

Under heavy opposition attack, Attorney-General Leslie Peterson early today told the legislature the government is studying the car insurance companies' practice of raising insurance premiums for driving offences.

Peterson said he didn't agree with opposition claims that the practice enabled insurance companies to disperse penalties properly belonging to the courts.

But he said the practice is being reviewed by the B.C. Automobile Insurance Board as part of a larger study of rate-making by insurance companies.

FINING THEM

Opposition Leader Dave Barrett told Peterson insurance companies are effectively imposing rates for minor traffic offences such as speeding.

Peterson said the principle is that law-abiding drivers should have better rates, but Barrett asked why rates for good drivers don't go down if that the attorney-general said is true.

"Tell me the exact number of drivers that have had their rates reduced because they have been law-abiding," said Barrett.

Barrett said he isn't a lawyer but you don't have to be to know that Peterson "doesn't know what he's talking about."

"The system works this way — if you are a good driver you can expect a regular increase."

He urged Peterson to start a newsletter to the insurance companies informing them of latest policy changes so they can tell their subscribers about them.

Robert Strachan (NDP—Cowichan-Malahat) said nothing Peterson has said indicates he is willing to curtail the powers of the industry to fine drivers.

The way Peterson runs auto insurance in B.C., Strachan said, is a "parody of a charade of a farce."

He said the insurance companies have had 15 years to prove they are willing to serve the public and they have not done so.

Strachan said 85 per cent of the people in the province want government-operated automobile insurance but the Socreds won't bring it in because they are trying to protect their friends in the industry.

test their friends in the industry.

"That's the basis on which your incompetence is based. It's another example of your gutlessness and I mean that," Strachan told Peterson.

He said he will not be satisfied until Peterson orders refunds of premium overcharges during the past two years and "forgets the Social Credit insurance agents in the province."

INCOMPETENT

At 1:10 a.m. Barrett had said he wanted to deal with automobile insurance and Peterson's "incompetence as an administrator."

He recalled the Donna Hitchman Taylor case which last year caused him to get thrown out of the House for a week after he refused to give up asking Peterson to change the automobile insurance law which denied accident benefits to survivors of persons who lived for more than 180 days after a car accident and then died.

Three months later, in July, 1971, Peterson changed the 180-day rule, Barrett said, asking why it had taken so long.

FUTILE ACTION

He answered the question himself — "petulance" and "administrative malaise" on the part of Peterson.

Peterson said the action that followed Barrett's ejection from the House demonstrated the "futility" of his action. It was under study at the time, he said.

Peterson disagreed that premium increases for driving offences were a penalty.

"It's a question of what are the criteria for setting rates," he said, adding that the question was being looked at by the automobile insurance board.

Barrett reviewed other cases of complaint about B.C. insurance laws, saying Peterson's department had failed to answer letters from citizens and had failed to notify insurance companies of interpretations of the law which would help claimants.

No attempt was made, he said, to inform owners of campers compulsory no-fault insurance was useless when there were three children in the camper.

When no-fault insurance premiums were ordered reduced from $21 to $15 in January, Peterson failed to ensure that decreases covered the 1970 and 1971 policy years when motorists were overcharged, Barrett said.

School referendum opponent F. E. Wright plans to spend some of his own money on newspaper advertisements in response to the Greater Victoria school board's plan to advertise in support of the referendum.

Wright, of 993 Karen Crescent, was one of the organizers of a petition which forced the board to go to a referendum to get approval for a budget which is $412,000 above the provincially-set limit.

The referendum will be held March 11.

Wright said today he still wants to know why the board's administration budget increased from $874,000 to more than $1,260,000 in less than two years. He said he has yet to get a straight answer to the question and will say so in the advertisements he plans to buy.

He said he will wait for the board to publish their ads before he responds. The school board decided Thursday night to buy $705 worth of ads in three newspapers and radio stations to try to explain the referendum and say why it should be supported.

Doctors Welcome Curbs on Drugs

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The Canadian Medical Association Thursday commended the federal government for its intentions to crack down on the use of methadone and amphetamines and offered its cooperation "in every way possible."

Health Minister John Munro had earlier announced to the Commons that methadone, which is used as a substitute drug in heroin addiction treatment, and amphetamines, which are commonly known as "speed," can be prescribed only with his permission.

"It is gratifying to have the federal government consult the profession in depth before enacting such legislation — as has been the case on these subjects," the CMA statement said.

"We have no doubt that the necessary controls to eliminate misuse can be developed without hindering good medical care. We will co-operate in every way possible towards that goal."

'TAKE SOME TIME'

While urging "all possible speed" in the non-medical and medical abuses of methadone, the CMA however said that controls on amphetamines "will take considerable effort and some time to implement."

The CMA agreed with Munro that these regulations will not substantially reduce the supply to "speed freaks," who, for the most part, obtain their drugs from illicit sources.

And the controls will not also solve the "diet pill problem" but simply shift it to the use of other amphetamine-like drugs. Amphetamines are commonly "misused" by doctors for weight reduction and for the treatment of depression.

"It may prove necessary to recommend even more controls on these drugs," the CMA said.

NO MUMPS VACCINE FOR B.C.

The provincial government, which now provides immunization for the two types of measles, won't be buying a new three-in-one vaccine which would also add immunization from mumps.

Dr. A. A. Larsen, director of the provincial health department's division of epidemiology, said today mumps is not seen as a sufficiently significant problem to call for immunization as public expense.

The three-in-one vaccine recently approved by the federal food and drug directorate protects against rubella, rubeola and mumps, the first two being types of measles.

The province now supplies both measles vaccines to children's clinics.

Larsen said triple and double vaccines are expensive. But a double vaccine covering both types of measles is being considered because it could save money in the long run.

The two measles vaccines

currently provided by the province have to be given separately. A double vaccine could be given in one injection and that together with less packaging may make the savings worthwhile.

The province also provides vaccinations for polio, typhoid, diphtheria and rheumatic fever.

A woman found unconscious Wednesday night in a ditch near the Malahat was identified by RCMP today as Dale Cloverdale, 19, of 1026 Pemberton, Victoria.

The girl remains unconscious and in critical condition in Cowichan District Hospital. She was taken there shortly before midnight Wednesday.

Miss Cloverdale carried no identification when she was found, and she was identified only when a friend came forward to police Thursday to report her missing from work.

Investigators still are baffled about the circumstances of the incident. The details as they have them so far:

Miss Cloverdale left work in the Sweet Sixteen shop at the Hillside Shopping Centre, 3176 Shelbourne, at 9 p.m. Wednesday, driving a blue 1964 Ford, licence number AAG-209, owned by her mother, Mrs. Pat Cloverdale of Sidney.

She was spotted unconscious in a ditch on the Shawnigan Lake cutoff, 1½ miles from the Malahat, at 11:15 p.m. The car she was driving is not in that area and has not been found.

Bruises on the woman's face made it difficult to estimate her age, and police at first thought her to be about 14. She was clothed and had not been sexually assaulted.

Timber Land Subdivision Called Unfair

MacMillan Bloedel's plan to sell as real estate tracts of land no longer suitable for logging today was called unfair.

Mark Holmes, Capital Regional District director for Salt Spring Island said land bought at low prices for forestry purposes and enjoying a special low tax levy should not be used for land speculation profits.

The plan was announced Thursday by MB board chairman J. V. Clyne, who described the land involved as "primarily recreational."

"The owners of these tree farms are enjoying lower taxes than the ordinary holder of land," Holmes said. "It's unfair to permit lower-taxed timber land to be subdivided and to allow the owners to reap enormous capital gains."

He said low-taxed timber land should remain as timber land because it was acquired for that purpose and is taxed on that basis.

Holmes said MB owns about three-quarters of Galiano Island and about 5,000 acres on Salt Spring Island as well as property on other islands.

He said there is no possibility of preserving green belts on the Gulf Islands if the timber lands are used for real estate.

"This is just another Marathon Realty," he said. "It's horrible."

Equal Amount for Greenbelts

He said logging companies have a certain responsibility to the people of British Columbia since the government over the years has leaned over backwards to assist them.

"For example, I'm under the impression that the more land a company has under tree farm licences, the more it receives cutting rights on Crown land."

Elton Anderson, a director of the Federation of B.C. naturalists, said the MB real estate venture will have a profound effect on regional district planning.

"If the company is going to do this, then the government should take out an equal amount of land from Crown forest lands and use it for parks and greenbelts," he said.

The MB venture has also added fuel to the Nitinat controversy, involving Trustat, Squilicum and Hobbitan lakes, the last unspoiled low-level lakes on Vancouver Island.

The National Parks Branch, backed by conservationists and environmentalists, are fighting to save the lakes' watershed from the axe, and to include the 8,000-acre forest area into the Pacific Rim National Park.

MacMillan Bloedel and B.C. Forest Products are opposing the proposal on the grounds that it would mean a loss of forest lands and reduce the flow of fibre to the mills.

Archibald Galbraith, chairman of the Association of Vancouver Island Municipalities, said MB's decision to go into real estate has shot down the argument the Nitinat triangle would mean a serious loss of timber.

"If they are going to use large tracts of their timber farms for real estate, they can hardly argue that they need the timber in the Nitinat triangle," he said.

LEARNING TO SPEAK will be made easier for children with speech defects through a gift presented to the G. R. Pearkes Clinic for Handicapped Children by the Village Squires. President Tim Sinclair is seen presenting a phonic mirror to speech therapist Gail Robertson. The machine provides instant automatic speech playback and, using head set, can also be used as an auditory trainer for children attending the clinic. (John McRay Photo.)

Trespass Probe Started

By CLEMENT CHAPPEL

The federal department of transport is investigating a possible trespass on federal property by the Princess Patricia apartment development in West Bay.

If the trespass is confirmed, construction of a public walkway along the Victoria waterfront may result.

City officials said the alleged discovery that the Princess Patricia development and a nearby Diamond Developments building have both encroached on federally-owned foreshore could be a bargaining lever with which to open up the waterfront.

DOT officials were not sure the Princess Patricia was completed about seven years ago. The Diamond Developments project is under construction.

Encroachment on the foreshore by Diamond Developments first came to light last year midway during construction.

MP David Anderson was promised an investigation by DOT minister Don Jamieson, and Diamond Developments did not deny the charge.

On Thursday, Victoria council received a report from the Victoria Advisory Planning Commission which contained the allegation that the Princess Patricia had also illegally filled in the shoreline.

The VAPC report says: "It appears that a similar trespass took place when the Princess Patricia apartment was built on the adjoining site, and fill appears to have encroached on to the foreshore, again on to lands controlled by the federal Department of Transport."

The APC report adds that "the matter of public access across these parcels is now being explored."

In a report prepared by the city planning department yet to be made public, a waterfront promenade is proposed.

Hope for this promenade was raised when the federal government recently promised to sell the city the Barnard Estate which is the last open piece of natural land in the West Bay area within city boundaries.

Completion of the waterfront promenade would be greatly facilitated by access to the Diamond Developments and Princess Patricia properties.

The VAPC report discusses the foreshore question as a sidelight of its recommendation to refuse a rezoning request on another adjacent property.

West Bay Investments, the company that built the Princess Patricia, had applied to rezoned the adjacent property from highrise to ordinary apartment jurisdiction.

The VAPC report notes that the Princess Patricia was originally approved in conjunction with a plan to put up four or five highrises in the area, but only the Princess Patricia was built.

The West Bay company is controlled by its parent, Slegg Bros. Lumber Ltd. The Princess Patricia was sold three years ago to Amos Investments, a Vancouver company.

Bids 'Moderate' For Housing

Three bids totaling $1,070,455 were submitted Thursday for a dispersed rental housing project for low-income families in Saanichton.

The proposals have to be studied in detail by the technical committee of the three partners involved — federal, provincial and municipal — but Ald. Edith Gaudin, chairman of Saanichton lands and housing committee, said today she hopes they will prove acceptable.

"I am delighted with the bids," she said. "It looks as if we may have 62 units of attractive housing in a variety of forms, and the prices are fairly moderate."

The scheme, unique in British Columbia, aims to get away from the "ghetto" concept of low-income housing by small, attractive groupings dispersed over a wide area of the municipality.

The specifications called for 60 dwellings of two and three-bedroom units. But Gaudin Downing, manager of Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, said the fact that 62 units have been submitted does not mean that two will have to be cut.

Krieger, Stricker and Company Ltd. submitted two bids — one for 20 units at a cost of $335,000 and the other for 18 units at $292,250.

J. McLaren Construction Ltd. submitted a 20 unit, $375,000 scheme and Victoria Home Builders' Association entered a four-unit project at a cost of $88,725.

Requirements were that the proposals should be for 20 units or less, with 75 per cent of the accommodation being two-bedroom units.

The federal and provincial governments will share the capital cost, 75-25, and the operating subsidy will be split 75-25-25 between Ottawa, B.C. and Saanichton.

Bids will be fixed by the B.C. Housing Management Commission which will operate the project.

ALDERMEN BACK NIGHT FERRY

Victoria council Thursday supported a drive by local business and other organizations to get a night ferry route between here and the Lower Mainland.

Council's motion was backed strongly by Ald. Ove Witt, who said citizens should "put a lot of pressure on the government to do something for us."

There are many business and sports organizations, as well as private individuals, who would benefit greatly if the B.C. Ferry service operated a late-night crossing.

"This would be very important for the community at large, and particularly for the business community," Witt said.

Ald. Mike Young said he understands the C.P.R. is planning to start a night freight route between Victoria and Vancouver. Any such route should be on the public ferry service, he said.

B.C.'s Two-Day Naval Fleet Relieved by Old Rainbow Hand

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

An English octogenarian who was in on the birth pangs of Canada's navy visited CFB Esquimalt on Thursday.

He is John Elliott. He's 81 and still limber enough to scramble down the hatchway of a submarine.

He was aboard the cruiser HMCS Rainbow when she steamed into Esquimalt Harbor Nov. 7, 1910, having left the British port of Portsmouth in August of that year.

He was 19 then, serving as captain's valet to the Royal Navy skipper, Capt. J. D. D. Steward.

On Thursday, he toured the dockyard and was shown over the Canadian submarine that now bears his old ship's name.

This is Elliott's first visit to Victoria since he returned to England in 1915.

His first reaction:

"Oh, my God — look at all those highrises!"

In addition to being present at the birth pangs of Canada's navy, Elliott witnessed one of the most arduous acts of smuggling carried out on this coast.

The contraband goods — two submarines!

This happened at the outbreak of the First World War.

B.C. Premier Richard McBride, concerned over the lack of coastal defences, made a deal with J. V. Paterson of the Seattle Drydock.

They met in secret at the Union Club, McBride wrote a cheque for $1,150,000 and endorsed it.

By doing so, the province then became owner of its own navy — two submarines in the Seattle drydock, built for the Chilean government.

The submarines were up for grabs because Chile had fallen down on the payments.

They were smuggled out of Seattle. If the authorities had known their departure would have been stopped because it meant breaking American neutrality.

Elliott was aboard the sloop HMCS Shearwater that escorted the two submarines back to Esquimalt.

The submarines, named Iquique and Antofagasta, belonged to B.C. for two days.

They were then bought by the Canadian government, serving here for three years before leaving for Halifax and England in 1917.

Elliott will shortly be heading for the Queen Charlotte Islands on the last leg of his pilgrimage into the past.

Abortion Study Continues

Doctors and board members at Queen Victoria Hospital are studying how voluntary abortions and sterilization operations could be added to the hospital's workload.

But doing the operations at the hospital is not yet established policy, board chairman Alex Wood said today.

They have not been done to date because until recently the hospital was under the control of the Sisters of St. Ann and the Catholic church is opposed to such operations.

Wood said the matter was discussed at the hospital board meeting Thursday night and a committee of doctors on staff and board members will continue to work on details of how the workload might be handled.

"We still have the basic problem of all the hospital's beds being filled," he said.

Earlier this month the sisters gifted their equity in the hospital to the community and turned operation over to a public body — the Southern Vancouver Island Hospital Society.

By THOMAS O'TOOLE

WASHINGTON (WP) — The first spacecraft to fly out of the solar system carries a greeting from earth for an alien civilization.

The spacecraft is the Pioneer P that is scheduled to be launched from Cape Kennedy Sunday night on a mission to Jupiter. Pioneer will swing by that planet on its way into the cosmos where there is a remote chance it might be recognized as an artificial body and intercepted by an intelligent and advanced civilization.

Pioneer's greeting is engraved on a plaque fixed to the spacecraft's antenna-support struts. On the plaque are the images of a naked man and woman, the man with his right hand raised in friendship. They are shown standing slightly apart in front of Pioneer, which is drawn to scale.

To left of the man and woman is a radial pattern of abstruse lines that depict the 14 pulsating stars (pulsars) in the Milky Way galaxy. A 15th line reaches far to the right and symbolizes the centre of the galaxy where earth is located.

"The pulsars are the only stars in the galaxy that are running down at known rates, just like clocks," said Cornell University's Dr. Carl Sagan, one of three people who conceived and designed the plaque. "They are ideal symbols to specify where the spacecraft came from and when."

NASA AGREED

Sagan said the original idea for the plaque came from the Christian Science Monitor's Eric Burgess, who approached Sagan three months ago over the lack of a plaque on the spacecraft.

"I agreed with him, but I didn't think there was any chance that NASA would go along with anything so frivolous," Sagan said. "But I called John Naugle (NASA's associate administrator for space science) and he was astonishingly congenial about the idea."

Sagan then turned for ideas to Cornell's Dr. Frank Drake, who together with Sagan has long been interested in ways man might use to contact intelligent beings from another solar system.

"We discussed a lot of possibilities, like whether to depict a man, woman and child," Drake said, "but we agreed that the message had to be something that described ourselves."

Sagan brought his artist wife Linda into the discussion, and it was she who thought of a simple drawing of a naked man and woman.

"We wanted to show what we really looked like," Linda Sagan explained. "Besides, what kind of clothes would you put on them? Clothes would be misleading as well as dishonest."

FEATURES UNIVERSAL

Drake, Sagan and Sagan's wife also decided to give the man and woman no single racial characteristic. The woman's eyes are Oriental, the man's facial features are Negroid. Both could also be Caucasian.

"We want to depict this plaque as coming from all mankind," Sagan said. "That's also the reason there are no flags or political messages on it."

Sagan said the space agency accepted the naked couple, but objected to Linda Sagan's original drawing of the woman as being a bit too explicit.

"I spent several days at a Telex machine, sending new versions of the man and woman to NASA's Ames Research Centre in California," Sagan said. "The final version has been toned down considerably."

Besides the man and woman and the pulsar map, the Pioneer message contains two other sketches.

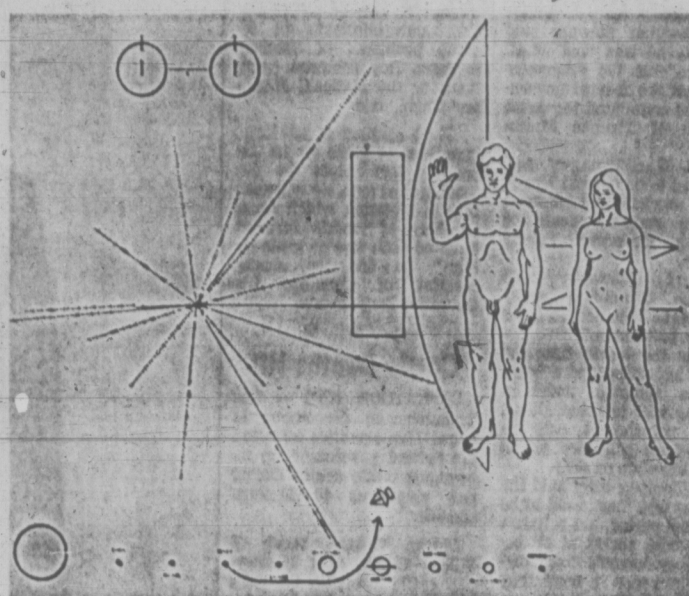

At the top left of the plaque is a schematic drawing of two states of atomic hydrogen, the most abundant atom in the universe. The energy difference between the two states provides the most precise standard of time known to science — which can be used by anybody looking at the plaque as a clue to the pulsar map.

MAP DIFFICULT

Below the pulsar map is a second schematic of the solar system, showing Pioneer leaving earth and swinging behind Jupiter toward the Milky Way galaxy.

Sagan estimated that Pioneer's message will travel a distance of 3,000 light years (18,000 trillion miles) in the next 100 million years — the time he guessed it might take for an alien civilization to discover it.

"In a sense," he said, "it will be the longest lived work of man in history — no matter how long man survives."

AUSSIES CHARGE B. C. CRIMINAL

VANCOUVER (CP) — Raymond Joseph Palmer, one of B.C.'s most-wanted criminals, was charged in Sydney, Australia, Thursday with illegal possession of firearms and was remanded in custody to March 3, Australian officials reported in a telephone interview.

Palmer escaped from the British Columbia Penitentiary in January, 1970, while serving a six-year sentence for possession of stolen bonds.

Australian police said Palmer also is wanted for questioning about the murder of a police informer and a mailed bomb that blew off the hands of a B.C. Penitentiary guard in 1968.

They also said Palmer and his brother, both of whom were arrested in a police raid early Thursday, were being questioned by Australian narcotics agents and that Honolulu police have been asked to be on the lookout for a third man who left Sydney by air for Hawaii earlier this week.

Palmer, 35, surrendered without a struggle when armed New South Wales State and Australian federal police burst into a home in the Sydney suburb of Guilford. The brother, who was not named, was arrested simultaneously in a nearby house.

Recital Scheduled

A student recital in which the studios of 18 Victoria teachers will be represented will take place Saturday at 8 p.m. at St. Matthias Hall.

Sponsored by the B.C. Registered Music Teachers' Association, there will be piano, violin, vocal and choral numbers.

Taking part will be Valerie Sing, Nicky Stow, Andreas Wessler, Douglas Stafford, Linda Pearson, Lynn McAllister, Lise Murray, Susan Stepanick, Kim Dugas, Janice Eldridge, Laura Anderson, Lorena Lauzon, Susan Pye, Diana Ottosen, Pamela Tucker, Ernest Stricker, Cathy Anne Skillings, Patricia Wasylenko, Monica Reed, Catherine March, Ronne Winter, Marc Desbube, Helene Barker, Elizabeth Butler, Sylvia Cox, Jean MacRae, Daniel Barer, Sydney Condorshoff, Annabelle Burrows, Vite Melderis, Robert Winkulst and Susan de Burgh.

Accompanying violin numbers will be Mrs. E. J. Bland and Walter Prossnitz.

FEM-LIB 'FOOLISH' —GOLDA

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir thinks women's "liberation" is foolish and it's men, not women, who suffer from discrimination.

"Men are discriminated against," she told a visiting delegation recently, "because they can't give birth to children as we do."

Mrs. Meir, 73, is the mother of two and grandmother of five. In her words, the women's liberation movement "is pretty foolish."

B.C. Hydro Buys Gas Turbine Units

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Hydro and Power Authority announced today it has awarded two contracts for gas turbine units for two generating stations which are to go into operation next year at Prince Rupert and Port Hardy.

Total value of the contracts is $6.8 million. The units will use modified jet aircraft engines, each driving a turbine coupled to an electric generator. They can be powered by either diesel oil or natural gas. The units will be the largest of their type ever ordered by B.C. Hydro.

A 40,500-kilowatt unit for Port Hardy will be supplied by the Curtis-Wright Corporation of Woodridge, N.J., under a $3.7 million contract. A $3.1-million contract goes to United Aircraft of Canada Limited of Longueuil, Que., for a 28,619-kilowatt unit for Prince Rupert.

Kiernan Scuttling Rights—Fisherman

OTTAWA (CP) — Homer Stevens, president of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union, Wednesday accused Conservation Minister Ken Kiernan of British Columbia of trying to scuttle bargaining rights for fishermen.

Mr. Stevens said in a statement that Mr. Kiernan has told the Fisheries Council of Canada, an employers' group, that any federally-granted bargaining rights for fishermen might be unconstitutional. The council, quoted Mr. Kiernan in a submission to the federal government concerning federal legislation to amend the Canada labor code to give bargaining rights to some fishermen.

Mr. Stevens, in Ottawa with a union delegation to make submissions on the legislation, said Mr. Kiernan was collaborating in a "semi-secret" way with the fish companies to attempt to deny bargaining rights to fishermen.

B.C. Liquor Ad Ban Law 36 Years Old—Lawyer

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia government merely lifted an exemption from newspapers in the provision when it passed legislation in 1971 prohibiting the advertising of alcoholic beverages, a lawyer for Attorney-General Leslie Peterson told B.C. Supreme Court Thursday.

The lawyer, Lloyd McKenzie of Victoria, opening his defence on behalf of the government in a test case challenging the validity of the legislation, said the province has had a law regulating liquor advertisements since a 1936 revision to the Liquor Control Act.

Reading from a section of that revision which said newspapers were exempted from the ad ban, McKenzie said the exemption came as a result of "considerable political pressure" at the time. However, he did not explain how magazines also came to be exempt.

Through British Columbia history, our legislators have looked upon liquor as a necessary evil and they have resorted to a variety of devices to regulate, confine and curb its lawful distribution," the lawyer said.

"They have blown hot and cold on it. The legislators have always been in the contradictory positions of discouraging, or even prohibiting, its sale on the one hand and, on the other hand, assuming increasingly monopolistic powers with respect to its sale.

"They have been against the promotion of the sale of liquor from early times and the latest amendment is merely the most recent manifestation of this attitude."

McKenzie said there was nothing revolutionary about the legislation outlawing liquor advertisements. The government was simply extending the legislation to include newspapers.

British Columbia had prohibition from 1916 to 1921 and "if a province is competent to outlaw the sale of liquor within its borders, it is competent to outlaw advertising of liquor for sale within its borders."

McKenzie began his defence after lawyer Douglas McK. Brown of Vancouver concluded his argument on behalf of three publishing firms and four tobacco companies which brought the action against the attorney-general.

Involved in the action, which started Tuesday and is expected to end today with decision reserved, are Time Canada Ltd.; Maclean-Hunter Ltd.; Southstar Publisher Ltd.; Benson and Hedges Canada Ltd.; Imperial Tobacco Products Ltd.; Macdonald Tobacco Marketing Ltd. and Rothmans of Pall Mall Canada Ltd.

The seven firms charge that Liquor Act amendments and the Tobacco Advertising Restraining Act, both of which took effect Sept. 1, 1971, are unconstitutional and invalid. The legislation prohibits liquor and tobacco ads in newspapers, magazines and billboards.

Brown told the court the B.C. legislation could cost publications such as Time magazine millions of dollars in fines if they were convicted of contravening its provisions.

He said conviction carries a fine of not less than $1,000 and not more than $2,000 on a first offence. On a second offence, conviction could bring a minimum fine of $2,000 and a maximum levy of $3,000.

He said that in the case of Time magazine, a weekly, fines could total a minimum of $3,000 every week. But if each liquor and tobacco ad in the magazine were considered separately, fines "could run to millions of dollars."

Time magazine has continued to carry liquor and cigarette advertising in editions distributed in B.C., despite the government ban.

Brown said the intent of the legislation was to "stop, effectively stop, all advertising."

Because the magazine is an article of commerce in interprovincial trade, it should not be compelled to change its method of operation, he said. It should not be forced to publish a separate edition for B.C. containing no liquor or tobacco advertising.

Peterson's Judgment Hit Over Gastown Aftermath

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson's handling of the aftermath of the Gastown riot proves his incompetence, Alan Williams (L — West Vancouver-Howe Sound) told the legislature early today.

Speaking at about 3 a.m. during the B.C. legislature's longest sitting, Williams fired a bitter denunciation of what he termed the attorney-general's "appalling lack of judgment" throughout the Gastown case.

He was referring to Peterson's decision to prevent laying of charges against five Vancouver policemen following the Aug. 7, 1971, disturbance.

Williams, a lawyer, noted actions could have been taken in court or through the disciplinary mechanisms of the Vancouver police commission.

PUBLIC CONFUSED

He said people have a right to expect every citizen will be treated equally before the law. But in preventing the laying of charges, he said, Peterson could only have confused the public.

"I find this to be a strange and unseemly action on the part of the attorney-general," Williams said. "So many people who witnessed the entire Gastown incident from afar, who saw the steps that were taken" would naturally be confused.

The Liberal MLA emphasized he was not judging the actions of any of the Vancouver police. But because Peterson's actions led to public confusion about the meaning of the law, he said, it follows that the image of Vancouver's police was lowered.

The attorney-general was the instrument through which the police appeared to escape punishment, Williams added.

"How do you explain this to the young person who says 'I'm being hassled by the fuzz'?"

HONOR Demeaned

Williams said Peterson's three-year career as attorney-general has been catalogued by incidents which are characterized by "ineptitude, perhaps exceeded by inexcusably bad judgment."

He also said Peterson's manner of awarding Queen's Counsel citations had demeaned that honor in B.C. "in a way which has never occurred before."

Williams disagreed with James Lorimer (NDP-Burnaby-Willingdon) who had earlier called for abandoning the practice of awarding QCs.

Then he returned directly to Peterson's conduct as attorney-general to say: "The minister has been called incompetent. I think he is — incompetent, inept and shows bad judgment."

Peterson rose and said it is easy for Williams to make these statements, but they are merely "straw men."

"I suppose he does the same thing occasionally in his practice at law," Peterson said.

He said all the Gastown references are also "straw men" because former B.C. Supreme Court Justice Thomas Dohm recommended in his special inquiry into the incident that charges should not be laid.

Barrie Clark (L — North Vancouver-Seymour) told Peterson he had done "a lousy job" in the past year.

He said delays in the handling of the Gastown disturbance last year resulted from Peterson waiting to see "which way the wind was blowing" with public opinion.

Peterson denied delaying, saying he ordered an investigation into the affair within hours of receiving a report on the disturbance.

Ernie Le Cours (SC — Richmond) told the legislature

there was no excuse for the way the police handled themselves that evening.

He said the crowd had no way to escape from the area and the police had, no justification for making the initial charge against the crowd.

He said he was glad that Peterson did not prosecute all five policemen who nearly were charged after the riot.

"I think the prosecution of five policemen would have been inadequate. There were considerably more than five policemen who got away with assault or brutality on the night of Aug. 7," he said.

Le Cours later estimated the number at between 10 and 15 police.

He said the police should have pursued an individual policy of arresting people for smoking marijuana, rather than showing up in a large group.

The riot began when police charged a throng of people gathered in Gastown for what originally was intended to be a marijuana smoking protest event.

U.K. COALMINERS OKAY PAY PACT

LONDON (AP) — Britain's 280,000 coal miners today ended their country-wide strike, casting an overwhelming majority vote to accept a settlement that guaranteed a speedy windup of a power crisis disrupting Britain's economy and idling millions.

The miners voted by 210,039 to 7,581 — a margin of more than 27 to 1 — to accept a big pay offer from the state-run National Coal Board. The offer was based on the recom-pendations of a government-appointed court of inquiry.

The miners will go back to work Monday.

The results meant that officials could go ahead with plans for an industrial recovery after a power famine had threatened to close industry.

Power cuts are expected to continue for several weeks, until coal supplies are built up again at power stations, but the outcome of the vote means the government now can go ahead with reduced cuts.

UBCM Gets Grant

The Union of British Columbia Municipalities has been granted $3,000 by the federal urban affairs ministry for completion of a study on suburban land development.

It comes as part of grants totalling $113,500 announced today for housing research.

They include $45,000 for inter-governmental committee research aimed at improving housing, $50,000 to the Institute of Urban Studies at the University of Winnipeg, $14,000 to the Nova Scotia Public Housing Tenants' Association, and $1,500 for three public seminars on community planning sponsored by the Calgary Community Institute.

Drivers Hurt

Two drivers were sent to hospital Thursday afternoon after a two-car crash at the corner of Cook and Pandora.

Jean Bourquin, 36, of 4150 Birles, was treated and released from Royal Jubilee Hospital for face cuts. Albert Johnson, 57, of 3535 Richmond, suffered minor leg and back injuries.

Car damage totalled $2,000.

YELLOW: CURIOUS?

As readers of either Victoria's daily newspapers may have gathered by now, the city will soon be replacing the white centre stripes on streets with yellow centre stripes.

Apparently, the yellow stripes are easier to see ... or something. Anyway, traffic engineers think they're better.

But what will happen when the yellow stripes start appearing? Will they cause panic? Will they cause crazily from side to side, possibly searching for Oz? Will they cry? Will they demand explanations? Will they turn the rascals responsible out of office?

Who knows? Perhaps anticipating problems of that kind, city traffic engineer David Campbell asked council to spend about $500 to buy an ad in the Times and Colonist explaining the change.

On Thursday council turned down the request. And now the public will never know what the ad might have said.

As a public service, therefore, the Times is pleased to bring you this announcement:

TIED OF THE SAME OLD WHITE LINES EVERYWHERE YOU DRIVE? SEE THE NEW, IMPROVED YELLOW LINES! WATCH 'EM GO BY! STEER SAFELY AROUND CORNERS! AND REMEMBER! STOP ON THE RED ... GO ON THE GREEN ... DON'T MESS WITH MR. IN-BETWEEN.

MLAs Battle All Night

RCMP Or BCP?

By PETER McNELLY
Times Staff

If the federal government abandons the name of the RCMP, British Columbia will create a provincial police force, Attorney-General Leslie Peterson said Thursday.

The surprise announcement brought an immediate and mocking denunciation from Opposition Leader Dave Barrett.

He accused Peterson and Premier Bennett of being "phonies" who removed the Trans-Canada Highway signs to suit their separatist whims and later talk like nationalists for political advantage.

Peterson rose in the legislature after George Mussallam (SC—Dewdney) made an emotional speech criticizing Ottawa for altering RCMP insignia.

Mussallam showed the House a picture in the Victoria Times of the signs on Victoria RCMP cars changed to read only "police."

'OUR OWN FORCE'

"If they're not going to have a Royal Canadian Mounted Police, then certainly this province is going to go the way other provinces have and that is to have our own provincial police force," Peterson said.

Bennett led strong desk-thumping applause from the government benches after which Barrett jumped up.

"What a bunch of hypocrites we've had dumped on us tonight," Barrett said.

"Will you get up on your feet and say you're opposed to the Trans-Canada Highway?" he asked Mussallam.

Barrett was referring to the government's removal of Trans-Canada Highway signs last fall and their replacement with signs saying B.C. 1.

"That's the most hypocritical statement I've ever heard from that member in this house and also the most hypocritical by the attorney-general."

SHOUTING MATCH

Not only are the highway signs being replaced, he said, but the government intends to challenge the system of equalization payments, he said.

"Now we're going to have a British Columbia police force."

"No, a Royal British Columbia Police force," Peterson shot back.

"Oh, you're phonies. You're a bunch of phonies, that's what you are," Barrett said.

Bennett and Peterson were

WEARY LEGISLATOR Gordon Dowding (NDP—Burnaby-Edmonds) takes a break in his party's caucus room this morning as government forced a through-the-night sitting which sets a modern record for length. By noon members had sat 16 hours. In 1866, colonial council sat 24 hours, from 1:15 p.m. April 23 to the same time the next day. (Bill Halkett photo.)

Nimsick Suspended In 'Showdown Sitting'

By BRUCE YEMEN and PETER McNELLY
Times Staff

A bleary Legislature strained to the end of a record-breaking 16-hour and 33-minute sitting at 12:33 p.m. today after a marathon showdown over the government's unlimited power to drive the house into exhausted submission.

One veteran New Democrat MLA was "named" and suspended from the house until next Tuesday and closure was almost imposed in a short-lived compromise effort which back-fired in the face of Oak Bay MLA Scott Wallace.

Twelve opposition attempts to adjourn the debate went down to defeat as the combined NDP, Liberal and Progressive Conservative forces battled the Social Credit government in a gruelling sitting that began at 8 p.m.

Refused to Sit Down

It took 18 hours and 18 minutes for the $39.8 million in attorney-general department spending estimates to get house approval. Debate began at 4:15 p.m. Thursday.

Leo Nimsick (NDP—Kootenay) was named by supply committee chairman Herb Bruch (SC—Esquimalt) at 3:40 a.m. when he refused to sit down and stop arguing furiously against Premier Bennett's insistence on approval of Attorney-General Leslie Peterson's spending estimates.

The longest previous sitting of the B.C. legislature lasted 13 hours and 15 minutes from 8:30 p.m. to 9:45 a.m. on April 29-30 1962. The Vancouver Island legislative council had a 24-hour sitting in 1866 before the province of British Columbia was established.

Proposed "deals" between the parties to end the deadlock failed as the long night as opposition forces stuck to their guns, sharing speaking duties among each other. Only a few Socialists took part in the debate.

The 64-year-old Nimsick shares with the 71-year-old Bennett the title of longest consecutive service MLA. Both were elected in 1949, but Bennett had served in the house earlier.

The premier spent little time in the house through the night but was called back frequently for adjournment votes. He looked weary, as did most MLAs.

Debate 'Breaks Down'

At 11:30 p.m., Barrett moved adjournment of the debate for the first time. He said adjournment was necessary to keep the MLAs from getting bitter by staying up too late.

"We'll get the boss up," he said, after making the motion and referring to Bennett who usually sleeps in his office during night sittings.

Barrett's motion failed, then he said:

"The tone of this house is set by the government and we've done enough damage to the reputation of this house earlier this week."

He asked Bennett to reconsider. Bennett would not. Barrett became angry.

"I'm a little tired of getting this system rammed down our

"I'm fed up with this system. You abuse this house, you abuse everything and we're not going to take this any longer. He (Bennett) goes out and sleeps in his office and now we're demanding our rights."

Speaker William Murray was called into the house and told the members they had to accept the directions of chairman Herb Bruch. Murray said he knew it was late and tempers might flare, but people should try to behave in a parliamentary manner.

Barrett Motion Fails

(PC—Oak Bay) moved adjournment.

"In view of the number of members who are sleeping, I move the chairman do now leave the chair," Wallace said.

At the time, Municipal Affairs Minister, Dan Campbell, Rehabilitation Minister, Phil Gagliardi, Labor Minister James Chabot, Herb Capozzi (SC—Vancouver Centre) and Alex Fraser (SC—Cariboo) were either sleeping or acting as though they were.

As the motion went down in defeat, Robert Williams (NDP—Vancouver East) said,

N. Ireland Minister Shot

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — John Taylor, Northern Ireland home affairs minister, was shot and wounded by gunmen in the All-Ireland ecclesiastical capital of Armagh today, officials reported.

First reports said he suffered head wounds but was still alive when admitted to hospital.

Taylor, in his mid-30s, is the first member of Prime Minister Brian Faulkner's cabinet to come under assassination attempt since the outlawed Irish Republican Army opened its present campaign to unite the North with the neighboring Irish Republic.

In Coleraine, Northern Ireland witnesses told an official inquiry Thursday of seeing British paratroops shoot down fleeing demonstrators during the Jan. 30 Londonderry rioting that resulted in the deaths of 13 civilians.

One of the witnesses, a Roman Catholic priest, said he saw a single demonstrator fire two or three shots at soldiers from a hand gun. But he disappeared before troops returned fire.

Other witnesses made no mention of any shooting on the part of civilians, who were engaged in an illegal civil rights march when troops broke it up.

The inquiry established by the British government is being conducted by Lord Widgery, chief justice of England.

It entered its fifth day today and is expected to continue for some weeks in this village, 35 miles from Londonderry.

James Chapman, an English civil servant with the defence ministry and a former regimental sergeant-major in the British Army, testified Thursday he saw paratroops shoot into a crowd of between 150 and 500 persons scrambling away from the soldiers over a rubble barricade in the Bogside district.

Watching from the window of his home, Chapman said, he saw eight armored vehicles sweep into Rossville Street and between 50 and 100 soldiers dismount.

"Almost immediately they assumed firing positions. They fired immediately into the crowd who were trying to cross the barricades less than 50 feet away. . . . I saw three bodies fall."

Ronald Wood, a Londonderry postman and also an Englishman, said he saw a man "gunned down."

"He was facing a soldier and he was hit in the front. He had not fired any shot and had not thrown any bomb."

Rev. Edward Daly, a Roman Catholic curate, said he saw two young men shot. The priest had been running with the crowd as the paratroops

'B.C. CAN DICTATE OVER IMPORTS'

VANCOUVER (CP) — The power of the provincial legislature is supreme and it can "dictate" what products come into the province, Lloyd McKenzie, a Victoria lawyer, told British Columbia Supreme Court Justice E. E. Hinkson today.

"Kenzie said simply because a product is an article of commerce doesn't necessarily mean it has to pass unrestricted into the province."

He was continuing his argument on behalf of Attorney-General Leslie Peterson, the defendant in a test case challenging the validity of legislation passed last year banning the advertising of tobacco and alcohol in the province. See earlier story Page 39.

'Berserk' Mob Raids UIC Office

BATHURST, N.B. (CP) — Police reinforcements stood by today in the wake of Thursday's battle between demonstrators and police at the local office of the federal Unemployment Insurance Commission.

The demonstrators were gone, however, and the streets of this northern New Brunswick city were quiet.

A crowd estimated by organizers at about 1,000 held a preliminary meeting at Bathurst College, some travelling up to 125 miles to participate, and city police chief J. J.

O'Neill said about 500 continued on to the UIC office.

The staff was evacuated and the building locked before the group arrived. Police were standing guard inside.

"We were completely unprepared for what happened," said Chief O'Neill. "They just went berserk."

He said police had gone out of their way to direct traffic as the demonstrators marched through the town and had expected a peaceful demonstration.

No arrests were made as the protesters scuffled with police and smashed glass doors at both the front and rear of the building but the chief said he was "quite certain" charges would be laid.

"We recognized some of them."

He said one RCMP officer had his nose broken in the melee and another officer had "the boots" put to him by the crowd after he was pulled outside the office.

The commission said the office will be closed today and only male employees will report for work. Files will be guarded around the clock by RCMP, it added.

Toronto Airport Normal

By The Canadian Press

Air Canada, biggest user of Toronto International Airport, reported today for the first time in days that none of its flights in or out of Toronto have been cancelled because of an air technicians' strike.

The company scheduled 107 flights today. CP Air reported its 13 flights also were on schedule.

However, delays in commercial flights tend to build up during the day because of the absence of radar, which has not operated during the strike, now in its 19th day.

NUNEATON, England (UPI) — Police said 36 drums of cyanide found dumped on a children's playground contained enough poison to kill millions of Britons.

"Scores of children play on the site," a police spokesman in Nuneaton, outside Birmingham said Thursday. "There was some leakage from some of the canisters and if a child had touched it and put his fingers to his mouth it could have been fatal."

The police said children found the drums Thursday in a disused brickyard used mostly as a playground.

Police put a guard on the site and began an investigation to find out who left the drums.

"A dangerous feature of this deliberate dumping was that some of the drums had been clearly marked in paint with the words 'poison' or 'cyanide' and a deliberate attempt had been made to erase these words," one police officer said.

"To dump it this way is a diabolical action," chemist John Cope said. "There is enough here to wipe out the entire population of the midlands."

Chou Pledges Friendship

PEKING (UPI) — Chou En-lai has pledged after four days of intensive summit talks with President Nixon to "work unwaveringly" to promote friendship and normalization of relations with the United States.

Nixon, noticeably fatigued and somber, said in a banquet toast a few hours after the latest meeting with Chou that he hoped "peace and harmony can be the destiny of our two peoples."

Nixon expressed hope during his remarks, at the banquet he hosted in the Great Hall of the People, for "a new world order in which nations of people with different systems and different values can live together in peace . . . letting history rather than the battlefield be the judge of their different ideas."

The president told Chou and the other 500 guests: "We began our talks recognizing that we have great differences. But we are determined that those differences not prevent us from living together in peace."

In response, Chou agreed with Nixon there are wide differences between the two systems of government but declared:

"It is the common desire of the Chinese and American people to enhance their mutual understanding and friendship and promote the normalization of relations between China and the United States."

"The Chinese government and people will work unwaveringly toward this goal."

Neither Nixon nor Chou provided any clue to any agreements that may have been reached during Nixon's unprecedented visit to China.

But it was known that agreement in principle has been reached on a greater exchange of persons such as students, newsmen and scholars, increased trade and some form of diplomatic communication in the future, short of full formal relations.

These details filtered through an extraordinarily tight lid of secrecy that both sides placed on the summit talks. The news blackout on the part of Nixon's official White House party was considered unparalleled in recent presidential history as far as international meetings were concerned.

It has been presumed that a formal communique would be issued at the conclusion of the discussions. But there still was no word tonight — less than 12 hours before Nixon leaves the Chinese capital — when and if a statement would be forthcoming.

OTHER HOUSE STORIES

Pointing out that the illicit profits in the heroin trade rival those of B.C. Telephone, MLA Garde Gardom (L—Vancouver Point Grey) urged the provincial government Thursday to convene a royal commission on crime. Page 21.

Attorney-General Les Peterson, under sharp attack by Opposition Leader Dave Barrett, told the legislature today the government was studying the practice of auto insurance companies of hiking rates for driving offences. Story on Page 11.

Peterson was also criticized by Liberal Alan Williams for his handling of the Gastown riot aftermath. Story on Page 39.

INJURED WOMAN'S CAR FOUND

Police investigators today discovered the car of a 19-year-old woman found unconscious and seriously injured in a ditch near the Malahat Wednesday night.

An RCMP spokesman said the car was parked in the Shelbourne area. The woman, Dale Cloverdale, of 1026 Pemberton, worked at Sweet Sixteen in the Hillside Shopping Centre.

Police also said reports from Cowichan District Hospital, where Miss Cloverdale remains unconscious and in critical condition, are that the woman's injuries are "consistent" with her being struck by a car.

SEXY FILMS ON TV?

*Sure, but let's try that scene again,
and this time,
would you put

Elizabeth Taylor, Michael Caine in Brian Hutton's 'X, Y and Zee'

BY DAN LEWIS

Is television becoming the new conscience of the movie industry?

The new permissiveness of the past few years on sex and violence in American-produced motion pictures made it unnecessary for the film industry to continue a long-time practice of double-shooting certain scenes unacceptable for American moral standards, but fine for the foreign market.

Conversely, European directors, who were less concerned about moral contamination of audiences from films which were far more explicit on sex did "clean up" the sensual scenes if they hoped to export their movies in America.

Actually, the original practice of double-shooting required very little extra effort. The set remained unchanged and, while the actors involved were still there, a second version was shot. The irony is that American producers, to be competitive on the European market, spiced up their scenes after making a puritanical version for American audiences. In Europe, the passion was toned down in the second version to meet moralistic standards of American exhibitors.

By the late 1960s, however, the general impression was that American audiences were mature enough to cope with the realities of life. Sex, nudity and violence became dominant in American-made films.

Turning Point

But television has developed as an important revenue-producing factor. Movie sales to TV have brought the studios enormous sums. But TV's moral standards, however, match the early movies. So we're back to shooting certain scenes twice.

The turning point in the liberalization of film morality came in the middle of the last decade. A more liberal attitude toward the sensuous scenes developed.

First audiences began to see American films showing breasts, then bare bottoms.

Before this, films which dared to go this far usually were foreign-made and released exclusively in small theatres known as art houses.

Then along came Antonioni's Blow-Up, made in England but financed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. For the first time, an American major studio was going to show a film with full frontal view of two nude girls.

The year was 1967, and I recall the critic's screening of Blow-Up. MGM officials had not seen the film which was shown hours after the print had arrived from England. They were stunned as the scene unreeled and by the time critics got back to their desks, telegrams were already there stating that MGM had disassociated itself with the picture, and American distribution had been taken over by Premier Films.

Premier Films was a never-before-used subsidiary company of MGM formed for just such a contingency in days when all film studios had such outlets to cover for them for release of pictures which the studios did not wish to be publicly associated.

Blow-Up was the turning point. With it, all prior attitudes were abandoned. The film industry set up new standards and set up a code system which justified release of all pictures, despite their content.

Television revenue for films made originally for theatrical release became an important economic factor in the movie industry. So much so that some companies have been saved from insolvency by the sale of their movies to TV.

Two Versions

With that in mind, many producers and directors are resuming the old practice of double-shooting scenes. Most notable at the moment is the latest Elizabeth Taylor film, X, Y and Zee, which co-stars Michael Caine and Susannah York.

Brian Hutton, who directed, revealed that certain scenes were given two versions anticipating sale of TV rights at a future date.

One particular nude scene featuring Miss Taylor in which she's battered and bloodied in a bathtub. This becomes a quick fade, although its initial version (for theatrical release) is several minutes, according to Hutton.

Another sequence with Miss York and Caine in a love scene, at a Scottish highway also had a "cover" shot for TV which never shows Miss York in the nude, but rather protected at all times by the bed sheet.

The original version also called for a grand finale with all three in bed and nude. That was changed, even for theatre release.

There is an ironic footnote to this particular situation. Hutton said, when he started the picture a little over a year ago sex was in with pictures.

"Then 'Love Story' came out," he recalled, "and the producers felt sex was out. So we had a kinky sort of sex picture which everyone felt was too explicit. Fortunately, we also had the second versions of those scenes for future TV."

So, the version of X, Y and Zee being shown in theatres now, according to Hutton, is the one that originally was intended for television.

Black's Beautiful, Swarthy's S'Wonderful

By VERNON SCOTT
HOLLYWOOD (UPI)

Black, they say, is beautiful.
And, presumably, so is white.

Red and yellow skins have been called beautiful, too.
But what about swarthy?

Until recent years swarthy skins generally consigned an actor to villainous parts. Doubtless a carryover from fiction where the heavy often was a dark-haired swarthy varlet, swine, scoundrel or footpad.

Movies and television at last are letting up, much to the relief of Jonathan Lippe and hundreds of other young actors.

Lippe spent five years in New York and seven in Hollywood seeking work as an actor. In the past year parts have come to him in movies and a dozen top television shows.

Lippe is an example of what desire and persistence can do for a young actor in a town where carpenters and garbage men are actors.

"I know carpenters and garbage men are actors because I kept alive by being both while looking for jobs," Lippe said. "I also worked as a day laborer and slept on the floor of an empty apartment."

But Lippe is a survivor. A native of New York, he is an attractive man with a fine physique—but swarthy skin.

"In my movie work and in television I was a heavy or a degenerate," he said. "But I think Dustin Hoffman has changed that cliché of ethnic orientation."

"Producers are going through the human element now. A man with a swarthy skin isn't automatically evil."

The turning point in Jonathan's career came with a television pilot titled Thunder Guys. It never got on the air. But more importantly, he played a cop and it gave studios and producers a chance to see the young actor as something other than a menace.

Now Lippe is the star of a new pilot, Medex, a Sterling

Silliphant story about the paramedical teams which are becoming an extension of emergency crews standing in for medical doctors.

"No profession in the world demands more sacrifice than acting," Lippe said. "The loneliness, the rejection and competition are overwhelming. You're one of 2-300 trying for the same part."

"You're at the mercy of individuals you may never see. When I first came to Hollywood I couldn't even get an appointment with an agent."

"Then after you learn the ropes you're given false hopes, promises that never come through. I lived three blocks from Warner Bros. Studio and couldn't get inside the gate for three years."

'Brother' Saves Polly

NEW YORK (UPI) — Actress-turned-businesswoman Polly Bergen, who shucked a career in television, the stage and movies to head her own cosmetics firm that nearly folded, believes partnership with a conglomerate has put her company on a sound footing.

Such optimism, however, was hard to come by in 1970, the 41-year-old Miss Bergen told UPI. At that time, she was ready to drop the business, the Polly Bergen Co., altogether.

"Money was going out faster than it was coming in," she said. "The stores stopped paying us because they thought we were going to declare bankruptcy."

Miss Bergen, who started the cosmetics firm in 1965 with just one product, Oil of the Turtle, and operated on a mail-order basis at the outset, said the company enjoyed instant success. She suspects that was the reason for its near failure.

A subsidiary of Gulf and Western Industries Inc., Consolidated Brands Inc., heard of the company's plight and after a weekend inspection of the Los Angeles-based plant, decided to provide the dollars needed to keep the company solvent.

Miss Bergen, a walking example of what beauty aids and good body care can do for a woman, is not bitter about the takeover. She remains, in fact, philosophical about it, saying, "I am the company."

The former To Tell the Truth television panelist says the partnership is working perfectly. "I needed a big brother," and written by Emmy-winning Allan Sloane. (90 mins.)

Chronolog, on 5 at 8:30. The February edition of NBC's newsmagazine. Topics will include: a wrenching film on the Vietnam war focusing on the war's impact on Vietnamese children; discussion of an article in the publication "Institute of Naval Procedure," that refers to new multimillion dollar destroyer escorts as "the biggest mistake in the history of U.S. Naval procurement"; and "Fable Safe," a cartoon about the nuclear arms race. (2 hours.)

CBS Playhouse 90, on 7 and 12 at 9:30. Geraldine Page and E. G. Marshall head an excellent cast in "Look Homeward, Angel." Ketti Frings' 1958 Pulitzer drama is a sensitive profile of family life in the South — in particular, fateful events that occur in the lives of one particular family. Adapted from Thomas Wolfe's autobiographical novel; directed by Emmy winner Paul Bogart and produced by David Susskind.

President Nixon's Trip to China, on 12 at 8:30, on 7 at 9:30 and on 5 at 10:30. The President and Mrs. Nixon continue their historic visit to the People's Republic of China. Today, the Nixons fly from Peking to the picturesque city of Hangchow, where they will take a boat ride on the West Lake and attend a banquet in their honor.

Designing Under an Umbrella

As production designer of CBC-TV's The Whiteoaks of Jalna, currently telecast on the network Sundays at 9 p.m. (in color), Richard Lambert has an "umbrella" job. Under his watchful eye come many of the visual aspects of the handsomely mounted series starring Kate Reid and Paul Harding.

Production design is concerned with sets, locations, costumes, make-up, hair-dressing, graphics, properties, special effects, carpentry and painting, staging and still photography.

NORMAL WEEK

Says Lambert, "If one man worked a normal work week and was capable of doing all these jobs, it would take him 25 years to do the production design for the first 13 episodes of The Whiteoaks of Jalna."

About 35 people work on these aspects of the series, and Lambert's team includes Milt Parcher as art director and Arthur Herriott as assistant designer, both of whom share an office with him in CBC's design department. Others stick with the production on the studio set, or on location when the script calls for outdoor shooting.

"Our first job is to make a breakdown of the script, and decide where each scene will be shot, on location or in the studio," says Lambert. "Each hour episode calls for approximately 10 sets (studio and location), for a total of 130 in the entire 13-episode series."

Working hand-in-glove with producer John Trent, "in both cases (on location or in-studio) we make a plan, like architect's drawings; it's a frame of reference which shows the limitations we're up against — determining how the scene is to be shot, the camera angles and the performer's point of view, and how these things relate to the location. Costumes, color, lighting, camera, all are taken into consideration. The scene is plotted in sketches. The director and assistant directors are invariably tied up on the set, so they don't see a location until they get there, except in this form."

Art director Milt Parcher explains, "It's like being a detective in a sense. You know the script requirements, and you rely on your memory of places you've been to. Then you go to the area, and start knocking on doors."

Assistant designer Arthur Herriott recalls one experience: "I was looking for a house in a wealthy neighborhood of Toronto, to fit the script. Driving slowly up and down streets, I was approached by two men who turned out to be Toronto police detectives in plain clothes. They wanted to know what I was doing — probably someone in the neighborhood had seen me casing the area, and they'd phoned the police. I whipped out my identification, but it took a few phone calls to convince them. Then they asked how they could get into the series."

"In selecting a location," says Lambert, "we have to ask are we going to want to use this particular location again, in the future?"

"Very often, we have to rely on a 'crystal ball' to guess in terms of script requirements. We always try and stress the Canadian identity and we're 'thinking' for many departments and exigencies," Lambert says. "Some places, for instance, are not good from a sound reproduction standpoint. We have to consider, in picking a location, whether there is a restaurant within a reasonable distance, for the cast and crew. Otherwise, we have to arrange for a portable catering truck."

FREQUENT CHANGES

"In the studio (where the interiors of Jalna are shot), the sets are very often changed and updated, to mark the passage of years. Also, we re-use sets, make them do double or triple duty by re-dressing them to suggest a totally different locale."

READERS' QUESTIONS

Q: I hope you can help me. I've written and had published several songs, the latest of which Ernie Ford's manager has requested copies. Please help me obtain addresses on Jimmy Dean, Pat Boone, Jerry Vale, Arthur Godfrey, Lawrence Welk, and Mitch Miller. — J.H.

A: Suggest you write to Musician's Union of Los Angeles, 817 No. Vine St., Los Angeles, Calif. 90038, for such extensive assistance.

Q: Where can I write to Bob Hope? — L.P., Tacoma.

A: Write him in care of NBC, Burbank, California.

Q: I'm planning a visit to Hollywood for a convention and would like to know how I would go about meeting some actresses, taking one to dinner. — O.H.

A: Although most are beautiful, actresses are, after all, people, and you'd best meet them as you would any other woman — by chance, through a mutual friend, or whatever. Looking for actresses in Hollywood is as absurd as looking for cowgirls in Texas.

Ironside's New Sidekick Was No Fan

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Barbara Anderson, who played a policewoman in Ironside, is a difficult act to follow, what with her blonde tresses, blue eyes and generous curves.

When Barbara left the series after four years, she had won an Emmy and the hearts of most male viewers.

Filling Barbara's shoes is Elizabeth Baur. Vital statistics: 5-feet, 4-inches tall, 100 pounds, hair brown, eyes blue.

While she is not as well rounded as Barbara, she is every bit as pretty, engaging and in a sneaky, subliminal way endowed with enough sex appeal to fog the vision of her predecessor.

100 INTERVIEWS

Elizabeth plays a cop named Frank Belding, joining Ray Burr, Don Galloway and Don Mitchell in the NBC whodunit.

If the constabulary of the country had sufficient numbers of Elizabeth Baur on their squads the crime rate would drop to nil. Who could resist a pinch by Elizabeth, or vice versa.

"They interviewed 100 girls for this role," Elizabeth said during a shooting break.

"Then they had 14 of us come in and read for the part. Finally they gave seven of us screen tests. I was really surprised they chose me. I'm not the policewoman type physically.

BURR FAN

"I wasn't a big fan of Ironside because I never watched much television at all. But when I was growing up it was a ritual in our house to watch Perry Mason every week. So I was a Raymond Burr fan."

Elizabeth's background is interesting. She is working at Universal, the studio where her father was a top executive for 15 years.

He is now executive head of casting at 20 Century-Fox and advised his daughter not to become an actress. Jack Baur had seen too many sweet young things turn sour on the sound stages.

"Dad didn't know if I had talent and he was afraid I'd be hurt," Elizabeth said.

The slender beauty played a co-starring role in the late, unlamented series Lancer. She has a string of guest appearances on other series to her credit.

'Family' Role Turns On Davis

By JERRY BUCK

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Sammy Davis Jr. sat on the carpet rocking with laughter and pounding the floor as he watched a screening of Archie Bunker fawning over a black man.

Archie's bigotry is displayed weekly on the top-rated All in the Family, but it gets a new twist when Davis plays himself on the CBS television show.

Producer Norman Lear broke his own rule against guest stars to allow the appearance of Davis, who says he's one of the show's biggest fans.

"The comedy and the way it attacks prejudice really appeals to me," Davis said Thursday.

"But we haven't seen Archie in contact with a black celebrity. He fawned all over me in the show but his prejudice still comes through."

In the episode, Davis forgets his briefcase while riding in a cab driven by Archie as a moonlighting job. As Archie excitedly tells his family of driving a celebrity, he calls Davis "the ace of spades."

He says: "He was just like a regular person. If it wasn't for the rear-view mirror, I'd have thought it was a white guy."

Davis roared as the show kidded his blackness, his glass eye and his conversion to Judaism, but the cleverly rebutted Archie and the ending drew a 38-second ovation.

It's All Over For Steppenwolf

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Steppenwolf, a leading hard rock band and one of the first pop music groups to do an anti-drug number, announced its retirement Monday.

The five-man group, which began in Toronto as The Sparrows, was known for its loud, heavy-beat style.

"We were locked into an image and a style of music, and there simply was nothing new for us to look forward to," said leader John Kay.

"We all became convinced that there were other things we wanted to do and we couldn't do them as Steppenwolf."

"Audiences came for the hard, raunchy stuff and it just got harder trying to avoid a label of a redundancy in our music," said Goldy McJohn.

"We're still friends," said Jerry Edmonton, another member of the group.

Since 1968, the group sold $40 million worth of records, including eight million-selling albums and three gold singles, and took in more than $7 million in personal appearance fees.

WHO OWNS THE SEA? Canadian actor Gordon Pinsent visits picturesque Peggy's Cove, N.S., with the wreckage of the freighter Hulda in the background in this scene from Who Owns the Sea?, a 90-minute CBC White Paper documentary to be colorcast on CBC television Tuesday, February 29, at 9:30 p.m. The program examines the importance of the sea to Canada and the complex but increasingly significant issue of ownership of coastal waters and the riches they contain.

Talk Show Host Star in U.K.

By LOUISE COOK

LONDON (AP) — "A recent illustration in the Sunday Times magazine portrayed Michael Parkinson in crown and robes, seated on a throne, with a long line of people grovelling at his feet.

The illustration isn't strictly accurate, since Parkinson is a perfectly polite human being, pleased, but not overwhelmed, by his success as a television celebrity.

"It's very good in restaurants," he says of the public recognition he gets as a result of his Sunday late-night talk show — the only such program in London. The weekly show reaches four million homes.

Parkinson, 37, is a coal miner's son who went to work as a newspaper reporter at the age of 15. He continued his newspaper career until 10 years ago when he first went into television as a producer.

Why did he switch from behind to in front of the cameras?

"The money was in performing," he said in an interview, pausing to sip some dry white wine and puff on a tiny, dark cigar.

"I saw no point in working seven days as a producer to earn what I could earn in one as a performer," he added.

LIKES MONEY

Parkinson is still concerned about money. He is paid nearly $40,000 a year by the British Broadcasting Corp. and when asked how he feels about his working-class background and lack of a university education, he replied simply: "I only have one obsession, I don't get enough money."

The BBC talk show isn't Parkinson's only source of income. With his wife Mary, he is host two days a week of an afternoon interview program for women in ITV, the commercial television network; he writes a sports column for The Sunday Times; and he does a weekly radio program.

But it is the talk show that has brought Parkinson the greatest public success.

Taped at the BBC Television Centre in West London, it bears a striking resemblance in format to an American talk show.

The studio audience gathers about half an hour before the taping begins; the on-stage, off-camera band warms up; one of the show's staff delivers a brief speech, tells a few jokes and asks everyone to applaud at a given sign.

JOURNALIST FIRST

Parkinson opens the show with a topical monologue which, he said, "I do ... as much to settle me and the audience as for effect."

He stressed that he is not an entertainer, but a journalist, and thinks it is this quality that has made him successful where earlier talk show hosts in London failed.

"I get the idea that the earlier ones weren't really interested in their guests. I would be very bad with someone who didn't interest me."

By LAWRENCE LAURENT
 WASHINGTON (WP) — Television has become a blessing for the person in love with feature motion pictures. All a person needs, along with a TV set, is unlimited time and a lot of patience. It helps, also, to have asbestos eyeballs.

A lot of time is needed to see all the movies that are telecast in a single week. Washington's seven TV stations, for example, offer 82 feature films in an average week. The number will go above 90 movies when sports telecasts aren't available to fill weekend hours.

Also available for most of the Washington audience are the movies being telecast by four stations in Baltimore. The 17 movies that come each week from three TV networks are usually carried simultaneously in Washington and in Baltimore. This still leaves an additional 52 unduplicated movies.

All of which should be an immediate explanation for what has been happening to attendance at motion picture theatres. The exhibitors point in pain to the descending number of people who buy tickets each week to go to the nation's movie houses: about 75 million in 1947; down to about 25 million in the 1960s, and dropping to about 17 million in 1971.

MYSTERIOUS ART

Executives at local stations will talk about the mysterious art of film buying and film scheduling, but none wishes a competitor to know his pricing or his views.

All agree that movies can be rented one at a time but this isn't usual. Nor is it really practical. The film distributors usually offer "packages," collections of movies that have played theatres or the networks. A package may have as few as seven or as many as 1,000 films. The larger the number of movies a station buys, the cheaper will be the price for each film.

Station executives are unanimous, also, that the film distributor can be expected to mix "block busters, average movies and dogs" into one package.

"After you've bought movies for awhile," one said, "You know what to expect. And if a film salesman has a package of, say, 50 features, you know how they'll break down. About 10 of them will be top quality, have demonstrated big audience appeal, with top stars and even top awards. About 30 of the package will be average movies, and about 10 of them will be dogs, pictures that lack brand name stars or fail to attract good audiences in the theatres or on the network."

Said another: "It's a game. The film package salesmen know that stations compete for the best movies. But he also knows that each time a station declines to buy, the value of the package drops."

"He says: 'Average them out' and I guess that's what most of us do." The price of the film packages vary widely, but one official guessed that "a decent feature" will cost a station "between $1,500 and $4,000 and this will give the station the right to telecast the film "once a year for five years."

SCHEDULE PROBLEMS

Then there's the matter of "film inventory," meaning the total number of features that the station has bought. One guessed that "to be competitive" a station needs an inventory of "600 to 800 titles. This means an investment of several millions of dollars."

This doesn't mean, however, that the cans of all the films are stored, physically, at the station. One station buys its own print if the film is in color. If the film is black-and-white, it is routed from city to city, usually railway express or air express.

Shipping film is called "bi-cycling" and it leads to endless problems. A film that has been scheduled, listed in daily and Sunday newspaper supplements, an even been advertised, may fail to arrive. Then, a substitute must be made. And viewers begin complaining, to the newspapers and to the station.

Other headaches accompany the use of a film circuit.

Said one program director: "We've received the right movie, only it was one made for France and all the dialogue was in French."

Last minute substitution must be made also if the movie arrives and is "out of synch," meaning that the sound is not synchronized with the action. Or a reel of film may have been heavily edited at another station and the cut material wasn't restored before shipment. Equally bad, an inept technician may have "streaked" the film, meaning that its emulsion has been scratched, blurring the image.

Movie do have an indefinite life. They are sold, recovered and often regrouped into another set of packages. The second time around, the price usually drops. Some movies are being played for the 30th time in Washington, particularly westerns that do not deteriorate in appeal because of a timeless setting.

Sandy Just Wants Quiet, 'Uneventful' Year

By MARILYN BECK

One year ago Sandy Duncan was a newcomer in town, unsure of herself and of her talents.

As preproduction commenced on her CBS Funny Face series, she was concerned that she might not justify industry expectations, was fearful that she would not live up to pre-season build-up and successfully carry the load of a continuing show on her inexperienced shoulders.

Twelve months later, she's dramatically demonstrated that she's been capable of all that — and so much more.

She became the one scintillating star of a video season which saw the popularity of even established luminaries sputter and die.

Her favor with fans has been magic enough to keep high in the ratings a series riddled by production difficulties and mediocre writing.

Her personal fortitude has proven great enough to enable her to overcome the grief of a broken marriage, the tragedy of brain surgery and the subsequent loss of sight in one eye.

Now, after having succeeding at such tests few are ever subjected to, Sandy Duncan wants nothing more than "an uneventful year!"

SYMPTOMS DISGUISED

She's anxious to return to the Funny Face cameras, excited that, "We're going to be filming before a live audience this year. Which means we'll be rehearsing each episode like a play, filming scenes in continuity. And I'm hopeful that will make for some better shows!"

"It will be so nice to go to work and know I'm doing something I can enjoy, that I'm proud of. It will be a delight!"

Last season, anxieties and pressures stemming from unhappiness over the quality of the series were responsible for disguising the physical symptoms which would eventually prove she was suffering from a brain-tumor.

"The first time I checked into the hospital in August, I told the doctors it was all psychological. My intense headaches, the constant repression that would make me snappish and irritable. I just knew it was all due to series' tensions.

"And I must tell you that it was actually a relief to find out in November that here was something physically wrong with me that could be cured."

She's shown an amazingly fast recuperation from the brain surgery, but confessed, "There are still times when I have sinking spells. One day I feel great, the next day I'd just as soon not get out of bed. Doctors tell me it takes about eight or nine months before the ups-and-downs completely fade away."

It's difficult to believe, as she outlines her currently busy life, that there are ever down moments for Sandy Duncan.

PIXIE-FACED NO LONGER

Her smile isn't as ingenuously brilliant as it was a year ago, perhaps. And she no longer twists her features into that pixie-faced mug her fans find so endearing.

But her attitude on life! It's as zesty as it ever was. Neither the professional victories nor the personal tragedies of the past year have altered that.

"I'm still undergoing therapy for my eye," she said, as she relaxed in her tasteful, Early American furnished home above the Sunset Strip.

Sandy: not all fun.

"When I get tired, my left eye — the one I've lost my sight in — has the tendency to roam. But it really isn't anything to make a big deal about."

She's been filling these weeks of pre-season Funny Face activities with guest star appearances on such shows as Laugh-In and Sonny and Cher.

And, so great has become her popularity, she's been asked to be a presented at the Tony Awards in New York and at the Oscar and Emmy fests here.

She also bicycling, attending dance classes. And dating a lot. Regarding the crumbling of her marriage to rock performer Bruce Scott, she explained philosophically, "Our problem was that we married in the first place."

"You know me and my small town, Tyler, Texas, background. I never could go for that, fall-in-love, share-a-bed routine."

"You met a guy, you married. And once that marriage took place, you simply had to make it work!"

"Well, I decided it was better for Bruce and me to call it off before we had children."

"I simply made a mistake in the choice of the man I want to grow to be 60 years old with."

Sandy, who points out that her small-town-values have remained intact, says she's still marriage-minded.

"But I'll be in no hurry next time to settle down. I'll want to make sure I've found the right guy."

She's already sure about one thing: "I'll never marry anyone in show business again. Absolutely never!"

LOOKING FOR STABILITY

"I'm looking for a stability in a mate that I don't think exists around this town."

She's had a year to observe this town first hand, to judge its values, to sample its fame. And her experiences have led her to the conclusion she's not that sold on acting as a lifetime occupation.

"I think, after four or five years of a series, I'll be able to tell myself, 'That's been nice. Now let's get on with real living. There's so much more in this world beside the frivolous that is part of show business."

"I love it. It's been fun. But I'd like to know I'm capable of more; of a successful marriage, children, a broadening of interests."

With the various industry demands currently upon her, there should be plenty to keep her interests occupied for the time being.

"I'm doing my own special," she reminded me, then told me: "And several of the hotels in Las Vegas want me to star in a night-club show. I'm not sure about a club act, though. May be next year. If I could be sure that act was good."

She's also taking her time in selecting her next-big-screen vehicle.

The two films she's thus far starred in ($1,111,000 Duck and Star Spangled Girl) both received critical pans and, she made it clear, "I want to make certain — before I make another commitment — that the third time out is the charm."

She's being pushed and pulled by an industry anxious to capitalize on the appeal of pixie-faced Sandy Duncan.

But she's doing an admirable job of fending off approaches that will steer her in a direction she doesn't desire.

"After all that's happened to me," she explained with a soft smile that makes her look for an instant much older than her 26 years, "Do you blame me for wanting no more right now than a nice routine life?"

"Even boredom, for a little while, would seem very appealing."

But She's Starting Fast...

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Sandy Duncan has been named Woman of the Year by the Hollywood Radio and Television Society.

Miss Duncan starred in one of the hits of the television season, Funny Face, until the show was forced off the air after 13 episodes when she came down with an eye inflammation. She underwent surgery for a benign tumor, which left her blind in her left eye. CBS has announced that she will resume work in the spring and the series will return to the air next fall.

The award will be presented to her at a dinner March 21, at which the society will also give awards to radio and television commercials, said the society's president, Farlan I. Myers.

He said the choice of Miss Duncan for the award was particularly appropriate since she broke into television in a series of commercials, portraying a harassed but resourceful bank teller.

The award is usually made to television's Man of the Year, and has gone in the past to Flip Wilson, Dan Rowan and Dick Martin and Bob Hope. Miss Duncan becomes the second woman to win it. Carol Burnett was the first.

CBC, NET Collaborate on 'Tales'

Producer Peter Kelly of CBC Toronto heads up a major 90-minute drama-documentary about two arctic explorers, tentatively entitled Two Arctic Tales, to be produced by CBC in co-operation with National Educational Television in the U.S.

Two Arctic Tales will be narrated by distinguished Canadian-born actor Raymond Massey, whose last collaboration with producer Kelly was as narrator of And We Were Young. CBC-TV's widely acclaimed 1968 documentary chronicling Canada's role in the First World War.

Franz Russell will head a cast of about 25 professional actors and some 45 Eskimos in a dramatized film documentary tracing the fascinating careers of two 19th century arctic explorers — Englishman Sir John Franklin who led a grand-scale expedition in search of the Northwest Passage in 1845, and American Charles Francis Hall who led several unsuccessful arctic expeditions in the belief he was ordained by God to discover the remains of the Franklin party, and to place the U.S. flag at the North Pole.

DIVERSE LOCALES

Script for the 90-minute program — which is being financed by CBC and NET but produced by the CBC — is by Hugh Kemp, based on the book Weird and Tragic Stories, by Prof. Chauncey C. Looms. Cameraman is Ed Long, film editor is Paul Nickolich and original music is composed and directed by Lucio Agostini.

Extensive filming already has been done in such diverse locales as Cincinnati, Dartmouth, N.H., Pittsfield, Mass., the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C., Mystic Seaport, Conn., and the National Archives in Washington. Further archival shooting is scheduled for Greenwich, England, and the Scott Polar Institute at Cambridge.

In-studio shooting began last fall at CBC Studio 7 in Toronto.

The CBC program will combine elements of romance, high adventure and mystery. Franklin's well-financed but ill-fated expedition perished in the arctic with no traces and Hall, after several unsuccessful attempts to find the remains of the Franklin project, himself perished in the high arctic under mysterious circumstances just 100 years ago. The recent exhumation of Hall's body has added a further aura of mystery to the tragic circumstances surrounding his death.

'Death Goddess' Award Winner

A Japanese comic opera for television, winner of the 1971 Honor Prize at the international Salzburg TV Opera festival, will be presented on CBC-TV's World of Music, Sunday, Feb. 27, at 3 p.m. (in color).

The Death Goddess is based on a story from the Japanese vaudeville art known as "rakugo" monologues; it was originally taken from the Grimm Brothers tale, Godfather Death. The "rakugo" monologue by Encho Sanyutei has been updated to modern times in the TV script by Shohhei Imamura, set to music by the contemporary Japanese composer Shinichiro Ikebe.

The opera is sung in Japanese, but for the English-speaking market, sub-titles have been added.

The story concerns an undertaker in a lower class neighborhood, who has married into his wife's family business. The marriage is unhappy, and Hayakawa (the undertaker) is henpecked and impotent.

Viet Documentary Sold to U.S. Network

TORONTO (CP) — The CBC has sold a color documentary on the child victims of the Vietnam war to NBC in the United States, the divisional head of the CBC's foreign relations and export sales announced Tuesday.

A. H. Partridge said the program, The Gooks, will be telecast Feb. 25 as the major segment of an NBC public affairs program. It was shown Jan. 11 on CBC's Tuesday night television series.

The documentary was a co-production of the CBC and Children's Medical Relief International. It focuses on the tragedy of children mutilated by war, and the work of doctors and staff at the Centre for Plastic and Reconstructive Surgery in Saigon.

Role as Second-Banana Still Good for the Ego

By RICHARD K. SHULL

When it comes to ego-building, there's nothing quite like having a major part in the only show in town.

That's the kind of fame and fun James MacArthur enjoys these days as the second banana in the highly successful CBS television series, "Hawaii Five-O."

MacArthur, the 34-year-old son of Helen Hayes and the late playwright Charles MacArthur, is happily settled in a condominium apartment beneath Diamond Head overlooking the Pacific on Oahu.

And it doesn't bother him that a glance over his right shoulder at home would reveal a panorama or rampant commercialization and exploitation known as Waikiki.

"There's one belt of hotels," MacArthur said in defence of his new state, "but the rest of Hawaii is beautiful."

HAWAII MODERN

"Some people say Hawaii is spoiled, but I don't think so. It's modern. It's a part of today's world. I guess they want the natives to live in grass shacks. Well, the natives want washing machines and refrigerators and TV sets the same as anyone else. They don't want to be quaint any more," he said.

MacArthur was talking in New York, where he'd stopped over after a quickie trip to Europe during a break in production for the show. That's why he was talking.

In Hawaii, it's no secret in the trade, the star of the show, Jack Lord, who has an ego big as the whole blue Pacific, does all the talking for "Hawaii Five-O."

In Hawaii, "Hawaii Five-O" is an immensely popular show and anyone connected with it is some kind of folk hero. The program gets about 80 per cent of the available audience during its weekly hour. Much of that is curiosity, since the program is filmed entirely in the islands with scenery and people familiar to residents of Hawaii.

MacArthur's part in the show is no big thing. Lord is THE star and for the most part, MacArthur contents himself with saying variations of "What will we do now, chief?"

He sidelines with a partnership in a travel company which features tours of the islands and the Oahu night-life.

MacArthur has been in Hawaii for four years now. At first, he admitted, he had claustrophobia — a common ailment among mainlanders who move there — but after a while you get used to it. And after four years, I thoroughly enjoy Hawaii and the success of the show.

So how does he explain the success of "Hawaii Five-O," which, after all, is basically a potboiler detective show?

"Once you're a winner, you can give all sorts of reasons why you're a winner. Of course, you could give all those same reasons to explain why a show fails," he replied, indicating one doesn't ask questions, one enjoys.

Among other things, he said, "Hawaii Five-O" now is distributed in 40 foreign countries. In Europe he discovered he had fans he wasn't aware existed.

Tower in Mecca

A Look at Forbidden City

The color film special, Mecca — The Forbidden City, a CBC-TV feature on the holy city of the Muslims, will be shown at 8 p.m. March 3.

The annual pilgrimage of Muslims to Mecca is one of the world's greatest religious observances, but non-Muslims have little idea of what it is really like, because they are not allowed to enter the precincts of Mecca. This hour-long special is the first complete record of this ancient, but still vital expression of religious faith and will bring viewers the unique privilege of witnessing the most important event in the life of every Muslim.

The film meets the pilgrims at the port of Jiddah, the Gateway to Mecca, and follows them every step of the pilgrimage.

The film also shows the Masjid-el-Harma, the great Mosque of Mecca and the sacred Kaaba, the House of God, which is the heart of Mecca and the Muslim world.

Medina, the second city of the Muslim world, Mohammed's tomb and the decorative art of Islam are also shown.

ACCIDENTS STRIKE OUTSIDE CANADA!

Now, during this Open Enrollment, you can enroll yourself and every member of your family in this exciting new plan that pays all this tax-free cash direct to you—and it's so simple to enroll it takes only a minute. There are no lengthy investigations or red tape. There's no medical exam and you don't have to answer a single health question. You don't even have to see a salesman. Right now, you cannot be turned down—regardless of your age, your health or your occupation. What's more, if you act today you get your first month's protection for a mere 25¢!

Why you need this remarkable plan!

Here's a sobering thought: Thousands of Canadian families will have someone in hospital this year! But, even more startling is the fact that many thousands more of all people earning a living—men and women, like yourself—will be laid up in hospital or at home for at least six months during their working years!

When accident or illness strikes, we Canadians are fortunate to have provincial health insurance to cover basic hospital, medical and surgical needs. But, if you're laid up in hospital, consider the "extra care" you'll want—and will have to pay for yourself!

You'll pay extra for a private or semi-private room...you'll pay extra for private nursing at home...you'll pay extra for diagnostic tests, drugs and special therapy at home—you may even pay extra for ambulance service! This means taking hard-earned cash out of your own pocket to help pay for all or part of every one of these services. And, these additional bills can run into hundreds, maybe thousands, of dollars. At a time like this, when you're sick or injured, when you're off the job and unsure of the future, when you need to hold on to every last penny, these extra bills put a severe financial strain on you and the security of your family!

How this new Extra Care Plan pays you tax-free cash these 5 ways!

Tax-free cash for extra hospital and medically-necessary expenses—Collect as much as $300.00 a month for yourself, $300.00 a month for your wife and $300.00 a month for each child when accident or illness puts you or any covered member of your family in hospital! You collect as much as $10.00 a day in tax-free cash, paid direct to you, for costs of private or semi-private care, and for reasonable and necessary hospital and medically-required, out-of-pocket expenses.

Tax-free cash for home nursing care—Collect as much as $300.00 for each and every covered member of your family when your doctor feels the care of a nurse (V.O.N. nurse, for example) is needed to recuperate at home after hospital! Every day you or any covered family member spend in hospital entitles you to $10.00 a day for home nursing care—and you can collect for as long as 30 days!

Important Extra—If you are unable to secure a nurse, this plan, unlike many others, pays you as much as $300.00 for yourself or $300.00 for your wife when your doctor says you need a housekeeper—other than a family member—to keep your home running smoothly while you recuperate after hospital! Every day you spend in hospital entitles you to $10.00 a day for a housekeeper—and you can collect for as long as 30 days! Children, of course, are not covered for this.

Tax-free cash for drugs, medicines, wheelchair rental and oxygen—Collect as much as $175.00 for each and every covered family member to help meet necessary expenses not covered by your provincial insurance when sudden accidents strike! Regardless of where you're treated—in a hospital, a clinic, your doctor's office, even your own home—you can collect as much as $100.00 for prescribed drugs and medicines dispensed by a licensed pharmacist, as much as $50.00 for wheelchair rental and as much as $25.00 for oxygen and its administration—as much as $175.00 in all each time you have an accident!

Tax-free cash for ambulance service, night or day—Collect as much as $25.00 for each and every covered family member to help meet expenses not covered by your provincial insurance when you require ambulance service to or from hospital—day or night, 24 hours a day!

You're protected for accident—whenever or wherever it happens—anywhere in the world!

The dangers from accidents know no borders. That's why your new Extra Care Plan pays you or any covered member of your family tax-free cash whenever and wherever accident strikes! You collect anywhere in the world—as much as $300.00 a month (up to $10.00 a day) for private or semi-private care and reasonable and medically-necessary out-of-pocket expenses in hospital not paid for by a foreign health plan or your provincial insurance!

What's more, you collect as much as $100.00 for prescribed drugs and medicines dispensed by a licensed pharmacist, $50.00 for wheelchair rental, $25.00 for oxygen and its administration and $25.00 for ambulance service to help cover these expenses where not paid by a foreign health plan or your provincial insurance—up to $200.00 in all!

And—when you get back home to Canada—after you've been hospitalized in another country, you're eligible for the same home nursing and housekeeper benefits you'd be eligible to collect if you'd been hospitalized here at home!

Extra protection you need, at a rate you can afford!

Doing business directly with you, enrolling thousands of people every year reduces our overhead costs, lowers our payroll, underwriting and policy issue costs. Without salesmen, interviews, investigations, or examinations, our friendly, direct way of doing business reduces "sales costs"—one of the largest items of expense for all insurance companies—so we can give you the valuable protection you need at a payment you can afford!

This new Extra Care Plan protects you and every covered member of your family for any accident or sickness except those caused by pregnancy or any consequences thereof, acts of war, military service, nervous or mental disorders, suicide or attempted suicide, alcoholism, drugs or self-inflicted injury. Pre-existing conditions—conditions that come back again and again—are covered after just two short years.

We even pay your premiums after prolonged accident or illness!

That's right. If you're hospitalized for eight consecutive weeks, Laurier Life pays all your premiums that come due afterwards while in hospital. Your protection—and your family's protection—continues just as if you had paid your premiums yourself!
